tes, and myne ende is turned to corrup cyon, and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakyng these wordes, he cam vnto me, and loked vpon me, & I laye as one that had ben dead, and myne vn derstandynge was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and conforted me, and set me vp vpon my fete, & sayd vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thyne vnderstandynge vexed? and the vnderstandynge of thy harte, & wher= fore arte thou sory? And I sayd: Be= cause thou hast forsakē me: and I haue done * accordynge vnto thy wordes, I 4.Es.9.a. wente into the felde, and there haue I sene a thynge, that I am not able to ex presse. He sayd vnto me: Stonde vp & be manly, and I shall geue the exorta= cyon.
Then sayd I: Speake vnto me D my LORDE, forsake me not, lest I dye in vayne: for I haue sene ye I knew not, and herde that I do not knowe.
Or shall myn vnderstandyng be decea= ued, and my mynde? But now I beseche the, that thou wylt shewe thy seruaūt of this wonder. He answered me then, and sayd: Heare me, & I shal enfourme the, and tell the wherfore thou arte a= fraied, for the hyghest hath opened ma ny secrete thynges vnto the.
He hath sene that thy way is right and that thou takest sorow cōtinually for thy people, and makest great lamē= tacyon for Syon: and therfore vnder= stande the vysion which thou sawest a lytle whyle ago after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mournynge, & thou hast comforted her: Neuertheles now seist thou the lykenes of the womā nomore, but thou thoughtest ther was a cytie buylded: and lyke as she tolde ye of the fall of hir sonne, so is this the an swere: The womā whom thou sawest is Syon: and where as she tolde the, ye she hath ben thyrtye yeares vnfruteful and baren, those are the thyrtye yeares wherin ther was no offerynge made in her.
But after thyrtye yeares Salomō buylded her, and offred, and then bare the baren a sonne. And where as she tolde the, that she noryshed hym with laboure, that was the dwellyng of Je rusalem. But where as the sonne dyed in hir chamber, that is the fall of Jeru= salem. And thou sawest hir lykenesse, E how she mourned for hir sōne: & what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And now God seyth, that thou art sory in thy mynde, and suffrest frō thy hart for her, and so hath he shewed the hir clearnesse, and the fayrnesse of hyr bewtye.
And therfore I bad the remayne in the feld, where no house is buylded.
For I knew that ye highest wold shew this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to go in the felde, where no founda= cyon nor buyldynge is. For in the place where the Hyghest wyll shewe his cy= tie, ther shalbe no mans buyldynge.
And therfore fear not, and let not thine hart be afrayed, but go thy waye in, & se the glorious and fayre buyldynge, & how great is it, & how great thou thin kest it after the measure of thyne eyes, and then shalt thou heare as muche as thyne eares maye comprehende. For thou art blessed aboue many other, and art called with the Hyghest, as ye fewe.
But to morowe at nyght thou shalt re mayne here, and so shall the Hyghest shew y vysyone of hys thynges which he wyll do vnto them that dwell vpon earthe in the laste dayes. So I slepte the same nyghte, lyke as he commaun= ded me.

The.xi.Chapter.

¶ Of certayne vysyons and the inter pretacyons thereof.

A Then sawe I a dreame: and beholde, ther came vp frō the see an aegle, whiche had.xii. wynges, and thre heades. And I sawe, and beholde, he spredde hys wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blewe in them, and so they were put together agayne. And I behelde, and oute of hys fethers ther grewe o= ther lytle contrary fethers: the heades rested. The head in the myddeste was greater thē the other, yet rested it with the residue.

Moreouer I sawe, that the aegle flewe wyth hys wynges, and raygned vpon earthe, and ouer all them that dwell vpon the earth: and I sawe that all thynges vnder heauen were sub= iect vnto hym, & no man spake against hym, no not one creature vpon y earth I sawe also that the aegle stode vp v= pon hys clawes, and gaue a sounde wt hys fethers, and a voyce sayenge after thys maner: watche not altogether, slepe euerye man in hys owne place, and watch for a tyme, but let the hea= des be preserued at the laste. Neuerthe lesse I sawe, that the voyce wente not oute of hys heades, but from the myd= B deste of hys body. And I nombred hys contrarye fethers, and beholde, ther were eyghte of them. And I loked, and beholde, vpon the ryghtesyde ther a= * rose one fether, and raygned ouer all the earth. And it happened, that whan it raygned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared nomore. So the nexte folowyng stode vp, and raygned and had a greate tyme: and it happe= ned, that whan it raygned, the ende of it came also lyke as the fyrste so that it appeared nomore.

Then came ther a voyce vnto it, and sayde: Heare thou that haste kepte the earthe so longe, thys I saye vn= to the, before thou begynneste to ap= peare nomore: Ther shall none after the atteyne vnto thy tyme, no not half the tyme. Then arose the thyrde, and rayned as the other afore, and appea= red nomore also. So wente it wyth all the residue one after another, so that euerye one raygned, and then appea= red nomore. Then I loked and, behold in processe of tyme the fethers that fo= lowed were set vp vpon y ryghtesyde, that they myghte rule also: and some of them ruled, but wythyn a whyle they appeared nomor: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After thys C I loked, and beholde, the.xii. fethers appeared nomore, and the two wyn= ges: and ther was nomore vpon the aegles bodye, but two heades that re= sted, and syxe fethers. Then sawe I al so, that the syxe fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder the heade, that was vpon the ryghte syde, for the foure continued in theyr place. So I loked and beholde, they that were vn= der the wynges, thoughte to set vp thē selues, and to haue the rule. Thē was ther one set vp, but shortlye it appea= red nomore, and the seconde were soo= ner awaye then the fyrste. And I be= helde, and lo, the two thoughte also by them selues to rayne: and whan they so thoughte beholde, ther waked one of the heades that were at reste, name= lye, it that was in the myddeste: for that was the greater of the two hea= des. And then I sawe, that the two heades were fylled wyth hym, and the heade was turned wyth them that were by hym, and dyd eate vp the vnder wynges, that wolde haue rayg= ned.

But thys heade put the whole D earthe in feare, and bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwelte vpon earthe with muche laboure, and he had the gouer= naunce of the worlde, ouer all the fou= les that haue ben. After thys I loked, and beholde, the heade that was in the myddeste, sodenlye appeared nomore, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heades, whiche ruled vpon earthe, and ouer those that dwelte therein. And I behelde, and lo, the heade vpon the ryghtesyde, deuoured it that was vp= pon the leftesyde. And I herde a voyce, whiche sayde vnto me: loke before the,
and consydre the thynge that thou seyste. Then I sawe, and beholde, as it were a lyon that roareth, runnynge haystelye out of the wood, and he sent oute a mans voyce vnto the aegle, and sayde: Heare thou, I wyll talke wyth the, & ye hyghest shall saye vnto ye: It is not thou that haste the victorye of the foure beastes, whom I made to raygn vpon earth, and in my world, and that the ende of theyr tymes myghte come thorowe them?

And the fourthe came, and ouer-C wan al the beastes that were past, and had power ouer the world wyth great fearfulnesse, and ouer the whole compasse of the earth, wyth the moost wic ked laboure, and so longe tyme dwelte he vpon the earthe wyth deceate, and the earth haste thou iudged not wyth treuthe. For thou haste troubled the meke, thou haste hurte the Peaceable, and quiete, thou haste loued lyers, and destroyed the dwellynges of them that broughte forthe frute, and haste caste downe the walles of suche as dyd the the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongeous dealynge, and blasphemye come vp vnto the hyghest, and thy pride vn to the myghtye. The hyghest also hath loked vpon the proude tymes, and be-holde they are ended, and theyre abhominacyons are fulfylled. And therfore appeare nomor thou aegle, and thy hor rible wynges, and thy wycked fethers and thy vngracious heades, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy vayne body: that the earthe maye be refreshed, and come agayne to herselfe, whan she is delyuered from thy violence, and that she maye hope for the iudgement, and mercye of hym that made her.

The.xii.Chapter.

Of certayne visyons and the interpretacyon therof.

a AND it happened whan ye Lyon spake these wordes vnto the aegle, I saw and behold, the head that afore had the vpperhande appea red nomore: nother dyd the foure wyn ges appeare onye more, that came to hym, and were set vp to raygne, and theyr kyngdome was small, and full of vproure.

And I sawe, and beholde, they ap peared nomore, and the whole body of the aegle was brente, and the earthe was in greate feare. Then awaked I out of the traunce of my mynde, and from greate feare, and sayde vnto my spret: Lo, thys haste thou geuen me, in that thou searcheste oute the wayes of the hygheste: lo, yet am I werey in my mynde, and verye weake in my spret, and lytle strength is ther in me, for the greate feare yt I receaued thys nyghte. Therfore wyll I nowe beseke the hygheste, that he wyll comforte me vnto the ende, and I sayde: LORDE LORDE, yf I haue founde grace before thy syghte, and I am iustifyed wt the before many other, and yf my pray b er be come vp before thy face comforte me then, and shew thy seruaunt the interpretacyon and playne difference of thys horrible syghte, that thou mayest perfectlye comforte my soule: for thou haste iudged me worthye, to shewe me the laste of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: thys is the interpretacyon of this syghte. The aegle whom thou saweste come vp from the see, is the kyngdome whiche was sene * in the visyon of thy brother Da niell, but it was not expounded vnto Dan.7 him, for now I declare it vnto the.

Beholde, the daies come that ther shall ryse vp a kyngdome vpon earth, and it shall be feared aboue all ye kyng domes that were before it. In the same kyngdome shall .xii. kynges raygn, one after another. For the seconde shal be-gynne to raygne, and shall haue more tyme then the other, and thys do the .xii. wynges signifye, which thou saweste.
As for the voyce that spake, and that c thou saweste go oute from the heades (but not from the body,) it betokeneth that after the tyme of that kyngdome, ther shall aryse greate stryuynges, and it shall stonde in parell of fallynge: ne-uertheles it shal not yet fal, but shalbe set in to hys begynnyng. And the eyght vnderwynges which thou sawest hãg vnto ye winges of him, betoken, that in hym there shall aryse eyght kynges, whose tyme shalbe but smal, and theyr yeares swyfte, and two of them shall peare. But whan the myddeste tyme commeth, ther shalbe foure kepte in ye tyme, whan hys tyme begynneth to come that it maye be ended, but two shalbe kept vnto the ende.

And where as thou saweste the heades restynge, thys is the interpreta cyon. In hys last shall the hygheste ray se vp thre kyngdomes, and calle many agayne in to them, and they shall haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwell therein, wyth much labour aboue al those that were before them. Therfore are they called the heades of the aegle: for it is they that shall brynge forthe hys wyckednesse agayne, and that shall perfourme, and fynyshe hys laste. And where as thou sawest, that the greate heade appeared nomore, it sygnyfyeth, that one of them shall dye vpon hys bedde, and yet wyth payne, for the two that remayne, shalbe slayn wyth the swearde. For the swearde of the one shall deuoure the other, but at the laste shall he fall thorow ÿ sweard hymselfe.

D And where as thou sawest two vnderwynges vpon the heade, that is on the ryghte syde, it sygnifyeth, that it is they, whome the hyghest hathe kepte vnto theyr ende: thys is a small kyngdome, and full of trouble. The Lyon whome thou sawest rysynge vp oute of the wood, and roarynge, and speakynge vnto the aegle, and rebukynge hym for hys vnryghteousnesse, is the wynde, whiche the hyghest hath kepte for them, and for th[illegible] wyckednesse vnto the ende: he [illegible] all reproue them, and rente them asunder before the. For he shal set them lyuyng before the iudgemente, and shal rebuke them: for the resydue of my people shall he delyuer wyth trouble, those that be preserued ater myne endes: and he shall make them ioyfull vntyll the commynge, of the day of iudgement, wher of I haue spoken vnto the from the begynnynge. Thys is the dreame that thou sawest, and thys is the interpretacyon. Thou onelye haste bene mete to knowe the secrete, of the Hyghest.

Therfore wryte all these thynges that thou hast sene in a boke, and hyde them, and teache them the wyse in the people, whose hartes thou knowest maye comprehende and kepe the secretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes moo, that it maye be shewed the, whatsoeuer it pleaseth the Hyghest to declare vnto the, & wyth that he wente hys waye.

E And whan all the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes were paste, and I not come agayne in to the cytie, they gathered them altogether from the leaste vnto the moost, and came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the? and what euell haue we done agaynste the, that thou forsakeste vs, & syttest here in thys place? For of all people thou onelye arte lefte vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a candell in a darke place, and as an hauen, and a shyppe preserued from the tempeste. Haue we not els aduersyte ynoughe, but thou muste forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we hadde bene brent wyth Syon? For we are no better, then they that dyed there and they wepte wyth loude voyce. Then answered I them and sayde: Be of good comforte O Israell, and be not heuye thou house of Iacob: for the Hyghest hath you in remembraunce, and the myghtye hath not forgotten you in temptacyon. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, nother am I departed from you: but am come in to hys place to praye, because of the myserye of Israell, that I myghte seke mercye for the lowe estate of youre Sanctuarye. And nowe go your waye home euerye man, and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people wente theyr waye in to the cytye lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned styll in the felde seuen dayes, as the angell bad me, and I ate onelye of the floures of the felde and hadde my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

A AND it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by nyghte. And beholde, ther arose a wynde from the see, that moued all the floudes therof. And I loked, and beholde, the man was strōg and increased wyth the cloudes of heauen: and whan he turned hys countenaunce to consyder, all the thynges trembled that were sene vnder hym: and whan the voyce wente out of hys mouth, all they brente that herde hym, lyke as the earthe whan it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, ther gathered together a multytude of men oute of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heauē, to fyght agaynst the man, that came oute from the see. And I loked, and beholde, he graued hymselfe a greate mountayne, and flewe vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, whereout the hyll was grauen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that all they whiche came to fyghte agaynste hym, were sore afrayed, and yet durste they fyghte. Neuerthelesse whan he sawe the fearcenesse and violence of the peo ple, he nother lyfte vp hys hande, nor helde sweard, nor ony weapen: but on ly (as I sawe) he sent out of his mouth as it had bene a blaste of fyre, and oute of hys lyppes the wynd of the flamme: and oute of hys tung he caste out spar kes and stormes, & they were al myxte together: blaste of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, and the greate storm, and fell wyth a rushe vpon the people, whiche was prepared to fyghte, and brente them vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multytude ther was nothynge sene, but onely duste and smoke. Whan I sawe thys, I was a-frayed.
B Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayn, and callynge vnto hym another peaceable people: and ther came muche people vnto hym: some were glad some were sorye, some of them were bounde, so that they were caryed and broughte forthe.
Then was I sycke thorow greate feare, and I waked, and sayde: thou haste shewed thy seruaunte al thy won ders from the begynnynge, and haste counted me worthye, that thou mygheteste receaue my prayer: shewe me now yet the interpretacyon of thys dreame.
For thus I consydre in my vnderston dynge: Wo vnto them that shall be lefte in those dayes, and muche more wo vnto them that are not lefte behynd: for they that were not left, were in heuynesse.
Nowe vnderstonde I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes, whiche shal happen vnto them, and to those that are not lefte behynde. Ther fore are they come in to greate parels, and manye necessytyes, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easyer, that he whiche suffereth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude oute of the worlde, and nowe to se the thynges that shall happen in the laste.
C Then answered he me, and sayde:
The interpretacyon of the syghte shal I shewe the, and I wyll open vnto the the thynge that thou haste requyred.
For thou haste spoken of them that are lefte behynde, and thys is the inter pretacyon. He that taketh awaye the parell in that tyme, hath kepte hymselfe. They that be fallen in to harme, are suche as haue workes and faythe vnto the moost myghtye. Knowe thys therfore, that they whiche be lefte behynde, are more blessed then they that be dead. Thys is the meanynge of the vysyon. Where as thou sawest a man commynge vp from the depe of the see the same is he whome God the Hygh-este hath kepte a greate season, which by hys owne selfe shall delyuer hys creature, and he shall ordre them that are lefte behynde. And where as thow sawest, that oute of hys mouthe ther came a blast of wynd, fyre and storme, and howe that he lyfte vp nother swearde nor weapen, but that the rus-shynge in of hym destroyed the whole multytude, that came to fyght against hym: it synyfieth, that the dayes come whan God wyl delyuer them that are vpon earth, and in a traunce of mynde shall he come vpon them, that dwel in the earthe. And one shall vndertake to fyghte agaynst another, and one cytye agaynste another, one place agaynste another, * one people agaynst ano- Mat.24.a ther, and one realme agaynste another. Whan thys commeth to passe, shall the tokens come, that I shewed D the before: and then shall my sonne be declared, whome thou sawest clymme vp as a man. And whan all the people heare hys voyce, euerye man shall in in theyre owne londe leaue the battayl that they haue one agaynste another, and an innumerable multytude shall be gathered together, as thy that be wyllyng to come and to ouercome, him by fyghtynge. But he shall stonde vppon the toppe of the mounte Syon.
Neuerthelesse Syon shall come, and shalbe shewed, beynge prepared, and buylded for all men, lyke as thou saw-este the hyl grauen forth wythout ony handes. But my sonne shall rebuke ÿ people that are come for theyr wycked nesse, wyth the tempest, and for theyre euell ymaginacyons: and theyr paynes whe with they shalbe punyshed, are ly kened vnto the flamme: and wythoute ony labour shal he destroye them, euen by the lawe, which is compared vnto the fyre.

E And wheras as thou sawest, that he gathered another peaceable people vn to hym: those are the ten trybes, which were caryed awaye presoners oute of theyr owne londe, in the tyme of Ose-4.Re.17.a as the kynge, * whome Salmanasar the king of Assyria toke presoners, and caried the ouer the water, and so came they to another londe.
But they gaue them thys counsel, that they shulde leaue the multytude of the Heythen, and to go forth in to a farther contry, where neuer mankynd dwelt: that they might there kepe their statutes, wich they neuer kept in their owne londe. And so they entred in at the narowe passages of the water of Exo.14.e. Euphrates, and * God shewed tokens Josu.3.d. for them, and helde styll the floude tyll they were passed ouer: for thorow that contry ther was a greate waye, namely of a yeare and an halfe iourneye, for the same region is called Asareth. Then dwelt they there vnto the latter tyme: and whan they come forth agayne, the Hyghest shall holde styll the sprynges of the streame agayne, that they maye go thorowe, therfore sawest thou the multytude wyth peace. And they that be lefte behynd of thy people, are those that be founde wythin my border. at.24.a Nowe whan he destroyeth the multy-tude that is gathered togetherr, he shall defende hys people that remayn, and then shall he shewe them greate wonders.
F Then sayde I: O LORDE LORDE, shewe me thys: wherfore haue I sene the man commyng vp frō the depe of the see.
And he sayd vnto me: Like as thou canste nother seke oute nor knowe the thynges that are in the depe of the see, euen so mayeste thou not se my sonne, or those that be wyth hym, but in the tyme of the daye. Thys is the interpre-tacyon of the dreame, which thou saw-est, therfore thou onely arte here lygh-tened: for thou haste forsaken thyne owne lawe, and applyed thy dilygence 1.Reg.3. vnto myne, and sought it * Thy lyfe Pro.7.a. hast thou ordred in wysdome and hast called vnderstondyng thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the the treasu re of the Hyghest. After thre dayes I wyll shewe the more, and talke wyth the more at large, yee heuye and won-derous thynges wyll I declare vnto the.
Then wente I forth in to the feld, geuynge prayse and thankes greatlye vnto God, because of hys wonders whiche he dydde in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in tyme, and there I sat thre dayes.

The.xiiii.Chapter.

¶ God appeareth vnto Esdras in the bush, talketh wyth hym, and commaū deth hym what he shall do.

VPON the thyrde daye I A sat vnder an oke tre, then came ther a voice vnto me oute of the bushe, & sayde: Esdras, Esdras. And I sayde: here I am LORDE, and stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: * In the bushe dydde I appeare Exod.3.a. vnto Moses, and talked wyth hym, whan my people serued in Egypte, and I sente hym, and led my people out of Egypte, and broughte hym vpon the mounte Syna, where I helde hym by my a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous workes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes, and the ende, and commaunded hym, sayenge: These wordes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them. And now I saye vnto the: that thou laye vp in thyne harte the dreames that thou haste sene, and the interpretacyons whiche I haue shewed the: for thou shalte be recea-ued of all: thou shalte be turned, and remayne wyth my counsell, and wyth suche as be lyke the, vntyll the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath loste his youth, and the tymes beginne to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuyded in to twolue partes, and ten partes, of are gone alreadye, and halfe of the tenthe parte: Yet remayneth there that, whiche is after the halfe of the tenthe parte.
Therfore prepare and ordre thy B house, and refourme thy people: com-forte suche of them as be in trouble: and tell nowe of the destruccyon: Let go from the mortall thoughtes: caste away the burthens of man: put of the weake nature: lay vp in some place the thoughtes that are moost heuy vnto ye and haiste the to flye from these tymes for suche euell, and wyckednesse as thou haste nowe sene happē, shall they Mat.24.a 1.Joh.2.c do yet muche worse. * For the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is, the more shall synne, and wyckednesse increase, in them that dwell vpon earth.

For the trueth is fled farre away, and lesynge is harde at hande. For now haysteth the vision to come, that thou haste sene.

Then answered I and sayde: Be-holde LORDE, I wyll go as thou hast cōmaunded me and refourme the, people whiche are present. But they that shalbe borne afterward, who wil exhorte or rebuke them?

C Thus the worlde is set in dark-nesse, and they that dwell therein, are wythout lyghte for thy lawe is kyndled, because no man knoweth the thyn ges that are done of the, or that shalbe done. Yf I haue founde grace before the, sende the holye goost in to me, and I shall wryte all that hath ben done in the worlde sence the begynning, which was wrytten in thy lawe, that men maye fynde the pathe, and that they whiche wyll lyue in the latter dayes, maye lyue.

And he answered me sayenge: Go thy waye, gather thy people together, and saye vnto them, that they seke the not for.xl.dayes: but loke thou gather the many bore trees and take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Echanus, and Asyell, these fyue, which are ready to wryte swyftly, and come hither and I shall lyghte a candle of vnderston-dynge in thyne harte, whiche shall not be put out tyll the thynges be perfour med which y^e shalte begynne to wryte.
And then shalt thou declare some thyn ges openly vnto the perfecte, and some thynges shalt thou shewe secretely vnto the wyse. Tomorowe at thys houre shalt thou begynne to wryte.

D Then wente I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the peo ple together, & sayde: Heare these wor-des o Israell: Oure fathers from the begynnynge were straūgers in Egipt, from whence they were delyuered, and Deu.4.f. * receaued the law of lyfe, which they kepte not, whiche ye also haue transgressed after them. Then was thys londe, and the londe of Syon parted amonge you by the lot to possesse. But youre fathers and youre selues also haue done vnrighteousnesse, and haue not kepte the wayes which y^e hyghest commaunded you. And for so muche as he is a righteous iudge, he toke frō you in tyme the thing that he had geuē you. And now are ye here and your bre thren amonge you. Therfore yf so be that ye wyl subdue youre owne vnder stondynge, and refourme youre harte, ye shalbe kepte alyue, and after deathe shall ye optaine mercy. For after death shall the iudgemente come, whan we shall lyue agayne: and then shall the names of the ryghteous be manifeste: and the names of the vngodlye wyth theyr workes shalbe declared. Let no man therfore come nowe vnto me, nor axe onye questyon at me these.xl.
dayes.

So I toke y^e fyue men (as he cōmaū E ded me) and we wente in to y^e feld, and remayned there. The nexte daye a voy ce called me sayenge: Esdras, Opē thy mouth, * and drynke that I geue the. Eze.3.a. Apo.10.d Then opened I my mouthe, and be-holde, he reached me a full cup, whiche was full of water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it & dranke.
And whan I had dronken it, my harte had vnderstondynge, and wysdome grewe in my breste: for my spryte was kept in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened and shut nomore. The hy ghest gaue vnderstondynge vnto the fyue men, that they wrote the hyghe thynges of the nyghte, which they vn-derstode not. But in the nyghte they dyd eate bread: As for me, I spake in the daye, and helde not my tunge by nyghte. In.xl.dayes, they wrote two hundreth, and foure bokes.

And it happened whan.xl.dayes were fulfylled, that the Hyghest spake sayenge: The fyrst that thou hast wryt ten, speake openlye, that the worthye, and vnworthye may rede it. But kepe the.lxx.last, that thou mayeste shewe it onely to suche as be wyse amonge thy people. For in them is the sprynge of vnderstondynge, the fountayne of wy sedome, and the streame of knowlege.
And I dyd so.

The.xv. Chapter.

C God sheweth Esdras the punyshement that he wyll sende vpon the synfull people, and commaundeth hym to tell them the same.

A Beholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophecye, which I wyll put in thy mouth, sayeth the LORDE, and cause them to be wrytten in a letter, for it is the treuth. Feare not the ymaginacyons agaynst the, let not the vnfaythfulnesse of the trouble the, that speake agaynste the. For all the vnfaythfull shall dye in theyr vnfaythfulnes. Beholde sayeth the LORDE. I wyll brynge plages vpon the worlde: the sweard, honger, death and destruccyō: for wyckednesse hath the vpper hande in all ÿ earth, and theyr shameful workes are fulfylled.

B Therfore sayeth the LORDE, I wyll holde my tunge nomore vnto theyr wyckednesse, whiche they do so vngodlye: nother wyll I suffre them in the thynges, that they deale wyth all so wyckedlye. Beholde, *the innocent bloude of the troubled crieth vnto me, and the soules of the ryghteous complayne continually: and therfore (sayeth the LORDE) I wyl surelye auenge, and receaue vnto me all the innocent bloude from amonge them.

Apoc.6.b. and 19.a.

* Beholde, my people is led as a flocke of shepe to be slayne, I wyll not suffre them nowe to dwell in Egypte, but wyll brynge them oute wt a myghtye hande, and a stretched oute arme, & smyte it wyth plages as afore, and wil destroye all the londe of it. Egypt shall mourne, and the foundacyons of it shall be smytten wyth the plage and punyshemente that God shall brynge vpon it.

Esa.43.c. Roma.8.c 1.Cor.4.b

C They that tyll the grounde, shall mourne, for theyr sedes shalbe destroyed thorowe the blastyng and hale, and an horrible starre. Wo worth ÿ world and them that dwell therein, for the swearde and theyr destruccyon draweth nye: and one people shall stonde vp to fyghte agaynste another, and sweardes in theyr handes. For men shalbe vnstedfaste, and some shal do violence vnto other: they shall not regard theyr kynge and prynces, the waies of theyr doynges and hādlynges in theyr power. A man shall desyre to go in to the cytye, and shall not be able. For because of theyr pryde ÿ cytyes shalbe brought in feare, the houses shall shake, and mē shalbe afraied, A man shall haue no pytye vpon hys neghboure, but one shall prouoke another vnto battail, to spoyl theyre goodes because of the honger of breade, and because of the greate trouble.

D Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth which are from the vprysing, from the south from the easte and Libanus to turne vnto them, and restore ÿ thynges that they haue geuē thē. Like as they do yet thys daye vnto my chosen, so wyll I do also, and recompence them in theyre bosome. Thus sayeth the LORDE God: My ryghthand shall not spare ÿ synners, and my swearde shal not cease ouer them, that shedde the innocente bloude vpon the earthe. The fyre is gone oute from hys wrath, and hathe consumed the fundacyons of the earth and the synners, lyke the strawe that is kyndled. Wo worth them that synne, and kepe not my commaundementes, sayeth the LORDE. I wyll not spare them. Go youre waye ye chylderen from violence, defyle not my Sanctuarye: for the LORDE knoweth al them that synne agaynste hym, & therfore delyuereth he them vnto death, & destruccyon: For now are the plages come vpon the worlde, and ye shall remayne in them. For God shall not delyuer you, because ye haue synned agaynste hym.

E Beholde, an horrible visyon commeth from the easte, where generacyons of Dragons shal come oute, and the people of the Arabes wyth many charrettes, and the multytude of them shalbe as the wynde vpon earthe, that all they whiche heare them ragynge in theyr wrath, may feare and be afraied: and as the wilde bores out of ÿ wood so shall they go oute and wyth greate power shall they come, and stonde fyghtynge wyth them, and shall wayst the porcyon of the londe of the Assyryans.

And then shal the Dragons haue the vpperhande, not remembryng theyr byrth, and shall turne about swearing together in greate power, to persecute them. But these shalbe afraied, & kepe sylence at theyr power, & shal flye: and one oute of the londe of the Assyryans shall besege them, and consume one of them, and in theyre hooste shall be feare, and drede, and stryfe amonge theyr kynges.

F Beholde cloudes from the easte, and from the north vnto the southe, & they are verye horrible to loke vpon, full of wrath and storme. They shall smyte one vpon another, and they shal smyte at the greate starre vpon earth, and theyr starre: and the bloude shalbe from the swearde vnto the belye, and the smoke of man vnto the camels lytter. And ther shalbe great fearfulnesse and tremblynge vpon earthe, and they that se the wrath, shalbe afrayed, and a tremblynge shall come vpon them.

And then shall ther come great raynes from the south and from ÿ north and parte from the west, and from the stormye wynde from the east, and shall shut them vp agayne, and the cloude which he raysed vp in wrath: and the starre to cause feare towarde the easte and westwynde, shalbe destroyed: and the greate cloudes shalbe lyfte vp, and the myghtye cloudes ful of wrath, and the starre, that they maye make all the earthe afrayed, and them that dwell therein, and that they maye poure out ouer all places an horrible starre, fyre, and hayle, and flyenge sweardes, and manye waters: that all feldes maye be full, and all ryuers, & they shall breake down the cytyes, and walles, mountaynes, and hylles, all trees, wood and the grasse of ÿ medowes, and al theyr frute. And they shall go stedfaste vnto Babylon, and make her afrayed, they shall come to her, and besege her, the starre and all wrathe shall they poure oute vpon her.

G Then shall the dust and smoke go vp vnto ÿ heauen & al they ÿ be about her, shal bewayl her, & they ÿ remayne vnder her, shal do seruice vnto them ÿ haue put her in feare. And thou Asia that comfortest theselfe also vpon the hope of Babylon, and arte a worshyp of hyr personne. Wo be vnto the thou wretch, because thou haste made theselfe lyke vnto her, and haste decte thy doughters in whordome, that they myghte triumphe and please thy louers, whiche haue alwaye desyred to committe whordome wyth the: thou haste folowed the abhominable cytye in all hyr workes and inuencions.

Therfore sayeth God: I wyll send plages vpon the, wydowheade, pouerte, honger, warres and pestylences, to wayste thy houses wyth destrucyon and death, and the glorye of thy power shalbe dryed vp as a floure, whan the heate aryseth that is sente ouer the. Thou shalt be syck as a poor wyfe that is plaged, and beaten of women: so that the myghtye and louers shall not be able to receaue the. Wolde I so hate the sayeth the LORDE, yf thou haddeste not alwaye slayne my chosen, exaltynge the stroke of thy handes, and sayde ouer theyr deathe, whan thou waste dronken: set forthe the bewtye of thy countenaunce.

Lyke as thou haste done vnto my chosen (sayeth the LORDE) euen H so shall God do vnto the, and shall delyuer the in to the plage. The chylderen shall dye of honger, and thou shalt fall thorowe the swearde. Thy cytyes shall be broken downe, and all thyne shall perysshe wyth the swearde in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes shal dye of honger, and eate theyr own flesh, and drynke theyr owne bloud for verye honger of breade and thyrste of water. Thou vnhappye shalte come thorowe the see, and receaue plages agayne.

In the passage they shall caste downe the slayne cytye, and shall rote oute one parte of thy londe, and consume the porcyon of thy glorye. They shall treade the downe lyke stuble, and they shall be thy fyre, and shall consume the: thy cytyes, and thy londe, thy wood, and thy frutefull trees shall they burne vp wyth the fyre. Thy chylderen shall they carye awaye captyue: and loke what thou haste, they shall spoyle it, and marre the bewtye of thy face.

WO vnto the Babylon, and Asya wo vnto the Egypte and Syria: gyrde your selues wyth clothes of sack, and heere, and mourne for youre chylderen, be sorye: for youre destruccyon is at hande. A swearde is sente vpon you, and who wyll turn it back? A fyre is kyndled amonge you, and who wyll quenche it? Plages are sente vnto you, & what is he that wyll dryue them awaye? Maye ony mā dry ue away an hongry lyon in the wood?

Or maye ony man quenche the fyre in the stubble, whan it hathe begonne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the a-rowe that is shot of a stronge archer?
The myghtye LORDE sendeth the the plages, and what is he that wyll dryue them awaye? The fyre is kyndled & gone forth in hys wrath, & what is he that wyll quenche it? He shal cast lyghtenynges, and whs shal not fear?
He shall thonder, and who shall not be afraied? The LORDE shal threaten and who shall not vtterly be beaten to pouder at his presence? The earth qua keth, and the fundacyons therof: ẏ see aryseth vp, wyth wawes from ẏ depe and the floudes of it are vnquiete, and the fysshes therof also befor the LOR DE, and before the glory of hys power. For stronge is hys ryghthande that holdeth the bowe, hys arowes that he shuteth, are sharpe, and shall not mysse whan they begynne to be shot in to the endes of the worlde.
B Beholde, the plages are sente, and shall not turne agayne, tyll they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled, and shall not be put oute, tyll it consume ẏ fundacyons of the earth. Lyke as an a-row which is shot of a myghty archer returneth not bacwarde, euen so ẏ pla ges that shall be sente vpon earth, shal not turn agayn. Wo is me, wo is me, who wyll delyuer me in those dayes?
The begynnynge of sorowes & greate mournynge: the begynnynge of derth, & greate death: the begynnyng of war-res, and the powers shal stond in fear: the begynnynge of euels, and they shal tremble euery one. What shall I do in these thynges, whan the plages come?
Beholde honger, and plage, trouble & anguysh are sent, as scourges for amē demente. But for al these thynges they shall not turn from theyr wyckednesse nor be alwaye myndefull of the scour-C ges.
Beholde, vitayles shalbe so good cheape vpon earth, ẏ they shal thynke themselues to be in good case: and euē then shall myschefe growe vpon earth warres, derthe, & greate disquietnesse.
For manye of them that dwell vpon earth shall perysshe of honger, and the other that escape the honger, shall the swearde destroye: and the dead shall be cast out as dounge, and ther shal be noman to conforte them. For the earth shalbe waysted, & the cyties shalbe cast downe: ther shalbe noman left to tyll ẏ earth, and to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, and who shall plucke them of, and gather them? The grapes shal be rype, & who shall treade them? For all places shal be desolate of men, so ẏ one man shal desyre to se another, or to heare hys voyce. For of one whole cy-tie ther shalbe ten lefte, and two in the felde, which shal hyde themselues in ẏ thyk busshes, and in ẏ clyftes of stones: lyke as whan ther remayn thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tre: or as whan a vyniarde is gathered, ther are lefte some grapes of them that diligentlye soughte thorowe the vyniarde.
Euen so in those dayes ther shalbe D thre or foure lefte, for them that search theyr houses wyth the swearde. And ẏ earth shalbe left wayst, & the felds ther of shal wax old: and hyr wayes & al hyr pathes shall growe full of thornes, because nomā shall trauayl therethorow The virgines shall mourne hauynge no brydegromes, ẏ women shall make lamentacion hauynge no husbandes, theyr doughters shall mourne hauyng no helpe of theyr brydegrome. In the warres shall they be destroyed, & theyr husbandes shall perysh for honger. O ye seruauntes of the LORDE, heare these thynges, & marke them. Beholde the worde of the LORDE O receaue it: beholde, the plages drawe nye, and are not slack in taryeng. Lyke as a tra uelynge woman, which in the.ix. mo-neth bryngeth forth a sonne, whan the houre of the byrth is come, an houre two or thre afore that ẏ paynes come vpon hyr bodye: and whan the chylde commeth to the byrth, they tary not ẏ twynklyng of an eye. Euen so shal not the plages be slack to come vpō earth, and the world shal mourne, & sorowes shal come vpō it on euery syde. E O my people hear my worde, make you ready to the battayl, and in al euel be euen as pelgroms vpon earth. He ẏ he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwell therein: he that soweth, as one cuppe theyr marchaũdises wyth robbe theyr synnes sayeth the LORD. Lyke as an whore enuyeth anhonest womã: so shall ryghteousnesse hate iniquite, whan she decketh herself, and shall accuse her to hyr face, whan he commeth that defendeth, which shal make inqui sicion for all synne vpon earth. And therfor be not ye lyke therunto, nor to ŷ workes thereof: for oreuer it be lõge, iniquite shall be taken awye out of the earth, and ryghteousnesse shall raygne amonge you.

F Let not the synner saye: ŷ he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burn vpon hys heade, which sayeth befor ŷ LORDE God & hys glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the LORDE knoweth all the workes of men, theyr imagynacions, theyre thoughtes, and Gene.1.a. theyr hartes. * For he spake but the worde: Let the earth be made, and it was made. Let the heauen be made: & it was made. In hys worde were the starres made, & he knoweth the nom bre of them. He searcheth the groũde of the depe, and the treasures thereof: he hath measured the see, and what it conteyneth. He hath shut the see in the myddes of waters, & wyth hys worde hath he hanged ŷ earth vpon the waters. He spredeth out the heauẽ lyke a voult: vpõ the waters hath he foũded it. In the deserte and drye wyldernesse hath he made sprynges of water, and pooles vpon the toppe of the mountay nes, ŷ the floudes myght powre down frõ the stony rockes to water ŷ earth.
He made mã, & put hys hart in ŷ myd dest of the body, & gaue hym breth, lyfe and vnderstandynge: yee and ŷ sprete of the almyghty God, which made all thynges, and hath searched the groũd of all the secrets of the earth.
G He knoweth your ymaginaciõs, & inuenciõs, & what ye thynke whan ye synne, and wolde hyde youre synnes.

Therfore hath the LORDE searched and sought out all your workes, & he shal bewraye you all. And whan youre synnes ar brought forth, ye shalbe asha med before men, and your owne synnes shalbe your accusers in that daye.
What wyll ye do? Or how wyll ye hyde your synnes before God, and his angels? Beholde, God hym selfe is the iudge, feare hym, leaue of from youre synnes, and forget your vnryghteous-nesse, and medle nomore with them: so shall God leade you forth, and delyuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a great multytude is kyndled ouer you, and they shall take away cer tayne of you, and fede the ydle with Idols: and they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in dirisiõ laughed to scorne, and troden vnder foote.
For vnto the places ther shalbe a H place, and in the next cyties a great insurreccyon vppon those that feare the LORDE. They shalbe lyke madde men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle and waist such as feare ŷ LOR DE, theyr goodes shall they take from them, and shut them out of theyr houses. Then shall it be knowen who are my chosen, and they shalbe tryed as ŷ golde in the fyre. Heare O ye my beloued, sayethe the LORDE, beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I wyll delyuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed, dispayre not, for God is your captayne.
Who so kepeth my commaundemẽ tes and preceptes (sayeth the LORD God) let not youre synnes weye you downe, and let not your vnryghteous-nesses be lyfte vp. Wo be vnto them ŷ are subdued vnto theyr synnes, and ta gled in theyr wyckednesses: lyke as a felde is hedged in with bus-shes, and the path therof couered with thor nes, that no man maye trauayle thorow: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre, and brent.

The.ii.Chapter.

The louynge compassion that Tobias sheweth in buryenge the dead, for the which cause he is hated and persecuted. God nurtoureth hym wt blyndnesse. His wyfe casteth hym in the teth.

A After these thynges vpon a solempne daye of the LORDE Tobias made a good feast in his house, and sayd vnto his sonne: Go thy way and brynge hyther some of oure trybe, such as feare God, that they make mery with vs. And whan he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde his father, that one of the chyldr of Israel laye slayne vpon ÿ strete. And immediatly he leapt from his table, lefte the feast, came fastyng to the dead coarse, toke hym and bare hym preuely in to his house, that whan the sonne was downe, he myght safely bury hym. And whan he hadde hyd the coarse, he dyd eate his meate wt mournynge and feare, remembrynge ÿ wordes, that the LORDE sayde by

¶ The sonne obeyeth the father, and

A Then answered Tobias vn to his father, and sayde: fa

I shal requyre this money, I cã not tel Nother doth he knowe me, nor I hym.
What token shall I geue hym: And as for the waye thyther, I neuer knewe it.
Then his father answered hym, & sayd I haue his handwrytyng by me, which whan thou shewest hym, immedytly he shall paye the. But go thy waye now, and get the some faythfull man to go with the for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the money, whyle I am yet lyuynge.
B Then wente Tobias out, & vpõ the strete he founde a fayre yonge man standynge gyrded vp, & as it were one ready to take his iourneye. And he knew not that it was an angel of God but saluted hym, and sayd: Frõ whẽce art thou, thou good yonge man? He an swered: Of the chyldren of Israel.
And Tobias sayd vnto hym, kno-west thou the waye, that leadeth to the contre of the Medes? He answered: I knowe it well, & all those stretes haue I gone oftimes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus, that dwelleth in Rages a cytie of the Medes, which lyeth vpon the mount Egbathanis. Tobias sayde vnto hym: I praye the, tary for me, tyl I haue told my father these thynges. Then wente Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At the which his fa ther marueyled, and prayed ẏ he wold come in vnto hym.
C Now whan the angell came in, he saluted hym, and sayd: ioye be with the for euermore. And olde Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue that sytte here in darcknesse, and se not the lyght of heauen? The yonge man sayd vnto hym: Be of good cheare, God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayd vnto hym: Canst thou brynge my sonne to Gabelus, vnto ẏ cytie of Rages in Media?
And whan thou comest agayne, I shal paye the thy hyre. And the angell sayde vnto hym: I shall lede thy sonne, and brynge hym to the agayne. Then Tobias answered hym: Tell me I praye the, of what house, or of what tribe art thou?
The angel Raphael sayd vnto him Arest thou after the kynred of an hyre lynge, or sekest thou a gyde for thy sone to go with hym? But that I make the not carefull, I am Azarias the sõne of great Hananias. And Tobias answered: Thou art come of a great kynred, but I praye the, be not displeased, that I desyred to knowe thy kynred. The angell sayd vnto hym: Thy sonne shall I leade forth safely, and brynge hym whole to the agayne.
Thẽ answered Tobias, and sayde: D well, go on your waye, and God be in your iourney, and his angell beare you cõpany. So whã they had prepared all thynges, that they wolde take wt them in theyr iourney, Tobias bad his father & mother fare wel, & they wẽt on theyr waye both together. Now whan they were gone, his mother begãne to wepe and sayd: * The stafe of oure age hast thou taken awaye, & sent hym frõ vs.
Wold God that money had neuer ben, for the which thou hast sent hym a pouerte, this had ben great ryches vn to vs, that we sawe our sonne here.

Then sayd Tobias vnto her: Wepe not, our sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thyne eyes shal se hym. For I trust that the good angell of God shall beare hym company, and ordre well all the thynges that he doth: so that he shal come to vs agayne with
of from wepynge, and helde hir tunge.

The.vi.Chapter.

¶ In theyr iourney thy take a fyshe, wherof the angel commaũdeth hym to kepe ẏ hart, the gall, and the leuer, and telleth hym wherto it is good.

A So Tobias wente on his waye and a dogge folowed hym, and the fyrste nyght they abode by the water of Tigris. Then went he out to wesshe his fete, and behold, ther cam forth an horrible fysshe to deuoure him.

Of whom Tobias was afrayed, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayenge: LORDE he cometh vpon me. And the angel sayd vnto hym: Take hym by the ioule, and drawe hym to the. And he dyd so, and drewe him vpon ye londe and the fysh beganne to leape at his fete.
Then sayd the angell vnto hym: B Take out the bowels of this fysshe, & as for the harte, the gall, and the leuer, kepe them by the. For these thinges are necessarye and good for medecyne. To bias dyd so, and rosted the fysshe, & they toke hym with them in theyr iourney: ye resydue they salted, as much as was sufficyent for them, tyll they came to Rages. Then Tobias axed the angell, and sayd vnto hym: I pray the brother Azarias, tell me, wherto are these thyn-ges good of the fysshe, that thou hast byd-den me kepe?
The angell answered hym and sayd: Yf thou layest a pece of the harte vpon the coales, the smoke therof dry-ueth awaye all euell spretes, whether it be from man or from woman, so that from thence forth the same shall come nomore vnto them. The gall is good to anoynte or to strake the eyes withal, where as ther is ony blemysh in them, so shall they be whole.
And Tobias sayd vnto hym: wher C wylt thou that we remayne? The angell answered and sayde: * Here is a Nu.36.a nye kynsman of thyne, one Raguell by name, whiche hath a doughter called Sara, and hath nother sonne nor dough ter but her. All his good belongeth vnto the, and thou must mary his dough-ter: and therfore desyre her of hyr father, and he shall geue her the to wyfe.
Then answered Tobias and sayde: As I vnderstande she hath ben maryed vn to seuen husbandes, & all they are dead: & I haue herde saye, that the deuel slewe them. I am afrayed therfore lest suche thynges happen vnto me also: which yf it came to passe (seynge I am the onely sonne of my father and my mother) I shulde brynge them in theyr age with sorowe to theyr graues.
D Then sayd the angell Raphael vn to hym: Heare me, and I wyll tell the, what they be of whom the deuell hath power. Namely, they that receaue ma-

And in the fyrst night rost the leuer of the fysshe, and the deuell shalbe dry-uen awaye. The seconde nyght shalt thou be receaued in, to the company of the holy patriarkes. The thyrde nyght shalt thou optayne the blessyng of God so that whole and sounde chyldren shal be borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take the mayden in the feare of God, & more for the desyre of chyldrē, then for

The.vii.Chapter.

They come to Raguel, which recea ueth them louyngly, and marieth his doughter Sara vnto Tobias.
A Then wente they in to Ra-guel, which receaued them ioyfully. And whan Raguel loked vpon Tobias, he sayd vnto Anna his wyfe: How lyke is this yonge man vnto my systers sonne. And whan he had spoken this, he sayde: Whence be ye good brethren? They said: Of the trybe of Neph tali, out of the captiuite of Niniue.
Then sayd Raguel vnto them: Know ye my brother Tobias? They said: yee, we knowe hym well. And whan he had spoken muche good of hym, the angell sayd vnto Raguel: Tobias of whome thou axest, is this yonge mans father.
Then Raguel bowed hym selfe down and wept, toke hym aboute the neck, & Tobi.9.b. kyssed hym, and sayd: * Gods blessyng haue thou my sonne, for thou art ye sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wife and Sara his doughter wept also.
B Now whan they had talked together, Raguel bad kyll a wether, and to make a feast. And whan he prayed them to syt downe to dyner, Tobias sayde: I wyll nother eat nor drynke here this daye, excepte thou fyrst graunt me my peticyon, and promyse me to geue me thy doughter Sara. Whan Raguel herde this, he was astonnyed, for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other seuen men, that went in vnto her: and he beganne to feare that it shulde chaunce vnto hym also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doute, & gaue the yonge man no answere, ÿ angell sayd vnto hym: Feare not to geue hym thy doughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, belongeth thy doughter to wyfe, therfore myght none other haue her.

C Then sayd Raguel: I doute not, but God hath accepted my prayers & teares in his syght: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same intẽt, that this doughter of myn might be maryed in hir owne kynred, *accordynge to the lawe of Moses. And now doute thou not, but I wyll geue her vnto the: So he toke ÿ ryghthande of his doughter, and gaue her in to the ryght hande of Tobias, and sayd: The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you. And they toke a letter and made a wrytynge of ÿ mariage. And then made they mery, & praysed God. And Raguel called Anna his wyf vnto hym, and bad her prepare another chamber, & thyther he brought Sara his doughter, and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good cheare my doughter, the LORDE of heauen geue the ioye, for the heuynesse that thou hast suffered.

Tobias goynge to bed with his wyfe ordreth hymselfe as the angel bad him, and so both he and his wyfe are preserued from euel.

A Now after ÿ they had supped, they brought ÿ yonge mã in to her. Thẽ thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the angell, and toke out of his bagge a pece of the leuer of the fysh, and layed it vpon the whote coales. So the angell Raphael toke holde of the deuill, and sent hym awaye, and bounde hym in the wyldernesse of the hyer Egipte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgyn, and sayd: Up Sara, *let vs make our prayer vnto God to daye, tomorow, and nexte morowe: for these thre nyghtes wyll we reconcyle our selues with God: and whan the thyrd holy nyght is past, we shall ioyne together in the dewty of mariage. For we are the chyldren of holy men, & we may not come together as the Heythen that knowe not God.

B *Then stode they vp both together, and besought God earnestly, that he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayd: O LORDE God of oure fathers, praysed be thou of heauen and earth, of the see, welles, and floudes, and of all the creatures that be therin. *Thou madest Adam of the moulde of ÿ earth, and gauest hym Eua for an helper. And now LORDE thou knowest, ÿ it is not because of voluptuousnesse, ÿ I take this syster of mine to wyfe, but onely for the loue of chyldren, in whom thyn name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayd: haue mercy vpon vs (O LORDE) haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs both come whole and sounde to a good age.

Gene.2.d

C And aboute the cocke crowe, it happened, that Raguel called his seruauntes, and they wente with hym, to make a graue. For he sayd: It is chaunced vnto hym peraduenture, as it dyd vnto ÿ other seuen mẽ, that went in vnto her. Now whan they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayd vnto her: sende one of thy maydes to loke yf he be dead, that I maye bury hym afore it be lyght daye.

So she sent a mayden to se, which whan she came in to the chamber, she founde them whole and sounde, slepyng together. And so she came agayne, and brought good tydynges. D Then Raguel and Anna his wyfe praysed the LORDE, & said: Praised be thou O LORDE God of Israel. For it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought, for thou hast dealt mercyfully with vs, and put awaye from vs the enemye that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercy vnto yonder two beloued. O LORDE, cause them to magnifie the more perfectly, and to offre the the sacrifice of thy prayse, and of theyr health: that al people maye knowe, that thou onely arte God in al the earth.

E And immediatly Raguel commaũded his seruauntes, to fyll the graue, ÿ they had made, with earth, afore it was lyght: and bad his wyfe prepare a feast and to make ready all thynges ÿ were necessary for meate, to suche as wente by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also and foure wethers to be slayne, & meates to be prepared for al his neyghbours and frendes.

And Raguel charged Tobias, to remayne with hym two wekes. As for al the good ÿ he had, he gaue Tobias the one half of it, and made thys wrytyng, that the half whiche remayned, shulde fall vnto Tobias after theyr death.

The.ix.Chapter.

A Then Tobias called vnto hym the angell, whome he thought to haue bene a mā and sayde vnto hym: Brother Azarias, I praye the herken vnto my wordes: Yf I shulde geue my selfe to be thy seruaunt, I shal not deserue thy prouydence. Neuerthelesse I beseke the, that thou wylt take the beastes and the seruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in Rages the cytye of the Medes, and delyuer hym hys hand wrytynge, and receaue the moneye of him, & pray him to com to my mariage For thou knowest thy selfe, that my father telleth the dayes: and yf I tary ony daye to longe, he wyll be sorye in hys mynde. Now seyste thou how earnestlye Raguell hath requyred me, so that I can not saye hym naye.

Then toke Raphaell fouer of Raguels seruauntes, and two camels, & went vnto Rages the cytye of the Medes: and whan he had found Gabelus, he gaue hym hys handwrytynge, and receaued all the money. He tolde hym also of Tobias the son of Toby, how Tobi.7.a. and praysed god, and sayd: * The blessynge of the God of Israell haue thou for thou arte the sonne of a ryghte vertuous and iuste man, and of one that feareth God, and geueth great almes. And whan they all had sayde Amen, they wente to the feaste: but wyth the feare of the LORDE helde they the feaste of the mariage.

The.x.Chapter.

¶ Tobias father, and mother longe sore for hys commynge: And Raguell seynge that he can kepe hym no longer, sendeth hym awaye with his wyfe.

Now whyle yonge Tobias made longe taryeng by reason of the mariage, hys father was full of care, and heuynesse, and thoughte what shuld be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so longe? Or why shulde he be kepte so longe there? Peraduenture Gabelus is dead, and no mā will geue hym the money. Thus beganne he to be sorowfull, he and Anna hys wyfe wyth hym, and beganne to wepe both together, because theyr sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted As for hys mother, she wepte wyth discomfortable teares, and sayd: Wo is me, my sonne: Oh what ayled vs to sende the awaye in to a straunge contre thou lyghte of oure eyes, A

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tunge, and be not dyscomforted, oure sonne is whole, and sounde: the man that we sent hym wythall, is faythfull ynoughe. Neuerthelesse she myghte in no wyse be comforted but daylye wente oute, loked aboute, and wente aboute all the stretes, wherebye she thoughte he shulde come agayne: that (yf it were possible) she myghte se hym commynge a farre of. But Raguell sayde vnto hys sonne in lawe: O tarye here and I shal sende a messaunger vnto thy father Tobias, to tell hym that thou arte in good healthe. Tobias sayde vnto hym I am sure, that my father and my mother counte euery daye, and that theyr hartes are sorye

So whan Raguell prayed Tobias wyth manye wordes, and he wolde in no wise heare him, he delyuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe parte of all hys goods: in seruauntes and handmaydens, in shepe, in camels, & in kyne and muche money, and so sente hym awaye from hym wyth peace and ioye, and sayd: The holy angell of ẏ LORDE be wyth you in youre yourneye, C and brynge you forth safe and sounde that ye mayе fynde al thynges in good case wyth youre elders, and that myne eyes may se youre chylderen, afore I dye.

So the elders enbraced theyr doughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortinge her to honoure hyr father and mother in lawe, to loue hyr husbande, to rule well hyr housholde, to kepe hyr house in good ordre, and to shewe herselfe blamelesse.

The.xi.Chapter.

¶ They returne home: and are welcomed ioyfully. Olde Tobias hath hys syght agayne. They reioyce altogether and geue thankes vnto God.

A Nowe as they were goynge homewarde agayne, vpon the. xi. daye they came to Charra, which lieth in the half waye towarde Niniue. And the angell sayde: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how I hast lefte thy father: therfore yf it please the, we two wyll go before, and let the housholde wyth thy wyfe, and wyth the cattell come softe and fayrly after vs. And whan Tobias was content that they shulde go before, Raphaell sayde vnto hym: Take of the gal of the fysch with the, for it shalbe necessarye. So Tobias toke of the gal, and they went theyr waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the water syde vpon the toppe of an hyll from whence she

And whyle she was waytynge there for his commnig, she loked afarre of, and anone she perceaued hyr sonne commynge, and ranne and tolde hyr husbande, sayenge: beholde thy sonne commeth. And Raphael sayd vnto Tobyas: As soone as thou commest in to the house, immediatlye worshyppe the LORDE thy God, and geue thankes vnto hym, then go to thy father, & kysse hym, and strake hys eyes ouer wyth the gall of the fyshe, that thou haste broughte wyth the. For be sure, that hys eyes shall straughte waye be opened, and thy father shal se the lyght of heauen, and shall reioyce at the syghte of the. Then the dogge that had bene wyth them in theyr iourneye, ranne before, and came as a messaunger, and

So the blynde father arose, and beganne to runne, and stombled with his fete, and gaue a seruaunte hys hande, ranne to mete hys sonne, receaued him and kyssed hym, he and hys wyfe, and beganne to wepe for ioye.

Nowe whan they had worshypped and thanked God, they sat down. Then toke Tobias of the fysches gall, and anoynted hys fathers eyes: and taryed half an houre, and then beganne the blemyshe to go oute of hys eyes, lyke as it had bene the whyte skynne of an egge: which Tobias toke and drew from hys eyes, and immediatlye he receaued hys syghte. D

Then they praysed god, he and his wyfe, and all they that knew him. And Tobias sayde: O LORDE God of Israell, I geue the prayse and thankes, for thou haste chastened me, and made me whole. And lo, now do I se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sõnes wyfe also whole and sounde wyth al the housholde and cattell, wyth camels and much money of hys wyues, & wyth the money that he had receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde hys father and his mother al the benefites, which god had done for him by the man that led hym. Achior also, and Nabath, Tobias syster sonnes came and were glad, and reioyced with hym, by reason of al the good that god had shewed vnto hym.

And for the space of seuen dayes they made merye, and were ryght ioyfull eueryschone.

¶ The father, and the sonne wolde fayne rewarde the angel. He wyl haue nothynge: but sheweth them what he is.

A Then Tobias called hys sonne vnto him and sayd: What may we geue this holy mã, that wente with the? Tobias answered hys father and sayde: Father what rewarde shall we geue hym? Or what thynge can deserue hys benefytes? He hath ben my gyde, & broughte me safe agayne: he receaued the money frõ Gabelus, he caused me to get my wyfe, he droue the euell sprete from her, he hath bene occasyõ of gladnesse to hyr father and mother: he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fysh, he hath made the to se the lyght of heauen, yea we all haue receaued greate good of hym. Howe shulde we worthelye deserue these thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, that thou wylt desyre hym, yf happly he wil vouchesafe to take wyth hym the halfe of all that we haue broughte.

B So the father and the sonne called hym, toke hym asyde, and beganne to praye hym that he wolde be content to take in good worth the half parte of al that they had broughte. Then sayd he secretely vnto them: Prayse the god of heauen, and geue thankes vnto hym before al men lyuing, for he hath shewed hys mercy ☞ vnto vs. It is good to hyde the kynges secrete, but to shewe and to prayse the workes of God, it is an honorable thinge. Prayer is good wyth fastynge: & to geue almes is better, the to hoord vp treasures of gold. * For almes delyuereth from death, clenseth synne, and causeth to fynde euerlastynge lyfe. But they that do syn and vnrighteousnesse, are the enemyes of theyr owne soules.

C Wherfore I tell you the treuth, & wyll hyde nothinge from you. * Whan thou prayedest wyth teares, and buryedest the dead, and leftest thy dyner, and hiddeste the dead in thy house on the daye tyme, that thou myghteste burye them in the nighte, I offred thy prayer before the LORDE. And because thou waste accepte & beloued of God, * it was necessarye, that temptacyon shuld trye the. And now hath ÿ LORDE sente me to heale the, and to delyuer Sara thy sonnes wyfe from the euell spirte. For I am Raphaell an angell, one of the seuen that stonde before the LORDE.

D Whan they herde thys, they were sore afrayed, and trembled, & fel down vpon theyr faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the angell: Peace be with you, feare not. Where as I haue bene wyth you, it is the wyll of God, geue prayse and thankes vnto hym.

* You thought that I dyd eate, & drynke wyth you, but I vse meat that is inuisible, and drinke, that can not be sene of men.

Nowe therfore is the tyme that I muste turne agayn, vnto him that sent me: but be ye thankefull vnto God, & tell oute all hys wonderous workes. And whan he hadde spoken these wordes he was taken awaye oute of theyr syghte, so that they sawe hym no more. Then fell they downe flat vpon theyr faces by the space of thre houres and praysed God: and whan they rose vp, they tolde all hys wonderous workes.

The.xiii. Chapter.

A Then olde Tobias opened hys mouthe, and praysed the LORDE, and sayd: Greate arte thou O LORDE for euermore, and thy kyngdome worlde wythout ende * for thou scourgeste and healeste, thou leadeste vnto hell, and bryngeste oute agayne, and ther is none that maye escape thy hande. O geue thankes vnto ÿ LORDE ye chyldrē of Israel, & prayse hym in the syght of the Heythē: For amōg ÿ Heythē, which know hym not hath he scattred you, to the intent that ye shuld shewe forth hys maruaylous workes: and cause them for to knowe that ther is none other God almyghtye but he. He hath chastened vs for oure mysdedes, and for hys owne mercyes sake shall he saue vs.

Consydre then, howe he hathe dealte wyth you, and praye hym wyth feare and drede, and magnyfie the euer lastynge kynge in youre workes.

B I wyll prayse hym euen in ÿ lond of my captyuyte, for he hath shewed hys maiestye vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfore O ye synners, and do ryghteousnesse before God, and be ye sure, that he wyll shewe hys mercye vpon you. As for me and my soule, we wyll reioyce in God. O prayse the LORDE. all hys chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto hym. O Jerusalem * thou cytye God, the LORDE hath punysshed the for the workes of thyne owne handes. O praise the LORDE in thy good thinges, and geue thankes to the euerlastynge God, that he maye buylde vp hys tabernacle agayne in ÿ, that he maye call agayne vnto the, all suche as be in captiuyte, and that thou mayest haue ioy for euermore. * With a fayre lyghte shalte thou shyne, and al the endes of the worlde shall honoure the.

The.xiiii.Chapter.

Tobias beynge olde prophecyeth the destruccyon of Niniue, and the prosperous healthe of Israell. The sonne forsaketh the synfull cytye, as hys father bad hym, and goeth to hys father in lawe.

¶ A coppye of the Epistle, that Jeremy sent vnto the Jewes which were led a-waye presoners vnto Babylon.

A Because of the synnes ỹ ye haue done agaist Jer.25.a.b God, ye shalbe * led away captiue vnto Ba bilon, euen of Nabu-chodonosor the kynge of Babylon. So whã ye be come in to Babylon, ye shall re-mayne there many yeares, & for a lõge season: namely, vii. generacyons: & after that wyll I brynge you awaye pea ceably from thence. Now shall ye se in Babylon, goddes of golde, and syluer, of wood, & of stone: borne vpõ mẽs shulders, to cast out a fearfulnesse before the heythen. But loke ỹ ye do not as the other: be not ye afrayed, and let not the feare of them ouercome you.
B Therfore whã ye se the multitude of people worshippynge them behynde and before, saye ye in youre hartes: O Deut,6,c LORDE * it is thou, that oughtest onely to be worshipped. Myne angell also shalbe with you, & I my selfe wyl care for your soules. As for the tymber of those goddes, the carpenter hath po-lysshed them: yee gylted be they, & layed ouer with syluer, yet are they but vayn thynges, and can not speake. Lyke as a wench that loueth peramours is trym-ly deckte, euen so are these made and hanged with golde. Crownes of golde verelye haue theyr goddes vppon theyr heades: so the prestes them selues take the golde, and syluer frõ them, and put it to theyr owne vses: yee they geue of the same vnto harlottes, and trymme theyr whores withall: Agayne, they take it from the whores, & decke theyr goddes therewyth. * Yet can not these Jere.10.a goddes delyuer thẽselues from rustes and mothes. Whan they haue couered them wyth clothynge of purple, they wype theyr faces for the dust of ỹ tẽple whereof ther is muche amonge them.
One hathe a ceptre in hys hande, as though he were a iudge of the contry: yet can he not slaye such as offẽde hym Another hath a swearde or an axe in hys honde, for al that is he nother able to defende hymselfe from battayl, nor fro murtherers.
By thys ye maye vnderstãde, that C they be no goddes: therfore se that ye nother worshyppe thẽ, nor fear them.
For lyke as a vessell that a man vseth, is nothynge worth when it is broken: euen so is it wyth theyr goddes. Whã they be set vp in the temple, theyr eyes be full of dust, thorow the fete of them that come in. And lyke as the dores are shut in rouñde about vpõ hym, ỹ hath offẽded ỹ kynge: Or as it were a dead body kepte besyde the graue: euen so the prestes kepe the dores wyth barres & lockes, lest theyr goddes be spoyled of the robbers. They set vp candels before thẽ (yee verely and that manye) wherof they can not se one, but euen as blockes, so stond they in the temple.
It is sayde, that the serpentes & wormes, which come of the earth gnawe out theyr hartes, eatynge them & theyr clothes also, and yet they fele it not.
Theyre faces are blacke, thorow the smoke that is in the tẽple. The oules, swalowes, and byrdes flye vpõ them, yee & the cattes rũne ouer theyr heads. D By this ye maye be sure, that they are not goddes, therfore fear them not The golde that they haue, is to make them bewtyfull: for all ỹ, except some bodye dyghte of theyr ruste, they wyll geue no shyne: & whan they were caste in to a fourme they felt it not. They are boughte for mony, & haue no breth of lyfe wythin them. * They must be Sap.14 borne vpon mens shulders, as those ỹ haue no fete: wherebye they declare vnto men that they be nothynge worth.
* Confounded be they then that wor- psal.114 shyp them. For yf they fal to ỹ grouñde, they cã not ryse vp agayn of thẽselues: Yee though one helpe them vp, and set thẽ ryght, yet are they not able to stãde alone: but muste haue proppes vnder them, lyke dead men. As for the thynge

Jere.10. that is offered vnto them, theyr prestes sell it, and abuse it: yee yͤ prestes wyues take therof, but vnto the sycke, & poore they geue nothynge of it, the womā yͭ chylde, & the menstruous laye handes of theyr offerynges. By this ye maye be sure, that they are no goddes, therfore be not ye afrayed of them. From whence commeth it thē, that they be called goddes? The women syt before the goddes of syluer, golde and wood, and the prestes syt in theyr temples, hauing open clothes, whose heades and beardes are shauen, and haue nothynge vpon theyr heades: roarynge and cryeng vpon theyr goddes, as mē do at yͤ feast when one is dead.

E The prestes also take awaye the garmentes of the ymages, & deck theyr wyues and chyldren withal. Whether it be good or euell that ony man do vnto them, they are not able to recompēce it: they can nother sette vp a kynge, nor put hym downe. In lyke maner they may nother geue ryches, nor rewarde

Eccle.5.a. euel. * Though a man make a vowe vnto them & kepe it not, they wyll not requyre it. They can not delyuer a man frō death, nother are they able to defēd the weake from the myghtye. They cā not restore a blynde man to his syghte, nor helpe ony man at his nede. They can shew no mercy to the wydowe, nor do good to the fatherlesse. Theyr goddes of wood, stone, gold and syluer, are but euē as other stones, that be hewen of the mountaynes. They that worshippe them, shalbe confounded. How shulde they then be taken for goddes? yet how dare mē call thē goddes? And though the Caldees [illegible] worshipped them not, hearynge [illegible] they were but domme & coulde [illegible]: Yet they themselues offre [illegible], and wolde fayne haue hym [illegible], as who say, they coulde fele [illegible] may not moue. But when they [illegible] come to vnderstōdynge, they shall [illegible] forsake them, for theyr goddes ha

F ue no felynge. A great sorte of wemen gyrded with coardes, syt in the stretes, and burne olyue beryes. Now yf one of them be conueyed awaye, and lye yͭ ony suche as come by: she casteth hyr nyghburesse in yͤ teth, because she was not so worthely reputed, nor hir coarde broken. What so euer is done for them, it is but in vayne and lost: How maye it thē be thought or sayd that they are goddes? Carpenters and goldsmythes make them, nother be they ony other thynge, but euē what the workmā wyl make them, Yee the goldsmythes them selues that make them, are of no longe continuaunce: How shulde then yͤ thynges that are made of them, be goddes? Wayne therfore are the thynges (yee very shame is it) that they leaue behynde them theyr posterite. For as soone as ther commeth ony warre or plage vpon them, then the prestes ymagyn where they may hyde them selues with them. How can men thinke then, that they be goddes which nother may defende thē selues from warre, nor delyuer thē frō myssfortune? For seynge they be but of wood, of stone, of syluer and of golde: all people and kynges shal knowe herafter, that they be but vayne thynges: yee it shalbe openly declared, that they be no goddes: but euē the very workes of mens hādes, and that God hath no thynge to do with them. They can set no kynge in the lande nor geue rayne vnto men. They can geue no sentēce of a matter, nother defende the londe frō wronge: For they are not able to do so much as a crowe, that flyeth betwixte heauen and earth.

G Whan ther happeneth a fyre in yͤ house of those goddes of wood, of syluer, and of gold, the prestes wyl escape and saue them selues, but the goddes burne as the balkes therin.

They can not withstōde ony kynge or battayll: how maye it then be thought or graūted, that they be goddes? Moreouer, these goddes of wood, of stone, of golde, and syluer maye nother defende them selues from theues nor robbers: yee the very wycked are stronger then they. These, stryppe thē out of theyr apparell, yͭ they be clothed withall, these take theyr golde and syluer from them, and so get them away: yet can they not helpe them selues. Therfore it is much better for a man, to be a kyng and so to shewe his power: or els a profytable vessell in a house, wherin he that oweth it, myght haue pleasure: yee or to be a dore in a house, to kepe suche thynges safe as be therin: then to be such a vayn god. The Sonne, the Moone, and all the starres whan they geue theyr shyne and lyght are obedient, & do mē good. Whan the lyghtnynge glystereth, al is clear: The wynde bloweth in euery cūtre, and whan God commaundeth the cloudes to go rounde about the whole worlde, they do as they are byddē: whā the fyre is sent downe from aboue and commaunded, it burneth vp hylles and woodes: But as for those goddes, they are not lyke one of these thynges, D nother in bewty nor strength. Wherfore men shulde not thynke, nor saye ÿ they be goddes, seynge they can nother geue sentence in iudgemēt, nor do men good For so much now as ye are sure, that they be no goddes, then feare thē not. For they can nother speake euell nor good of kynges. They can shewe no tokens in heauen for the Heythen, nother shyne as the Sōne, nor geue lyght as the Moone: yee the vnreasonable beastes are better then they: for they cā get them vnder the rofe, and do them selues good. So can ye be certifyed by no maner of meanes, that they be goddes: therfore feare them [illegible] For lyke as a fraybogarde in a garden of cucūbers kepeth nothynge, euē so are their goddes of wood, of syluer, & of golde: and lyke as a whyte thorne in an orcharde that euery byrde sytteth vpon: yee lyke as a dead bodye that is cast in the darcke. Euē so is it with those goddes of wood, syluer, and golde.

By the purple and scarlet whiche they haue vpon them, and soone faydeth awaye, ye may vnderstande, that they be no goddes: yee they themselues shalbe consumed at the last, which shalbe a great confusion of ÿ lande. Blessed is the godly man, that hath no ymages, and worshippeth none: for he shalbe farre frō reprofe.

A Arphaxat the kynge of the Medes subdued many people vnto his dominion, & buylded a noble stronge cytie, which he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of fre stone foure squared, seuentye cubytes hye, & thyrtye cubites brode. He made towres therupon of an hundreth cubytes hye. But vpō the foure corners euery syde was twentye foote brode. He made the portes in ÿ heyght, lyke as the towres This kyng trusted in his mighty hoost and in his glorious charrettes.

So in ÿ twelft yeare of his raigne it happened, that Nabuchodonosor ÿ kynge of the Assyrians (which raygned in the great cytie of Niniue) fought agaynst Arphaxat, and ouercame him in the great felde called Ragā, beside Euphrates and Tigris and [illegible] in ÿ felde of Erioch ÿ kyn[illegible] Elikes.

B Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, & his harte was lyfte vp: and he sent vnto all them that dwelt in Cilicia, in Damasco, and Libanus, and vnto the Heythen that dwelt in Carmel and Cedar, and to suche as dwelt in Galile in the great feld of Esdrelon, to all them that were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Iordane vnto Ierusalem and the whole lande of Iesse vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Unto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians sende messaungers. But they all with one cōsent wolde not agre vnto hym, & sente the messaungers agayne emptye, and put them awaye without honoure. Thē Nabuchodonosor the kyng toke indignacyon at al those landes, & sware by his trone and by his kyngdom, that he wolde be auenged of all these contrees.

In the .xiii. yeare of kynge Nabuchodonosor, vpon ÿ xxii. day of the fyrst moneth it was deuysed in ÿ courte of Nabuchodonosor ÿ king of the Assirians that he wolde defende hymselfe. So he called vnto hym al the elders, all his captaines & mē of warre and shewed them his secrete coūsel and trees, and caused the vynes to be cutte downe. And the feare of hym fel upon all them that dwelt on earth.

The.iii. Chapter.

¶ Dyuerse kynges and prynces yelde them selues for feare. The tyranny of Holofernes & pryde of the kynge. A

SO the kynges and prynces of all cyties and lādes sent theyr embassatours, name= ly, they of Siria and Me= sopotamia, Siria Sobal & Lybia & Celicia, which came to Holo= fernes, and sayde: Let thy wrath ceasse toward us: It is better for us to serue the great kynge Nabuchodonosor & our lyues, and to be subiecte unto ẏ, thē that we shuld dye and be slayne, and re ceaue greater hurte. All our cyties and possessions, all mountaynes and hylles all feldes, great and small cattel, shepe, goates, horses, and camels, all our goo des and [illegible]holdes, be in thy power, under th[illegible]ieccyon be it altogether.
We our selues also & our childrē wilbe thyn owne, come unto us a peaceable lorde, use our seruyce at thy pleasure.
Then came Holofernes downe frō B the mountaynes with horsemē & great power, and conquered al strong fensed cyties, and all that dwelt in the lande.
And out of al cyties he toke stronge mē and suche as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym. * Ther came such a feare Judit.5.a. also upon those contres, that ẏ indwel lers of al the cyties, the prynces and ru lers & the people together, wente forth to mete hym as he cam, & receaued him honorably with garlandes & torches, with daūses, tabrettes, and pypes.
Neuertheles though they dyd this, C yet myghte they not swage his rygo= rous stomacke: but he destroyed theyr cyties, & hewed downe theyr woodes.
For Nabuchodonosor the kynge had commaunded hym, that he shulde rote out all the goddes of the lande, to the intent that he onely [illegible]ht be called & taken for God, of th[illegible]cyons whiche Holofernes with his power broughte under hym. So wente he thorowe Si= ria Sobal, and thorow all Appamia, & al Mesopotamia, cam to ẏ Idumeans in the lande of Gabaa and Seytopoli and toke theyr cyties, & remayned there thyrtye dayes, wherin he caused al the whole multitude of his hoost to be ga= thered together.

The.iiii. Chapter.

¶ The Jewes are afrayed and care= full for Jerusalem and the tēple, make theyr landes strōge, prepare themselues to the battayll, call vpon God, and E-lyachim the prest comforteth them.

A Whan the chyldrē of Israell that dwelt in Jewry herd this, they were sore afraied of hym. Ther came suche tremblynge also and feare vpon them, that they sorowed he shuld do vnto the cytie of Jerusalem and the temple of the LORDE, as he hadde done to other cyties and their temples So they sent in to all Samaria rounde aboute vnto Jericho, toke in and occu pied all the toppes of the mountaynes made fast the townes & walles, & pre pared corne for thē agaynst yͤ battayll.
Elyachim also the prest wrote vnto all them that dwelt towarde Esdrelon (which lyeth ouer agaynst yͤ great felde by Dothaim) and vnto all those by whom men myght haue passage vnto them, yͭ they shulde take in yͤ wayes of the mountaynes, where ther myght be ony waye and passage to Jerusalē, and that they shuld hold diligēt watch. where ony straight waye was betwixt the mountaynes. And the chyldrē of Is rael dyd, as Eliachim the prest of the B LORDE had commaunded them.
Eccli.35.b *And all the people, cryed earnestly, & humbled their soules with fastynges & prayers, they and their wyues. The prestes put on heerie clothes, and layed the yonge babes before the temple of yͤ LORDE, and couered the aulter of the LORDE with an heerie cloth.
And with one accorde cryed they vnto the LORDE God of Israell, yͭ their childrē shulde not be geuē in to a praye, and their wyues in to a spoyle, yͭ their cyties shuld not be layed wayst, & that their Sanctuary shulde not be vnhalo wed and so they to be a shame & rebuk vnto the Heythen.
C Then Eliachim the hye prest of the LORDE wente rounde aboute al Is rael, and spake vnto them, sayenge: Be ye sure, that the LORDE wyll heare your peticyons, yf ye contynue stedfast in fastynges and prayers in the syghte of the LORDE. Remembre Moses Exo.17.c. the seruaūt of the LORDE, *which ouerthrewe thē Amalechites (that trusted in their myght and power, in their hoost, their shyldes, in their charrettes & horsmen) not with weapēs but with holy prayers. Euē so shall al yͤ enemyes of Israell be, yf ye contynue in this worke, that ye haue begonne. So vpon thys exhortaciō they cōtynued in praye er before the LORDE. In so much yͭ they which offred burntsacrifices vnto the LORDE offred the offerynges vnto yͤ LORD, beyng arayed in heery clothes, & had asshes vpō their heades.
And they all besought God from their whole harte, that he wolde vyset hys people of Israel.

The.v. Chapter.

Holofernes taketh indignaciō at yͤ chylderen of Israel, because they go aboute to defende themselues. Achior beareth wytnesse to the truth.

A And worde came to Holofernes the prince of yͤ war-res of yͤ Assyrians, that the chylderen of Israel prepared themselues to make resistaunce, and how they had stopped the wayes betwyxte the mountaynes.
Than was he exceadynge wroth, and called all the princes of Moab and the captaynes of Ammon, and sayde vnto them: Tell me, what people is thys yͭ kepeth the mountaynes? Or what maner of cyties are they? What is their power? Or what maner of hooste haue they? Who is their captayne?
And why do they despyse vs *more Judit.[illegible] than all those that dwel in the East, & come not forth to mete vs, that they myghte receaue vs wyth peace. Judit.[illegible] *Than Achior the captayne of al the Ammonites answered and sayde: Syr yf it please the to heare me, I wyl tell the truth before yͤ cōcernynge thys people that dwel in the mountaynes, & ther shal no lye go out of my mouth.
Thys people is of the generacion B of the Caldees, they dwelt fyrst in Me sopotamia: for they wolde not folowe the goddes of their fathers, that were in the lande of yͤ Caldees, & so forsoke they the costumes of their forefathers (which had many goddes) & worshypped one God, yͭ made heauē and earth: which also cōmaunded them that they *shulde go from thence, and dwell at Gene.11.[illegible] Haran. ‡ Nowe whan ther came a Gen.46.[illegible] derth in the whole lande, *they wente Exodi.1.a downe to Egypte: & there they dwelt *Act.7.[illegible] foure hūdreth yeares, in the which they Gala.3.[illegible] multiplyed so greatly, that their hoost myght not be nombred. * And whan Exodi.1.b the kynge of Egypte oppressed them, and.5.a and subdued thē in buyldynge of hys cyties, wyth makynge of claye & brick they cryed vnto God theyr LORDE, which punysshed the whole londe of E C gipte with dyuerse plages.

*Now whan the kynge of Egipt Exo.12.f. let them go theyr wayes, and the plage ceassed, *and then folowed after thē, Exo.14.b. to take them, and to brynge thē agayne in to his seruice: whyle they were fly= enge awaye, the God of heauē opened the see, so that the waters stode fast vp pon both the sydes as a wall, & these wente thorowe the botome of the see drye shod. In the which place whan an innumerable people of the Egipcyās folowed vpon them, they were so ouer whelmed with the waters, that ther re mayned not one, to tell them that cam after, how it happened.
So whan this people was passed D thorowe the reed see, they cam into the wyldernesse of moūt Sinai, where ne uer man myght dwell afore, and where no sonne of man had euer rested.
*There were the bytter waters made Exod.15.d swete for them that they might drynke *and forty yeares had they meate frō Exo.16.f. heauē. Where so euer they went (with Deu.8.a out bowe and arowe, without bukler or swearde) theyr God fought for thē, and caused them to haue the victory.
Yee no man was able to hurte this peo ple, excepte it were so, that they depar= ted vnfaythfully frō the worshippinge Jud.2.3.4 of the LORDE theyr God. *But as oft as they worshipped ony other besyde theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slaine, and to be put to confusyon. Neuerthelesse as ofte as they were sory for departynge frō the worshippe of theyr God, the same god of heauen gaue them power & strēgth to withstonde theyr enemyes.
*Moreouer they slewe the kynge E of the Cananites, Jebusites, Pherezi= Num.21.a tes, Hethites, Heuites, and Amorites, Josu.12. & al the myghtye in Hesebon, and toke theyr landes and cyties in possession: and so longe as they synned not in the syght of theyr God, it wente wel wt thē for theyr God hateth vnrygyteousnes 4.Re.25.a *For in tymes past whā they wēt out of ye way, which God had geuen thē, yt they shulde walke in it, they were de= stroyed in dyuerse battayles of many nacyons, and many of thē were caryed

1.Esd.1.a tre. *But now lately they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the LORD theyr God, and are come together a= gayne out of the contrees where they were scattred abrode: & thus haue they conquered these mountaynes & dwell therin: & as for Jerusalem where theyr Sāctuary is, they haue it agayn in pos session.
And therfore my lorde make diligēt F inquisicyon, yf this people haue done wickednesse in the syght of theyr God, then let vs go vp agaynst thē: for dout les theyr God shall delyuer them in to thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power. But yf this people haue not dis pleased theyr God, we shall not be able to withstande thē, *for theyr God shal Judi.6.c. defende them, & so shall we be a shame to all the worlde.
Now whan Achior hadde spoken out these wordes all the prynces of Ho lofernes were wroth, and thought to slaye hym, & sayd one to another what is he this, which darre saye, that ye chil dren of Israell are able to withstonde Nabuchodonosor ye kyng & his hoost? where as they are an vnwapened peo= ple, without strength and vnderstan= dynge of the feates of warre? That A= chior therfore may knowe, that he hath deceaued vs, we wyl go vp into ye moū taynes: and whan the myghtye men of them are taken, he also shalbe stickte wt the swearde, that all the people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, and that ther is none other without hym.

The.vi.Chapter.

Achior for tellynge the trueth is ta= ken and delyuered vnto the people of ye Jewes: vnto whom he telleth all the matter, which moued the people to cry vpon God.

SO whan they had lefte of A speaking, Holofernes toke sore indignacyon, and sayd vnto Achior: For so muche as thou hast prophecied vn to vs, sayenge: *that the people of Is Judi.5.f rael shalbe defēded of theyr God, I wil shewe the, that ther is no God but Na buchodonosor. Yee whan we slaye thē al as one man, thou also shalte perysshe with them thorowe the swearde of the Assyrians, & al Israel shalbe destroyed with the, and then shalt thou fele yt Na buchodonosor is the lorde of ye whole earth. Then shall the swearde of my knyghthode go thorow thy sydes, and thou shalt fal downe stickte amōge the woūded of Israel, and shalt not come to thy selfe agayne, but be utterly destroyed with them. But yf thou thyn-kest thy prophecye to be true, why dost thou then chaunge thy coloure? why art thou afrayed? Thynkest thou that my wordes are not able to be perfour-B med? But that thou mayeste knowe, that thou shalt fele these thinges with them, beholde, from this houre forth wyll I sende the unto yonder people, ẏ whan the punyshment of my swearde (which they haue worthely deserued) falleth upon them, thou mayest be punyshed with them.

So Holofernes commaunded his seruauntes to take Achior, and to cary hym unto Bethulia, and to deliuer hym in to the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then Holofernes seruaũtes toke hym, and went thorow the playne feld.
But whan they drewe they nye unto ẏ mountaynes, the slyngcasters came out agaynst them: Neuerthelesse they gat them awaye by the syde of ẏ moũ-tayne, and bound Achior hande & foote to a tre, and so left hym boũde and tur ned agayne unto theyr lorde.

Notwithstondynge the chyldren of Israel wente downe from Bethu-lia, came unto hym, lowsed hym, brought hym to Bethulia, set hym in ẏ myd dest of the people, and axed hym what the matter was, that the Assyrians had left hym bounde.

C Osias the sonne of Micha of the trybe of Simeõ, and Charmini (which is also called Gothoniel) were the prin cypall rulers at the same tyme. Now whan Achior stode in the myddest of ẏ Senatours, and before thẽ all, he tolde Judit.5.b. them, * what answere he gaue Holofernes, to the thynge that he axed hym, & how Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayenge and how Ho lofernes hymselfe was wroth, and cõmaunded hym for the same cause to be delyuered unto ẏ Israelites: that whã he ouercame the chyldren of Israel, he myght cõmaunde Achior also to be put Judit.5.c to death with dyuerse tormentes, because he sayd: * the God of heauen is theyr defender.

And whan Achior had playnely tolde out all these thynges, all ẏ people fel downe upon theyr faces, praysynge the LORD, poured out theyr prayers together unto ẏ LORD, with a generall cõplaynte & weppynge, & sayde: O LORDE God of heauen & earth, be-holde theyr pryde, & loke upõ our lowe lynesse, & consydre how it standeth wt thy sayntes, & make it to be knowẽ, ẏ thou forsakest not those, whiche holde them fast by the, & that thou bryngest thẽ lowe, that presume of them selues, & make theyr boast in theyr owne stre-gth. So whan the weppynge & prayer D of the people (whiche they had made ẏ whole daye longe) was ended, they cõ-forted Achior sayenge: the God of oure fathers, whose power and strength ẏ hast praysed, shall so rewarde the, that thou shalt rather se theyr destruccyon.
Whan the LORDE oure God then shall geue his seruauntes this lyberty, God be with the also amonge us: so ẏ yf it please the, thou with thyn mayest dwell with us.

Now whan Osias had ended the cousel, he toke hym in to his house, and made a great supper, called all the Elders to it, and so they refreshed thẽ sel-ues after the fastynge, And afterward was al ẏ people called together, which made theyr prayers all the nyght longe in the congregacyon, and besought the God of Israel, for helpe.

The.vii.Chapter.

Holofernes layth sege to Bethulia,
The chyldren of Israel crye upõ God, Holofernes taketh the water frõ thẽ, so that they in ẏ cytie haue great thyrst & are unpacient. Osias cõforteth thẽ, & appoineth v. dayes to ẏ grace of God

The next day Holofernes cõ A maũded his hoost, to go up agaynst Bethulia. * Thei Judit.11 were an.C.and.xx.thousãd fyghtynge men on foote, & two and twenty thousande horsemen, besyde the preparynge of them ẏ were wonne, and cam to them on euery syde out of the contres and cyties which he had taken. All these prepared them sel ues unto the battayll agaynst the Isra elites, and came on by the hyll syde, unto the toppe that loketh ouer agaynst Dothaim, from the place which is cal led Belma, unto Chelmon that lyeth to warde Esdrelon.

Now whan the chyldren of Israel B saw so great multitude of the Assiriãs they fell downe flat upon the groũde, strowed ashes upon theyr heades, and prayed with one accorde, ẏ the God of Israel wolde shewe his mercy upõ his people. And so they toke theyr weapẽs & sat betwixte the moũtaynes in ẏ na-rowe plete, and kepte the waye, day & nyghte. But whyle Holofernes was goynge aboute, he founde the water sprynge, which frō the south syde was conueyed in to the cytye by a coudyte: thys commaunded he to be directe ano ther waye, and to cut theyr condite in sunder. Ther were welles also not far from the walles, whiche they vsed se-cretelye, more for pleasure then for ne-cessyte.

C Then wente the Ammonytes, and the Moabytes vnto Holofernes, and sayde: The chylderen of Israell truste nother in speare nor arowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes, & hylles. That thou mayeste ouercome them therfore wythoute the stry-kynge of the ony battayll, set men to kepe the welles, that they draw no wa ter out of them: so shalt thou destroye them wythout swearde, or at the leaste they shall be so feble, that they muste be fayne to geue ouer the cytye, whiche they thynke not able to be wonne, for so muche as it lyeth in y mountaynes.
These wordes pleased Holofernes Judi.16.a well and all hys men of war, and * he set an hundrethe men at euerye well rounde aboute.
D And whan thys watch had endured twentye dayes, the cysternes and all springes that had water, fayled thē that dwelt in the cytye of Bethulia, so that in the whole cytye they hadde not drynke ynough for one day, for the peo ple had water geuen them daylye in a measure. Then came the men and women, yonge personnes and chylderen, all vnto Osias, and sayde al with one Gen.17.a voyce: * God be iudge betwen vs and the, for thou haste dealte euel with vs: thou woldeste not speake peaceably w the kynge of the Assyryans, therfore hath God solde vs in theyre handes, & ther is no man to helpe vs, where as we are broughte downe before theyre eyes in thyrste and greate destruccyon.
Therfore gather nowe together al the people that be in the cytye, that we may all yelde oure selues wyllyngly vnto y people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captyue and prayse the LORDE wyth oure lyues, then to be slayne and peryshe, & to be laughed to scorne & shamed of euery man whan we se oure wyues and chyldren dye be fore our eyes. We take heauen & earth thys daye to recorde, & the God of our fathers (which punysheth vs accordig to the deseruynge of oure synnes) and geue you warnynge, that ye geue vp y cytye nowe in to the power of Holofernes hooste, that oure ende maye be shorte wyth the swearde, whiche els shall endure longe for wante of water and for thyrste.
Whan they had spoken oute these E wordes, ther was a greate weppynge, & howlynge in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man, and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto God with one voyce, sayenge: * we haue synned Psal.105.a with our fathers, we haue don amysse we haue dealte wyckedlye. Thou that arte gracious, haue mercye vpon vs, punyshe oure vnryghteousnesse wyth thyne owne scourge, and geue not tho se ouer that knowlege the, vnto a people whiche knoweth the not, leste they saye amonge the Heythen: * where is Psa.113.b theyr God?
And whan they were so werye wyth thys cryenge and weppynge, that they helde theyr tunges, Osias stode vp wyth watrye eyes, and sayde: * O Judi.8.b. take good hartes vnto you (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet these fyue dayes for mercye of the LORDE: peraduenture he shall cut awaye hys indignacyon, and geue glorye vnto hys name. But yf he helpe vs not whan these fyue dayes are past, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

The.viii. Chapter.

¶ Judith reproueth the elders that set a tyme to the mercye of God: she ex horteth the people to amendemente, & to prayer, rehearseth the benefytes of God, and telleth them hyr deuyce.

And it happened whan the- A se wordes came to the cares of Judith a wyddow, whiche was the doughter of Merary, the sonne of Idor, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Osias, the sonne of Elai, the sonne of Jamnor, the sonne of Jedeon, the sonne of Raphoim, the sonne of Achi-tob, the sonne of Melchia, the sonne of Enam, the sonne of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiell, the sonne of Symeon, the son of Ruben. And hyr husbande was called Manasses, whiche dyed in the daye of the barlye harueste. For whyle he was byndynge the sheaues together in the felde, the heate came vpō his heade, and he dyed at Bethulia hys cytye, and there was he buryed besyde hys fathers. Nowe B was Judith hys desolate wydow thre yeares and syxe monethes. And in the hygher partes of hyr house she made hyrself a preuy chābre, where she dwelt beynge closed in wyth hyr maydens. She dyd weare a smocke of heere, and fasted all the dayes of hyr lyfe, excepte the Sabbathes, and new moones and the solempne dayes that the people of Israell kepte. She was a fayre and bewtyfull personne. Hyr husbande also had lefte her greate rythes, a plenteous housholde, great vnmoueable possessions and many cattell. Thys Judith was a woman of a verye good reporte wyth euery one, for she feared the LORDE greatlye, and ther was no bodye that spake an euell worde of her.

Whan thys Judith herde, howe Osias had promysed ẏ people, * that after the fyft daye he wolde geue vp ẏ cytye vnto the Assyryans, she sente for the elders Chambry and Charmin: and whan they came to her, she sayde: what thynge is thys, wherein Osias hath cōsented, that yf God helpe not wythyn fyue dayes, he wyll geue ouer the cytie to the Assirians? What are ye, that ye tempte the LORDE? Thys deuyce optayneth no mercye of God, but prouoketh hym vnto wrath & displeasure. Wyll ye set the mercye of the LORDE a tyme, and appoynt him a daye after youre wyll?

C Neuerthelesse for so muche as the LORDE is patient, let vs rather amende oure selues pourynge oute teares, and beseking him for grace. * For God threateneth not as a man, nother wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as ẏ chylderen of men. And therfore let vs hartelye fall down before hym & serue hym wyth a meke sprete, and wyth weppynge eyes saye vnto the LORDE, that he deale wyth vs accordyng to hys owne wyll and mercy: that lyke as oure harte is now vexed, & broughte lowe thorowe the pryde of them. It may so be comforted thorow his grace in so muche as we folowe not the synnes of oure fathers, whiche forsoke theyr God, and worshypped other goddes: * For the whiche synne they peryshed wyth the swearde, were spoy-led and broughte to shame of all theyre enemyes. As for vs, we knowe none other God, but onelye hym, for whose comforte let vs tarye wyth mekenesse. * He shall requyre and make inquysycyon for oure bloude, from the vexacyons of oure enemyes: he shall brynge downe all the Heythen, that ryse vp agaynste vs, and put them to dyshonoure, euen the LORDE oure God.

D Therfore deare brethren, seynge ye are the honorable and elders in ẏ people of God, vnto whome al the people haue respecte, and vpon whom the lyfe of the people stondeth, lyfte vp theyre hartes wyth youre exhortacyon, that they may cal to remembraunce, * how oure fathers also in tymes paste were tempted, that they myghte be proued, yf they worshypped theyr god a right. They ought to remembre, * how our father Abraham beynge tempted, and tryed thorowe manye trybulacyons, was founde a louer and frend of god, so was * Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, ‡ and all they that pleased God, beynge tryed thorowe manye troubles, were found stedfast in faith. Agayne they that receaued not theyre temptacyons ī the feare of God, but put thēselues forth wyth vnpacyencye and murmurynge agaynste God, * peryshed of the destroyer, and were slayn of serpentes. And therfore shulde not we vndertake to be auenged, for the thyng that is done vnto vs: but to consydre, that all these punishementes are farre lesse then oure synnes and mysdedes: Beleuynge also, * that thys correcyon commeth vnto vs (as to the seruauntes of God) for amendement, and not for oure destruccyon.

E Then sayde Osias and the elders vnto Judith: All that thou speakeste, is true, and no man can reproue thy wordes. Praye thou for vs therfore vnto God, for thou arte an holy woman, and fearest god. And Judith sayd vnto them: * Seynge ye knowe, that my wordes are of God, then proue my counsell and deuyce. yf it be of God, and beseke God, that he wyll brynge my counsell to a good ende.

¶ Judith goeth in to hyr oratory, and prayeth feruentlye vnto God, for the delyueraunce of hyr people.

A Now whan they were gone theyr waye, Judith wente in to hyr oratory, put on an heery smock, strowed ashes vpon hyr heade, fell down before the LORDE, and cryed vnto hym, sayenge: O LORDE God of my father Symeon* which gauest hym a swearde for a defence agaynste the enemyes, that vsed violence & wylfulnesse, and that rauyshed the virgyn and put her to dyshonestye. (Gen.34.d) Thou that gauest theyr wyues in to a praye, and theyr doughters in to captyuyte, and al theyr praye for a spoyle vnto thy seruauntes, whiche hare a zele vnto the: helpe me wydowe O LORDE my God, I beseke the. For thou haste done all thynges from the beginnyng, and loke what thou hast taken in hād and deuysed, it came euer to passe. For al thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgementes are done in euerlastyng foreknowlege. O loke now vpon the armyes of the Assirians,* like as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpō the hooste of the Egypcyans, whan they beynge weapened, persecuted thy seruauntes, and put theyr truste in theyre charrettes, horsmen, and in the multytude of theyr men of warre: But thou lokedeste vpon theyr hooste, castynge a thyck darcknesse befor them: and whan they came in to the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them. (Exo.14.c)

B Euen so LORDE let it go with these, that truste in the power and multytude of theyr men of warre, in theyr charrettes, arowes and speares, and knowe not, that thou onely arte oure God,* which destroyest warres from the begynnynge, & that thou art the LORDE. (Psa.45.b.) O lyfte vp thyne arme now lyke as euer from the begynnyng and in thy power brynge theyr power to naught, cause theyr myghte to fal in thy wrath. They make theyre boaste that they wyll vnhalowe and defyle thy Sanctuarye, and to wayste the tabernacle of thy name, & to cast downe the horne of thyne aulter wyth theyre swearde. Brynge to passe (O LORDE) that the pryde of ŷ enemy may be cut downe wyth hys owne swearde: that he maye be taken wyth the snare of hys eyes in me, & that thou mayeste smyte hym with the lyppes of my loue O geue me a stedfaste mynde, that I maye despyse hym and hys strengthe, and that I maye destroye hym.

C Thys shall brynge thy name an euerlastynge remembraunce,* yf the hande of a woman ouerthrowe hym. ‡ For thy power (O LORDE) stondeth not in the power of men, nother hast thou eny pleasure in the strength of horses. Ther was neuer proude person that pleased the, but in ŷ prayer of the humble and meke, hath thy pleasure bene euermore. (Judic.4.d and.5.d. ‡2 pa.14.c 16.b.20.a. Judi 7.a. Ps.146.b)

O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and LORDE of all creatures, heare me poore woman, callynge vpon the, and puttynge my truste in thy mercye.* Remembre thy couenaunt O LORDE, and mynyster wordes in my mouthe, and stablyshe thys deuyce in my harte, that thy house maye contynue styll in holynesse, and that all the Heythen maye knowe and vnderstond, that thou arte God, and that ther is none other but thou. (Eccl.36.a.)

The.x.Chapter.

¶ Judith decketh herselfe of the beste fashion taketh hyr mayden wyth her, and goeth forth by nyghte in to Holofernes tente.

A And whan she had lefte of cryenge to the LORDE, she rose vp from the place, where she had lyen flat before the LORDE, and called hyr mayden, wente downe in to hyr house, layed the heerye cloth from her,* put of the garmentes of hyr wydowhode, washed hyr bodye, anoynted herselfe wyth precyous thynges of swete sauoure, broyded and plated hyr heere, set an hoode vpon hyr heade, & (Judi.16.)

put on such apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slyppers vpon hir fete, armelettes, spanges, earynges, fyngerrynges, and decke herselfe wyth al hyr beste araye.

The LORDE gaue her also a special bewty and fayrnesse (for al this deckynge of hyrselfe was not done for ony voluptuousnesse, and pleasure of the fleshe, but of a ryghte dyscrecyon and vertue, therfore dydde the LORDE increase hyr bewtye) so that she was exceadynge amiable and well fauoured ind all mens eyes. She gaue hyr mayde also a bottell of wyne, a pot wyth oyle, pottage, cakes, bread, and chese, and wente hyr waye.

B Nowe whan she came to the port of the cytye, she founde Osias and the elders of the cytye waytynge there. Which whan they saw her, they were astonnyed, and maruayled greatlye at hyr bewtye, neuerthelesse they axed no questyon at her, but let her go sayenge: The god of oure fathers geue the hys grace, and wyth hys power perfourm all the deuyce of thyne harte: that Jerusalem may reioice ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holye and ryghteous. And all they that were there, sayde wyth one voyce: so be it, so be it. Judith made hyr prayer vnto the LORDE, and wente oute at the porte, she and hyr mayde.

And as she was goynge downe ẏ mountayne, it happened that aboute ẏ sprynge of the daye, the spyes of the Assyryans met wyth her, and toke her, sayenge: whence commest thou? Or whyther goest thou? She answered: I am a doughter of ẏ Hebrues, and am fled from them, for I know, that they shall be geuen vnto you to be spoiled: because they thought scorn to yeld thẽselues vnto you, that they might fynde mercye in youre syghte. Therfore haue I deuysed by my selfe after thys maner: I wyll go before the prynce Holofernes, and tell hym all theyr secretes, and wyll shewe hym, howe he maye come by them, and wynne them, so that not one man of hys hooste shall perysshe.

C And whan these men had herde hyr wordes, and consydered hyr fayre face, they were astonnyed (for they wõdred at hyr excellente bewtye) and sayd vnto her: Thou haste saued thy lyfe by fyndynge oute thys deuyce, that thou woldest come downe to oure lord: and be thou sure, that whan thou commeste vnto hym, he shall intreate the well, and thou shalte please hym hartelye. So they broughte her in to Holofernes pauylyon, and tolde him of her. Nowe whan she came in before hym, immediatlye he was ouercome and taken wyth hyr bewtye. Then sayde hys seruauntes: who wolde despyse ẏ people of the Jewes, that haue so fayr women? Shulde we not by reason fyghte agaynste them for these? So whan Judith sawe Holofernes syttynge in a canappe, that was wroughte of purple, sylke, golde, smaragde, and precyous stones, she loked fast vpon hym, & fell downe vpon ẏ earth. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp agayn, at theyr lordes commaundemente.

Judith telleth Holofernes the cause of hyr commynge, which pleaseth hym well.

Then sayde Holofernes vnto her. Be of good chere, and feare not in thyn hart for I neuer hurted man, that wolde serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge. As for thy people, yf they had not despysed me, I shulde not haue lyfte vp a speare agaynste them. But tell me nowe, what is the cause that thou arte departed from them, and wherfore arte thou come vnto vs? A

And Judith sayde vnto hym: Syr vnderstonde the wordes of thy handmayden: For yf thou wylt do after the wordes of thy handemayden the LORDE shall brynge thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truely as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of the lond lyueth, and as truely as his power lyueth, whiche is in the to ẏ punyshemente of all men that go wrong, all men shall not onelye be subdued vnto hym thorow the, but all the beastes also of the felde. For all people speake of thy prudente actiuyte, and it hathe euer bene reported, howe thou onelye arte good and myghty in all hys kyngdome, and thy dyscrecyon is commended in all londes.

reason of our synne) that he hath shew ed by hys prophetes vnto the people, how that for theyr synnes he wyll delyuer them ouer vnto theyr enimye. And for so muche as the chyldren of Israel knowe ỹ they haue so displeased theyr god, they are sore afrayed of the. They suffre great honger also, and for want of water, they are dead now in a maner. Morouer, they are appoynted to slaye all theyre cattell, that they maye drynke the bloude of them: and are purposed to spende all the holye ornamentes of theyr God (whiche he hath forbydden them to touch) for corne, wyne and oyle. Seynge now ỹ they do these thinges, it is a playne case, ỹ they must

C nedes be destroied. Which whan I thy handmayden perceaued, I fled from them, and the LORDE hath sente me vnto the, to shew the these things. For I thy handmayden worship God euen here now besyde the, and thy handmayden shal go forth, and I wil make my prayer vnto God, and he shall tell me, whan he wyll rewarde them theyr synne: then shall I come and shewe the and bryng ỹ thorow the myddest of Ierusalem, so that thou shalt haue all the people of Israell as the shepe without a shepherde: ther shall not so muche as one dogge barck agaynst the, for these thynges are shewed me by the prouydence of God: and for so much as God is displeased wyth them, he hath sente me to tell the the same.

D These wordes pleased Holofernes and all his seruauntes, which maruayled at the wysedome of her, and sayde one to another: ther is not suche a woman vpon earth, in bewtye and discrecyon of wordes. And Holofernes sayd vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hyther before thy people, that thou mayest geue them in to oure handes. And for so muche as thy promyse is good, yf thy God perfourme it vnto me, he shall be my God also, and thou shalte be excellente and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shall be spoken of in all the londe.

B Iudi. 8 ¶ Holofernes commaūdeth to intreate her well, and geueth her libertye to go in and oute to hyr prayer, maketh a greate supper, byddeth her to it, and is dronken.

A Then commaunded he her to go in where hys treasure laye, and charged that she shulde haue hyr dwellyng there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from hys table. Iudith answered hym, and sayde: *As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate Gene. 34. f of it as now (lest I displease my God) but I wyll eate of suche as I haue brought wyth me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: Yf these thinges that thou haste broughte wt the, fayle, what shal we do vnto the? And Iudith saide: As truelye as thou lyueste my lorde, thy handmayden shall not spende all thys, tyll God haue broughte to passe in my hande, the thynge that I haue deuysed.

B So hys seruauntes broughte her in to the tent, where as he had appoynted. And as she was goynge in, she desyred that she myghte haue leue to go forth by nyght and before daye, to hyr prayer, and to make intercessyon vnto the LORDE. Then commaunded Holofernes hys chamberlaynes: that she shulde go oute and in at hyr pleasure, to praye vnto hyr God those thre dayes.

And so in the nyghte season she wente forth in to the valleye of Bethulia, and washed herselfe in the welwater. Then wente she vp, and besoughte the LORDE God of Israel that he wolde prospere hyr waye, for the delyueraunce of hys people. And so she went in, and remained clene in hyr tēt, tyll she toke hyr meate in the euenyng.

C Upon the fourthe daye it happened, that Holofernes made a costly supper vnto hys seruauntes, and sayd vnto Vagao hys chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and counsell thys Hebrewesse, that she maye be wyllynge to consente to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyryans, that a woman shuld so laugh a man to scorn, that she were come from hym vnmedled wythall.

Then wente Vagao vnto Iudith, and sayde: Let not the good doughter be afrayed, to come in to my lorde, that she maye eate, and drynke wyne, and be merye wyth hym. Unto whome Iudith answered: Who am I, that I shulde saye my Lorde naye? what so euer is good before hys eyes, I shall do it? and loke what is hys pleasure, that shall I thynke well done, as long as I lyue.

D So she stode vp, and deckte her selfe wyth hyr apparell, and wente in= and stode before hym. And Holofer= nes harte was whole moued, so that he brente in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayd vnto her: drynke now and syt downe, and be merye, for thou haste founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll drynke, for my mynde is merver to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke and ate and dranke befor hym, the thynges that hyr mayden had prepared for her.
And Holofernes was merye wyth her, and dranke more wyne, then euer he dydde afore in hys lyfe.

For lo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde, and hath no heade.

Holofernes hoost are out of theyr wyttes after hys death, the Israelytes folowe vpon them, the other cytyes of Israell helpe them, they wynne greate spoyles, and commende Judith.

A Nowe whan all the hooste herd that Holofernes was headed, theyre mynde, and counsell fell from them: & such a feare came vpon thē that they undertoke to defende them selues by flyenge awaye: one spake not to another, but hanged downe theyre heades, lefte all behynde them, & made hayste to escape from the Hebrues: for they herde, that they were haystynge to com after with theyr weapens, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes and thorowe all the foote pathes of the dayles.

And whan the chyldren of Israell sawe that they fled, thy folowed vpō them, and went downe wyth trompettes, blowynge and makynge a greate crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no ordre, and kepte not them selues together, but fled theyr waye. Neuerthelesse the chyldrern of Israell fell vpon them wyth one companye, and ordre, and dyscomfyted as manye as they myghte get. And Ozias sente messaungers vnto all the cytyes and contryes of Israell.

B So all the regions and euery cytye sente oute theyre beste men after them in harnesse, and smote them wyth the swearde, tyll they came to ye vttemooste parte of theyr borders. And Joachym the hyghe prest at Jerusalem, cam to Bethulia wyth al the elders, that they myghte se Judith.

C Nowe whan she came oute vnto them, they beganne all to prayse her wt one voyce, sayenge: thou worshyppe of the cytye of Jerusalem, thou ioye of Israell, thou honour of our people, thou hast done manlye, and thy harte is cōforted, because thou haste loued clenlynesse, and chastyte, and haste knowne no man but thyne own husbande: therfore hath the hande of the LORDE comforted the, and blessed shalte thou be for euer. And all the people sayde: so be it, so be it.

was ioyfull, as the vse is: and this ioye by reason of the victory with Judith, endured thre monethes.

So after theses dayes euery man wente home agayne & Judith was in great reputaciõ at Bethulia, & ryght honorably takẽ in al the lãde of Israel.
Unto hir vertue also was chastite ioyned, so that after hir husband Manas-shippe. She dwelt in hir husbandes house an hundreth and fyue yeare, and lefte hir handmayden fre, and dyed, & was buryed besyde hir husbande in Be-thulia. * And all the people mourned Gene.50.d for her seuen dayes. So longe as she ly-ued, ther was none that troubled Israell, and many yeares also after hyr death.

The daye wherin this victory was gotten, was solemly holden, and rekethe holy dayes, and is yet greatly holden of the Jewes euer sence, vnto this daye.

The Chapters in the boke of Hester, which are not founde in the texte of the Hebrue, but in the Greke and Latyn.

The .xi. Chapter after the Latyn.

¶ In this Chapter is descrybed the dreame of Mardocheus.

MArdocheus the sonne B of Jayr, the sonne of 1 Hester.2.a Semey, the sonne of Cisey of the trybe of Ben Jamin a Jewe, which had his dwellynge in Susis, a mã of great reputacyon, & excellent amonge al them ẏ were in ẏ kynges court (Neuertheles he was one of the presoners, * whom Nabucho- 4.re.24 b donosor the kynge of Babilon, had ca- Jere.24.a ryed awaye frõ Jerusalẽ vnto Babilõ with Jechonias the kynge of Juda)

In the seconde yeare of the raygne of great Artaxerses in the fyrst day of the moneth Nisan had this Mardocheus suche a dreame: he thought he herde a great tempest, horrible thōderclappes, earthquakes, and great vproure in the lande: and that he sawe two great dra gons, ready to fyght one agaynst ano= B ther. Theyr crye was great. At ẏ which roarynge and crye al Heythen were vp to fyght agaynst the ryghteous people.
And the same daye was full of darck= nesse, and very vncleare, ful of trouble, and anguyshe, yee a great fearfulnesse was ther in al the lāde. The ryghteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euell that was deuysed ouer them and were at a poynt with them selues to dye. So they cryed vnto God, and whyle they were cryeng, the lytle welle grew in to a great ryuer and in to ma= ny waters. And with that it is was daye, and the Sonne rose vp agayne.
And the lowly were exalted, & deuou= red the glorious and proude.

Now whā Mardocheus had sene this dreame, he awoke and mused sted= fastly in his hart, what God wold do: and so he desyred to knowe all the mat ter: and his mynde was ther vpon vn= tyll the nyght.

The.xii. Chapter.

In this chapter is declared, howe Mardocheus vttereth the treason of the two seruaūtes agaynste the kynge, and therfor doth the kynge rewarde hym.

A At ẏ same tyme dwelt Mar docheus with Bagatha, & Thares the kynges chāber laynes and porters of ẏ pa Hester.1.d and.6.a. lace. *But whan he herde theyr deuyce, and had diligently consy= dered theyr ymaginacyons, he percea= ued that they wente about to laye theyr cruel handes vpon the kynge Artaxer= ses: and so he certified the kynge ther= of. Then caused the kynge to examen the two gelded with tormentes. And whan they had graunted it, they were put to death.
B This the kynge caused to be put in the Cronicles for an euerlastynge re= membraunce, and Mardocheus wrote vp the same matter. So the kynge cō= maunded, that Mardocheus shulde do seruyce in the court, and for this fayth fulnesse of his, he gaue hym a rewarde But Aman the sonne of Amadathi the Agathite, whiche was holden in greate honoure and reputacyon in the kynges chamberlaynes ẏ were put to death.

made lorde ouer many people, and had subdued the whole earth vnto my do= mynion, my mynde was not with cru= eltye and wronge to exalte my selfe by the reason of my power: but purposed with equite alwaye and gentylnesse, to gouerne those that be vnder my iuris= diccyon, & wholy to set in a peaceable lyfe, & therby to bryng my kyngdom in tranquillite, that men myght safely go thorow on euery syde, & to renue peace agayne, which all men desyre. Now B whan I axed my counselers, howe these thynges myghte be broughte to a good ende, ther was one by vs, excel lent in wysedome, whose good wyll, trueth and faythfulnesse hath ofte ben shewed and proued, (whiche was also ẏ pryncypall & next to the kynge) Aman by name, which certified vs, how that in all landes ther was crepte in a rebel lious folk, that made statutes & lawes agaynst all other people, and haue al= waye despysed the proclamed cōmaun dements of kynges: and how that for this cause it wer not to be suffred, that such rule shulde continue by you & not to be put downe. Seynge now we per= ceaue the same that this people alone are contrarye vnto euery man, vsynge C straunge and other maner of lawes, & withstande oure statutes and doynges and go aboute to stablysh shrewd ma= ters, that our kyngdome shulde neuer come to good estate and stedfastnesse.

Therfore haue we commaunded, that all they that are appoynted in wrytyng and shewed vnto you by Aman (which is ordeyned and set ouer all our busynes, and the moost pryncypall next vnto the kyng, and in maner as a father) shall with theyr wyues and chyldren be destroyed, & roted out with ye swearde of theyr enemyes and aduersaries: and that ther shalbe no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And thys shalbe done ye xiiii. day of the moneth called Adar, of this yeare, that they which of old (and now also) haue euer bẽ rebellious, may in one daye wt violence be thrust downe in to the hell, to the intent yt after this maner, oure Empyre maye haue peace and tranquillite.

D But ✠ Mardocheus thought vpõ al the workes & noble actes of ye LORDE and made his prayer vnto hym, sayenge: O LORDE LORD, thou valeaunt and all myghtye kynge (for all thynges are in thy power, and yf yu wylt helpe and delyuer Israell, ther is no man that can withstond nor let the: for thou hast made heauen and earth, and what wonderous thynge so euer is vnder the heauen: thou art LORD of all thynges, and ther is no man that can resyste the O LORDE.) Thou knowest all thynges, yu wotest LORDE, that it was nother of malyce, nor presumpcyon, nor for ony desyre of glorye, that I wolde not bowe downe my selfe nor worshippe yonder proude presumptuous Aman (for I wolde haue ben content, and that with good wyll, yf it myght haue don Israel ony good, to haue kyst euen his footsteppes) but that I dyd it, because I wold not sette the honoure of a man in the steade of ye E glorye of God, & because I wold worshippe none but only the my LORD. And thus haue I done of no pryde nor presumpcyon.

And therfore O LORDE thou God and kynge, haue mercy vpon thy people for they ymagyn how they may brynge vs to naught, yee theyr mynde and desyre is to destroye and to ouerthrowe the people, that hath euer bene thyne enheritaunce of olde. O despyse not thy porcyon, which thou haste delyuered, and broughte out of Egypte for thyne owne selfe. Heare my prayer, and be mercyfull vnto thy people, whom thou hast chosẽ for an heretage vnto thyselfe. Turne our complaynt and sorow in to ioy, that we may lyue O LORDE, and prayse thy name. O LORDE, suffre not the mouthes of them that prayse the, to be destroyed.

All the people of Israell in lyke maner cryed as earnestly as they could vnto the LORDE, for theyr deathe, and destruccyon stode before theyre eyes.

Of the sorow complaynt and prayer of quene Hester.

Quene Hester also beynge in the battayll of death, resorted vnto the LORD, layed awaye hyr glorious apparell, and put on the garmentes that serued for syghynge, & mournynge. In the steade of precious oyntement, she scattred asshes & donge vpon hyr heade: & as for hyr bodye, she humbled it, and brought it very low. All the places where she was wont to haue ioye afore, those fylled she wyth the heere, that she plucte out of herselfe. She prayed also vnto the LORDE God of Israell wyth these wordes: A

O my LORDE, thou onely art oure kynge, helpe me desolate woman, whiche haue no helper but the, for my mysery and destruccion is harde at my hand. ✻ Fro my youth vp I haue herd oute of the kynred of my father, that thou tokest Israell from amonge all people (and so haue oure fathers of theyre forelders) that they shulde be thy perpetuall inheritaunce, and loke what thou diddest promyse them, thou hast made it good vnto them. Deut.4.c. and.7.a

Now well LORDE we haue B synned before ye, ✻ therfor hast thou geuen vs in to the handes of oure enemyes, because we worshypped theyr goddes. LORDE thou arte ryghteous. Neuerthelesse it satisfyeth them not, that we are in bytter and heuye captiuyte, and oppressed amonge them, but thou haste layed theyre handes vpon ye handes of their goddes: so that they begynne to take awaye the thynge, that thou wyth thy mouth haste ordened, & appoynted, to destroye thyn inheritaũce, to shut and to stoppe the mouthes of them that prayse the, to quenche the glorye and worshyppe of thyn house & thyne aulter, and to open the mouthes of the Heythen, that they maye prayse Jere.32.c the power, and vertue of the goddes, & to magnifye the fleshly kynge for euer.

C O LORDE, geue not thy cepter vnto them that be nothynge, lest they laughe vs to scorne in our mysery and fall: but turne theyr deuyce vpon them selues, and punysh hym, that hath begonne the same ouer vs, and set hym to an example. Thynke vpõ vs O LORDE and shewe thy selfe in the tyme of our distres & of our trouble. Strength me O thou kynge of goddes, ÿ LORDE of all power, * geue me an eloquent & pleasaunt speche in my mouth before the Lyon. Turne his harte in to the hate of our enemye, to destroy him, and all such as consent vnto hym. But delyuer vs with thy hande, and helpe me desolate woman, which haue no defence nor helper but onely the. LORD thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest that I loue not the glory and worship of the vnryghteous, and that I hate & abhorre the bed of the vncircumcysed and of all Heythen.

Exod.4.c. Iere.1.a

D Thou knowest and wotest my necessite, that I hate the token of my preeminẽce, and worshippe, which I bear vpon my heade, what tyme as I muste shewe me selfe, and be sene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloth, & that I weare it not whã I am quyete alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also that I thy handemayden haue not eaten at Amans table, & that I haue had no pleasure nor delyte in the kynges feast, that I haue not dronke the drynkeofferynges, and that I thy handmayden haue had no ioye sence the daye that I was brought hyther vnto this day: but onely in the O LORDE. O thou God of Abraham, O thou myghtye God aboue all, heare the voyce of them, that haue none other hope, and delyuer vs out of the hande of the wycked, and delyuer me out of my feare.

The.xv.Chapter.

¶ Quene Hester appeareth before the kinge, with an heuy hart for the trouble of hir people, and God turneth the kynges harte.

A AND vpon the thyrd day it happened, that Hester layed awaye the mournynge garmentes, and put on hyr glorious apparel, and decte her selfe goodly, after that she hadde called vpon God, which is the preseruer and Sauiour of al thynges, toke two maydens with her: vpon the one she leaned herselfe, as one that was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of hir vesture. The shyne of hir bewty made hir face rose coloured. The similitude of hir face was chearfull & amyable, but hir harte was sorowfull for great feare. She wente in thorow all ÿ dores, and stode before the kynge. The kynge sat vpon the trone of his kyngedome, and was clothed in his goodlye araye, all of golde, & set with precyous stones, and he was very terryble. He lyft vp his face, that shone in the clearnesse, and loked grymly vpon her. The fell the Quene down, was pale & faint leaned herself vpõ the head of ÿ mayde that wente with her.

1.Hest.5.a

B Neuertheles * God turned ÿ kynges mynde, that he was gentle, that he leapt out of his seate for feare, and gat her in his armes, and helde her vp tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He gaue her louynge wordes also, and sayd vnto her: Hester what is the mater? I am thy brother, be of good cheare ÿ shalt not dye: for our commaundement toucheth the comons, not the. Come nye. And with that he helde vp his golden wande and layed it vpon hir necke, and embraced her frendly, and sayd: Talke with me Then sayd she: * I sawe the (O Lorde) as an angell of God, and my hart was troubled for fear of thy maiestye and clearnesse. For excellent and wonderfull art thou (o lorde) and thy face is full of amyte. But as she was thus speakynge vnto hym, she fell downe agayne for fayntnesse: for ÿ which cause the kynge was afrayed, & all his seruauntes comforted her.

The xvi. Chapter,

¶ A coppye of the commaundement which kynge Artaxerses caused to be proclamed in al the contres of his domynyon, for the wealth of the Iewes.

A THe great kynge Artaxerses which raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and.xxvii. landes sendeth vnto the prynces & rulers of the same landes, such as loue hym, his frendly salutacyon. Ther be many that for the sundry frendshippes and benefites, which are dyuersly done vnto them for theyr worshippe, be euer the more proude and hye mynded & vndertake not onely to hurte our subiectes (for plenteous benefytes may they not suffre, and begyn to ymagyn some thynge agaynst those that do thē good, and take not onely all vnthankfulnesse from men) but in pryde and presumpcyon (as they that be vnmyndfull and vnthankfull for the good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgemēt of God, that seith al thinges, which (iudgemēt) hateth and punysheth all wyckednesse. It happeneth oft also, that they which be set in office of the higher power, and vnto whom the busynesses & causes of the subiectes are commytted to be hādled, ware proude, and defile themselues with sheddynge of innocent bloude, which bryngeth thē to intollerable hurt Which also with false and deceatfull wordes, and with lyenge tales, deceaue and betraye the innocent goodnes of prynces.

B Now is it profytable and good, ỹ we take hede, make search therafter, & cōsyder, not only what hath happened vnto vs of olde, but the shamefull, dishonest, and noysome thynges, that the debytes haue now taken in hande before our eyes: and therby to beware in tyme to come, and that we maye make the kyngdome quyet, & peaceable for al mē, and that we might somtime drawe it to a chaunge: and as for the thynge ỹ now is present before our eyes to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the moost frendly maner.

2.hest.3.a * What tyme now as Aman the sonne of Amadathi the Macedonian (a straunger verelye of the Persians bloude, and farre from our goodnes) was come in amonge vs as an aleaūt, and had optayned the frendshippe that we bear to ward al people, so ỹ he was called our father, & had in hye honour of euery mā, as the next and pryncypall vnto the kynge, he coulde not forbeare hymselfe frō his pryde, hath vndertakē not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdom, but of our lyfe also.

C With manyfolde deceate also hath he desyred to destroy Mardocheus our helper and preseruer, which hath done vs good in all thynges: and innocēt Hester ỹ lyke partaker of our kyngdome, with al hir people. For his mynde was (whan he had takē them out of ỹ way, and robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Persians vnto them of Macedonia. But we fynde, that the Iewes (which were accused of the wicked, that they myght be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vse reasonable and ryght lawes, and that they be the chyldren of the moost Hye lyuynge God, by whom the kyngdome of vs and our progonitours hath bene well ordred hytherto. Wherfore as for the letters and commaūdementes, that were put forth by Aman, the sonne of Amadathi, ye shall do well, yf ye holde them of none effecte: for he that set thē vp and inuented them, hanged thē at Susys before ỹ porte, with all his kynred, and God (whiche hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deseruynge.

And vpon this ye shall publysh and set vp the copy of this letter in all places, that the Iewes maye frely & without hynderaunce holde themselues after theyr owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and that vpon the.xiii. daye of the.xii.moneth Adar, they may be auenged of them, which in the tyme of theyr anguysh & trouble wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thynges, hath turned to ioye, the day wherin the chosen people shulde haue peryshed. D

Moreouer, amonge ỹ hye solemne dayes that ye haue, ye shall holde this daye also with all gladnesse, that nowe and in tyme to come, this daye may be a remembraunce to good, for all suche as loue the prosperite of the Persians but a remembraunce of destruccyon to those that be sedicious vnto vs.

All cyties and landes that do not this, shall horrybly peryshe and be destroyed with the swearde and fyre, and shal not only nomore be inhabited of mē, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes and foules.

A O How fayre is a chaist gene= yf it go awaye, yet they desyre it. It is

But though the ryghteous be ouerta=

B Age is an honorable thynge: neuer denly was he taken awaye, to the intent that wyckednesse shulde not alter his ¶ Wysdome shulde be receaued in youth. He that maryeth hymselfe vnto her, shal optayne loue of God and men.

A Wysdom reacheth from one ende to another myghtely, and louyngly dothe she ordre all thynges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her euen fro my youth vp: I dyd my dilygence to marye myself with her, such loue had I vnto hyr bewtye. Who so hath the companye of God, commendeth hyr nobilite, yee the LORDE of all thynges hymself loueth her. For she is the scolemastresse of the nurtour of God, and the choser out of hys workes. Yf a man wolde desyre ryches in thys lyfe, what is rycher then wysdom that worketh all thynges? Thou wylt saye: vnderstandynge worketh. What is it amonge all thinges, that worketh more then wysdome? Yf a man loue vertue, and ryghteousnesse, let hym laboure for wysdome, for she hath great vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernesse and prudēce, ryghteousnesse, and strengthe, whiche are suche thinges as men can haue nothynge more profytable in theyr lyfe. Yf a man desyre much

She can tell of tokēs and wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, & the endes of all tymes and ages. So I purposed after thys maner: I wyll take her vnto my cōpany, and comune louyngly wyth her, no doute she shall geue me good counsell and speake comfortablye vnto me in my carefulnesse, and grefe. For hyr sake shall I be wel and honestlye taken amonge the comuns, and Lordes of the counsell. Moreouer, by the meanes of her I shall optayne immortalyte, and leaue behynde me an euerlastynge memoryall, amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in ordre, and the nacyons shall be subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrauntes shalbe afrayed, whan they do but hear of me: amonge the multytude I shall be counted good, and myghtye in battayll. Whan I come home, I shall fynde reste wyth her: for hyr companye hath no bytternes, and hyr felowshyp hath no tediousnesse, but myrthe and ioye.
C Nowe whan I consydered these thynges by my selfe, and pondered thē in my harte, howe that to be ioyned vnto wysedome, is immortalyte, and greate pleasure to haue hyr frendeshyppe: howe that in the workes of hyr handes are infynyte ryches: howe that who so kepeth companye wyth her shall be wyse: and that he whiche talketh wyth her, shal come to honour it, because it was called God, where as Baruc 6. a it is but a frayle thynge. * For the un-godly, and hys ungodlynesse are both Psal. 7. a lyke abhominable unto God. Euen so the worke, & he that made it also, shall be punyshed together. Therfore shall ther a plage come upon the ymages of the Hethen: for out of the creature of God, they are become an abominacion, a temtacion unto the soules of men, & a snare for the fete of the unwyse. And why? the sekynge out of ymages, is the begynnynge of whordome: & the brin-gynge up of them, is the destruction of lyfe. For they were not from the begyn-nynge, nother shall they contynue for euer. The welthy ydelnes of men hath C founde them out upon earth, therfore shal they com shortly to an ende. Whan a father mourneth for hys sonne that was taken awaye from hym, he made hym an ymage (in all the hast) of hys dead sonne: and so began to worshyp hym as God, which he was but a dead man, & ordyned hys seruauntes to offre unto hym. Thus by processe of tyme & thorowe longe custume, thys errour was kepte as a lawe, and tyrauntes compelled men by uiolence to honoure ymages. As for those that were so far of, that men myghte not worshyp them presently, theyr picture was broughte from farre (lyke the ymage of a kynge whome they wolde honoure) to the intent that with great diligence they might worshyppe hym which was farre of, as though he had ben present. Agayne, the singular connynge of the craftesman gaue the ignoraunt also a greate occasion to worshyp ymages. For the workman wyllynge to do hym a pleasure that set hym a worke, laboured wyth al hys connynge to make an ymage of the best fashion. And so (thorow the bewty of D the worke) the commune people was deceaued: in so much, that they toke hym now for God, which a lytle afore was but honoured as a man. And thys was the errour of mans lyfe, whan men (ether for to serue their own affections, or to do some pleasure unto kynges) ascrybed unto stones and stockes the name of God, which ought to be geuen unto no man.

Moreouer, this was not ynoughe for them that they erred in ye knowlege of God: but where as they lyued in the great warres of ignoraunce, those many and great plages called they peace.
For other * they slewe theyr owne chil dren and offred them, or dyd sacrifice in the nyght season, or els helde vnreasonable watches: so that they kepte nother lyfe nor mariage cleane: but ether one slew another to death maliciously or els greued his neyghboure with ad-C uoutrye. And thus were all thynges myxte together: bloude, manslaughter, thefte, dissimulacyon, corrupcyon, vn-faythfulnesse, sedicion, periury, disquie tynge of good mē, vnthankfulnesse, defylynge of soules, chaungyng of byrth, vnstedfastnesse of mariage, misordre of aduoutrye and vncleanesse. And why-the honourynge of abhominable ymages, is the cause, the begynnynge, & end of all euell. For they that worshippe I dols, other they are madde whan they be mery, or prophecye lyes, or lyue vngodly, or els lyghtly forsweare themsel ues. For in so much as theyr trust is in the Idols (which haue nother soul nor vnderstandynge) thoughe they sweare falsly, yet they thynke it shall not hurte them.

Therfore commeth a great plage vpon them, and that worthely: for they haue an euell opinion of God, geuyng hede vnto Idols, swearynge vniustlye to deceaue, and despysynge ryghteousnes. For theyr swearynge is no vertue, but a plage of thē that synne, and goeth euer with the offence of the vngodly.

The.xv. Chapter.

¶ The faythfull haue respecte vnto God and not vnto ymages.

a But thou (O oure God) arte swete, longe sufferynge and true, and in mercy ordrest ye all thynges. Though we synne, yet are we thyne, for we knowe thy strength. Yf we synne not, then are we sure that thou regar-dest vs. For to knowe the, is perfecte ryghteousnes: Yee to knowe thy rygh-teousnesse and power, is the rote of im mortalite. As for the thyng ye men haue founde out thorowe theyr euell science it hath not deceaued vs: as ye payntyng of the picture (a vnprofitable labour) & carued ymage, with dyuerse colours, whose syght entyseth the ignoraunt: so that he honoureth and loueth ye picture of a dead ymage, that hath no soule.

Neuerthelesse, they that loue suche B euell thynges are worthy of death: they that trust in them, they that make thē, they that loue them, and they ye honour them. The potter also taketh and tempereth soft earth, laboureth it & geueth it the fashion of a vessell, what so euer serueth for our vse, and so of one pece of claye he maketh some cleane vessell for seruyce, and some contrarye. But where to euery vessell serueth, that kno weth the potter hymselfe. So with his vayne laboure he maketh a God of the same claye: this doth euen he, whiche a lytle afore was made of earth hymself, & within a lytle whyle after (whā he dy eth) turneth to earth agayne.

Notwithstandyng, he careth not the C more because he shall laboure, nor because his lyfe is shorte, but stryueth to excell goldsmythes, the syluersmythes, and coppersmythes, & taketh it for an honoure to make vayne thynges. For his hart is asshes, his hope is but vayne earth and his lyfe is more vyle thē claye: for so muche as he knoweth not his owne maker, that gaue hym his soule to worke, and brethed in hym the breth of lyfe. They counte our lyfe but a pastyme, and our conuersacyon to be but a market, and that men shulde euer be gettynge, yee and that by euell meanes.
Now he that of earth maketh frayle vessell and ymages knoweth hymselfe to offende aboue all other.

All the enemyes of thy people and D that holde them in subieccyon, are vn-wyse, vnhappy and exceadynge proude vnto theyr owne soules: * for they iud- Psa.113.b ge all the Idols of the Heythen to be goddes, which nother haue eyesyghte to se, nor noses to smell, nor eares to hear, nor fyngers of hādes for to grope to go. For man made them, and he that hath but a borowed spirete, fashioned them. But no mā can make a God lyke vnto hym: for seynge he is but mortall hymselfe, it is but mortall that he ma-keth with vnryghteous handes. He hymselfe is better then they whome he worshippeth, for he lyued though he was mortall, but so dyd neuer they.

Yee they worshippe beastes also, which are moost myserable: for compare thyn-

¶ Of the great darknesse in Egipte, & blyndnesse of the ungodly.

A GReat are* thy iudgemẽtes (O LORDE) and thy Rom.11.d counsels can not be expressed: therfore men do erre, y wyl not be refourmed with Exo.10.c. thy wysedome.* For whã the unrygh teous thought to haue thy holy people in subieccyon, they were bounde with the bondes of darknesse & longe nyght, shut under y rofe, thynkynge to escape the euerlastynge wysedome. And while they thought to be hyd in the darknesse of theyr synnes, they were scattered abrode in the very myddest of the darke couerynge of forgetfulnesse: put to hor rible fear and wonderously vexed. For the corner where they were, myght not kepe them from feare: because y soũde came downe and vexed them: yee many terrible and straunge visions made thẽ afrayed.

B No power of the fyre myghte geue mes of the starres lyghten that horryble nyght. For ther appeared unto thẽ a sodayne fyre, very dredefull: At the (which whan they sawe nothyng) they were so afrayed, that they thought the thynge which they saw, to be the more Exod.7.b. fearfull.* As for the sorcery & enchaũght to shame. For they that promysed to dryue away the fearfulnesse & drede from the weake soules were sycke for feare of them selues, and that & scorne And though none of thẽ wõders feared them, yet were they afrayed at the beastes which came upon them, and at the hissynge of the serpentes: In so muche that wyth tremblynge they sowned, & sayd they sawe not the ayre, whiche no man yet may escape.

C For it is an heuy thynge whan a conscience, taketh euer cruell thynges

And loke how much lesse the hope is & in, the more is y uncertaynte of y matthey that came in the myghtye nyghte, slepte the slepe that fell upon them frõ under and from aboue, somtyme were they afrayed thorow the feare of y wõ ders, and somtyme they were so weake that they sowned withall: for an hasty and sodayne fearfulnesse came uppon them. Afterwarde yf ony of them had fallen, he was kepte and shut in presõ, but without chaynes. But yf ony dwelt in a village, yf he hadde ben an hyrd or husbandman, he suffred intolle rable necessite: for they were all bounde with one chayne of darknesse.

Whether it were a blasynge wynde D or a swete songe of the byrdes amonge the thycke braunches of the trees, or y vehemence of haistye runnynge water or great noyse of the fallynge downe of stones, or the playenge and runnyng of beastes whom they sawe not, or y migh ty noyse of roaryng beastes, or y soũde that answereth agayne in the hye moũ taynes: it made them sowne for verye feare. For all the earth shyned & cleare lyght, and no mã was hyndered in his laboure. Onely upon them ther fell an heuy nyght, and ymage of darcknesse y was to come upõ them. Yee they were unto them selues the moost heuy & hor-

For the ryghteous chyldren of ẏ good they all together had innumerable that *Nother were the lyuynge sufficiēt of an eye the noblest nacion of thē was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wold it not make thē beleue: but in the destruccyon of the fyrst borne they knowleged, that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges were styll, and whan the nyght was in the myddest of hir course, thy Almyghtye worde (O LORDE) leapt downe frō heauē out of thy roial trone, as a rough man of warre, in the myddest of ẏ lōde that was destroyed: & ẏ sharpe sweard parfourmed thy straygh commaunde& reached vnto ẏ heauen. The syght of the euell dreames vexed them sodenlye, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vn-

D Then laye there one here, another there, halfe dead halfe quycke, and shewed the cause of his death. For the vy-syōs that vexed them, shewed thē these

The temtacyon of death touched the ryghteous also, and amonge ẏ mul gaynste the wrath, and so broughte the misery to an ende, declarynge therby that he was thy seruaunt. For he ouer came not the multitude wyth bodely but wyth the worde he subdued hym ẏ

Unto these the destroyer gaue place, & was afrayed of them: for it was only a temptacion worthy of wrath.

The.xix. Chapter.

¶ Lyke as ẏ wycked are euer slaynge more and more, so doth the wrath of God neuer ceasse, tyl they be destroyed.
Of them that were punyshed in the tyme of Loth.

As for the vngodlye, the I wrath came vpō thē without mercye vnto the ende.
For he knewe before what shulde happen vnto them: how that (whan they had consented to let them go, and had sent them oute wyth great diligēce) they wolde repent, and folowe vpon them. * For whan they Exo.14.b were yet mournynge and makynge la-mentacion by the graues of the dead, they deuysed another folyshnesse: so ẏ they persecuted them in theyr fleynge, whome they had caste oute afore wyth prayer. Worthy necessite also brought thē vnto thys ende, for they had clene forgotten the thynges that had happened vnto them afore. But the thynge that was wantynge of theyre punysh-ment, was requisite so to be fulfylled vpon them wyth tormentes: that thy people myght haue a maruaylous passage thorowe, and that these myghte fynde a straunge death.
Than was euerye creature fashio- B ned agayne of the new, accordynge to the wyl of theyr maker, obeyng thy comaundements, that thy chyldren myght be kept without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed theyr tentes, and y drye earth appeared, where afore was wa-without impediment, & the great depe became a grene felde: were thorow all the people went y were defended with thy hande, seynge thy wonderous and maruaylous workes. For as y horses, so were they fed, and leapt lyke lambes praysynge the (O LORDE) which haddest delyuered them. And why: they were yet myndfull of the thynges, that happened whyle they dwelte yet in the lande: how the grounde brought forth flyes in steade of cattell, and how y ry-tokens which came to passe afore by y fred worthely accordynge to theyr wic churlesly with straungers. Some recea ther were some, that not only receaued of the righteous: so y euery one sought D the intraunce of his dore.

Thus the elementes turned in to them selues, lyke as whan one tune is chaunged vpō an instrumēt of musyck and yet all the resydue kepe theyr melo dye: which may easely be perceaued, by the syght of the thynges that are come to passe. The drye lande was turned in to a watery: and the thynge that afore swamme in the water, wente now vpō the drye grounde. The fyre had power in the water (cōtrarye to his owne ver tue) & the water forgat his owne kinde to quench. Agayne the flammes of the noysome beastes hurte not the fleshe of them that wente with thē, nother melted they the yse, which els melteth lygh tely. In all thynges hast thou promoted thy people (O LORD) & brought them to honoure: thou hast not despysed them, but alwaye and in all places hast thou stonde by them.

The ende of the boke of wysedome.

Ecclesiasticus called Jesus Syrac.

The prologe of Jesus the sonne of Syrac vnto his boke.

Many and great men haue declared wysedome vnto vs out of the lawe, out of the prophetes and out of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israell ought to be commended, by the reason of doctrine and wysdome: Therfore they that haue it & reade it, shuld not onely themselues be wyse there thorowe, but serue other also with teachynge and wrytynge.

After that my graundfather Jesus had geuen diligent laboure to reade the lawe, the prophetes and other bokes that were lefte vs of our fathers, and had well exercysed hymselfe therin: he purposed also to wryte some thynge of wysdome and good maners, to the intent that they which were wyllynge to learne and to be wyse, myghte haue the more vnderstandynge, and be the more apte to leade a good conuersacyon.

Wherfore I exhorte you to receaue it louyngly, to reade it with diligence, & to take it in good worth, though our wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thynge that is wrytten in the Hebrue tunge, soundeth not so wel whan it is translated in to another speche. Not only this boke of wysdome, but also the lawe, the prophetes, and other bokes sounde farre otherwyse, then they do, whan they are spoken in theyr owne language.

Now in the .xxxviii. yeare whan I came in to Egipte in the tyme of Ptolome Euerges, and continued there all my lyfe, I gat lybertye to reade and wryte many good thynges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauayle to interprete this boke. And consyderynge that I hadde tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme this boke, and to brynge it vnto lyght: that the straungers also which are disposed to learne, myght applye themselues vnto good maners, and lyue acordynge to the lawe of the LORDE.

The fyrst Chapter.

A All wysedome *cometh of God ye LORDE, & hath bene euer with hym, & is before al tyme. 3.Reg.3.b. and.4.c. Job. 28.a. Jacob.1.a Who hath nombred the sonde of ye see, the droppes of the rayne and the dayes of tyme?
Who hath measured the heyght of heauen, the bredth of ye earth, and the depnesse of the see? Who hath sought out the grounde of Gods wysedome, which hath bene before all thynges. Rom.1
*Wysedome hath ben before all thynges, and the vnderstondynge of prudence from euerlastynge. (Gods word in the heyght is the well of wysedome, and the euerlastynge commaundementes are the intraunce of her.) Unto whom hath the rote of wysedome bene declared? Or who hath knowen hir wyt? Unto whom hath the doctrine of wysedome bene discouered and shewed? and who hath vnderstande ye manyfolde intraunce of her.
Ther is one: euen the Hyghest, the maker of all thynges, the Almyghtye, the kynge of power (of whom men ought to stonde greatly in awe) which sytteth ryd his owne trone, beyng a god of dominiō: He hath created her thorow the holy gooste: he hath sene her, nombred her, and measured her: He hath poured her out vpon all his workes, and vpon all flesh accordynge to his gyfte: he geueth her rychelye vnto them that loue hym. The feare of the LORDE is worshipe & triūphe, gladnesse, & a ioyful crowne. The fear of ye LORD maketh a mery hart, geueth gladnesse, ioy and lōge lyfe. Who so feareth ye LORDE, it shal go well with hym at ye last, and in the daye of his death he shall be blessed.

C The loue of God is honorable wysdome: loke vnto whome it appeareth, they loue it, for they se what wonderous thynges it doth. * The feare of ye LORDE is the begynnynge of wysedom, and was made with the faythful in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen women, and shalbe knowen of the ryghteous and faythfull. The feare of the LORDE is the ryght Gods seruice, that preserueth and iustifyeth the hart, and geueth mirth & gladnesse. Who so feareth the LORDE, shalbe happye: and whan he hath nede of comforte, he shalbe blessed. To feare God, is the wysedome ye maketh rych, and bryngeth all good with her. She fylleth the whole house with hir gyftes, and the garners with hir treasure. The feare of the LORD is the crowne of wysedom, & geueth plenteous peace and health He hath sene her and nombred her, knowlege and vnderstādynge of wysedome hath he poured out as rayne: and them that held her fast, hath he brought to honoure.

...9.b

D The feare of the LORDE, is the rote of wysedome, and hir braūches are longe lyfe. (In the treasures of wysdome is vnderstandynge and deuocion of knowlege, but wysedome is abhorred of synners) The fear of the LORDE dryueth out synne, for he that is without feare, can not be made ryghteous, and his wylfull boldnesse is his owne destruccyon. A pacyent man wyll suffre vnto the tyme, and then shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstandynge wyl hyde his wordes for a tyme, & many mens lyppes shal speak of his wysedome. In the treasures of wysedome is the declaracyon of doctrine, but the synner abhorreth the worshippe of God. My sonne yf thou desyre wysedome, kepe the commaundement, and God shall geue her vnto the: for the feare of the LORDE is wysdom and nurtoure, he hath pleasure in fayth and louynge mekenesse, & he shal fyll the treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaythful to the feare of the LORDE, and come not vnto hym wt a double harte. Be not an ypocrite in ye sight of men, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marck well these thynges, lest thou happen to fall and brynge thy soule to dishonoure, and so God discouer thy secretes, and cast the downe in the myddst of the congregacyon: because thou woldest not receaue ye feare of God, and because thy harte is ful of faynednesse and deceate.

An exhortacyon vnto pacyence and to the feare of God.

A My sonne, * yf thou wylte come in to ye seruice of god, stande fast in ryghteousnes and feare, & arme thy soule to temptacyon: satle thyne harte, & be pacyent: bowe downe thyne eare, receaue the wordes of vnderstandynge, and shrenke not awaye whan ye art entysed. Holde thy fast vpon God, ioyne thy self vnto him and suffre, that thy lyfe maye encrease at ye last. What so euer happeneth vnto the, receaue it: suffre in heuynesse, and be pacyēt in thy trouble. * For lyke as golde and syluer are tryed in the fyre, euen so are acceptable men in the fornace of aduersite. Beleue in God, and he shall helpe the: ordre thy way aright, and put thy trust in hym. Holde fast his feare, and grow therin. O ye that feare the LORDE take sure holde of his mercy: shrenke not awaye from hym, that ye fall not. O ye that feare the LORDE, beleue hym, and your reward shal not be emptye. O ye that fear the LORDE put your trust in hym, and mercy shal come vnto you for pleasure O ye yt feare the LORDE, set your loue vpon hym, & your hartes shalbe lyghtened.

Gene. 18. b * and an olde bodye that doteth and is vnchaste.

Yf thou haste gathered nothynge in thy youthe, what wylte thou fynde than in thyne age? O howe pleasaũt a thynge is it, whan grayheaded men are discrete, and whan the elders can geue good counsell? O howe comlye a thynge is wysdome vnto aged men? yee vnderstandynge and counsell is a glorious thynge. The crowne of olde men is to haue much experience, and the feare of God is theyr worshyppe.
B Ther be .ix. thynges, which I haue iudged in my harte to be happye, & the tenth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tunge. A mã that whyle he lyueth, hath ioye of his children, and seyth the fal of his enemyes. Well is hym that dwelleth with an housewyfe of vnderstandynge, * and that hath not fallen with his tunge, and that hath not ben fayne to serue such as are vnmete for hym. Eccli. 14. a and 19. c Jacob. 3. a Well is hym, that fyndeth a faythfull frende: and well is hym, which talketh of wysedome to an eare that heareth hym. O how great is he, that fyndeth wysedome and knowlege? Yet is he not aboue hym, and feareth the LORDE. The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto whom it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Unto whom shall he be lykened, that kepeth it fast? The feare of God is the begynnynge of his loue, and the begynnyng of faith is to cleaue fast vnto it. The heuynes of the hart is all the punyshment, and the wyckednes of a woman goeth aboue all. All punyshment and plage is nothynge in comparison of the plage of the hart: eue so all wyckednes is nothynge to ẏ wickednes of a woman.

C What so euer happeneth vnto a man, is nothynge in comparyson of it that his euell wyllers do vnto hym: & all vengeaunce is nothynge to the vengeaunce of the enemye. Hir husbande is brought to shame amonge his neghbours, and whã he heareth it, it maketh hym to sygh. All wyckednes is but lytle to the wyckednes of a woman, the porcyon of the vngodly shall fall vpon her.

¶ A commendacyon and prayse of a good honest woman, and how noysom an euell wyfe is.

By euery hedge shall she set her

An honest and manerly woman C is no wayght to be compared vnto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as ÿ Sonne whā it aryseth, is an ornamēt in the hye heauen of the LORDE, so is a vertuous wyfe the bewty of al hir pon a womā that hath a cōstant minde (perpetuall are the fundacyons that be layed vpon a whole stonye rocke, so are the commaundementes of God vp pon an holy woman.) Ther be two thynges that greue D my harte, and in the thyrde is a displea uerte: Whan men of vnderstandynge and wysdome are not set by: And whā one departeth from ryghteousnesse vn

Ther be two maner of thynges, which He that holdeth the ploughe, and hathe pleasure in proddynge and dryuynge the oxen, and goeth aboute wyth suche workes, he can speake of oxen. He setteth hys harte to make forowes, and is dylygent to geue ye kyne

So is euerye carpēter also and workmaster that laboureth styl nyght and daye: he carueth, graueth and cutteth oute, and hys desyre is in sondrye connynge thynges, and hys hart ymagyneth, how he maye connynglye caste an ymage, hys dylygence also and watchynge perfourmeth the worke. The yronsmyth in lyke maner bydeth by his styhie, and doth hys dylygence to laboure the yron. The vapoure of the fyre brenneth hys fleshe, and he muste fyghte wyth the heate of the fornace. The noyse of the hammer soundeth euer in hys eares, and his eyes loke styl vpon the thynge that he maketh. He hath set hys mynde thervpon, that he wyll make oute hys worke, and therfore he watcheth, howe he maye set it oute, and brynge it to an ende.

E So dothe the potter syt by hys worke, he turneth the whele aboute wyth hys fete, he is dylygent and carefull in all hys doynges, and his labour and worke is wythoute nombre. He fashyoneth the claye wyth hys arme, and wyth hys fete he tempereth it. Hys harte ymagyneth howe he maye make it pleasaunte, and hys dylygence is to clense the ouen. All these hope in theyr handes, and euerye one thynketh to be connynge in hys worke. Wythoute these maye not the cytyes be mainteyned, inhabyted, nor occupied: yet come they not hyghe in the congregacyon: they vnderstonde not the conuenaunte of the lawe: they can not declare equyte and iudgemente: they can not fynde out the darke sentences: but thorowe them shall the creature of the worlde be manteyned: theyr prayer concerneth onelye the worke and laboure connynge.

¶ Wysedome and the feare of God excell all other thynges. All thynges are made to serue the faythfull.

A But he that applyeth hys mynde to vnderstande the lawe of God doth diligentlye seke oute the wysdome of them of the olde tyme, & exercyseth hymselfe in the prophetes. He kepeth the sayenges of famous mē and preasseth to the vnderstondinge of darke sentences of wysedome. He seketh oute the mysterye of secrete sayenges, and exercyseth hymselfe therein contynually. He dothe seruyce among greate men, and appeareth before the prynce. He goeth in to a straung contre, & trauayleth thorow it: loke what good or euell is amonge men, he proueth it, and seketh it oute. He purposeth in hys harte, to resorte earlye vnto the LORDE that made hym, and to praye before the hyghest God. He openeth hys mouthe in prayer, and prayeth for hys synnes.

When the greate LORDE B wyll, he shall be fylled wyth the sprete of vnderstondynge, that he maye then poure oute wyse sentences, and geue thankes vnto the LORDE in his prayer. He shal ordre his deuyce, & lede hys knowlege a ryghte, and geue hym vnderstondynge of secrete thynges. He shall shewe forth the science of his learnynge, and reioce in the conuenaunt of the law of the LORDE. The whole congregacyon shall commende hys wysedome, and it shall neuer be put oute. The remembraunce of hym shall neuer be forgotten, and hys name shall continue from one generacyon to another. * Hys wysdome Eccl.44.A shall be spoken of, and the whole congregacyon shall openlye declare hys prayse. Whyle he lyueth he hath a greater name then a thousande besyde, and after hys death, the same name remayneth vnto hym. Yet wyll I speake of mo men of vnderstondynge, for I am full as the Moone.

Herken vnto me (ye holye verte- C

Death is fearfull vnto the wycked be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good in all thynges, and alwaye

Be ashamed of whordome before father and mother: Be ashamed of lesynge before the prynce and men of auchorytie: Of synne, befor the iudge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregacyō and people: Of vnryghteousnesse, before a companyon, and frende: Of

Be ashamed to lye wyth thyne elbowes vpon the bread: Be ashamed to loke vpon harlottes: Be ashamed to turne awaye thy face from thy frende: Be ashamed to take, and not to geue: Be ashamed also to loke vpon another mans wyfe, & to make many tryflyng wordes wyth hyr mayden, or to stonde by hyr bedsyde. Be ashamed to vpbrayde thy frende: and whan thou geuest onye thynge, caste hym not in the tethe wythall.

¶ The bewtye of the fyrmamente, wherebye the power and wysedom of God is knowne, and shulde by ryghte be praysed.

appeareth, declareth the daye in the the earthe, and who maye abyde the whan it is hote, thre tymes more doth the Sonne burne vpon the mountayhys iudgemente to smyte haystelye.

Thorowe hys commaundemente the treasures are opened, and the cloudes he strengthened the cloudes, and bro-

The mountaynes melte at the syghte of hym, the wynde bloweth ac-hys thonder beateth the earthe, and so doth the storm of the north: the whyrle wynde also lygheteth downe as a fethe red fowle, casteth oute and spredeth the snowe abrode: and as the greshoppers

The eye maruayleth at the bewtye of is afrayed at the rayne of it. He pou-Whan the colde north wynde C bloweth, harde Chrystall commeth of gatherynges together of water, & put-teth on the waters as a brestplate. He deuoureth the mountaynes, and burgrene, he putteth it oute lyke fyre. The medicyne of all these is, whan a cloude commeth haystelye: and whan a dewe commeth vpon the heate, it shall be refreshed agayne.

(In hys worde he stylleth ŷ wind) In hys counsel he setteth the depe, and (the LORDE) Jesus planted it.
They that sayle ouer the see, tel of hys rous workes, dyuerse maner of wyre after all oure power, for he is greate comforte and pacifye those that dwelt wyth them. All these were very noble, and were exceadynge full as the see.

He toke care for hys people, and delyhys cytye and made it stronge, that it shulde not be beseged. He dwelte in hys noure, and worshyppe amonge hys people, and enlarged the intraunce of the house and the courte. He geueth lyghte as the mornynge starre, in the myddeste of the cloudes, and as the Moone whan it is full. He shyneth as the Sonne in the temple of God. He is as bryghte as the rayne bowe in the fayre cloudes, and florysheth as y flouers and roses in the sprynge of y year, and the lylyes by the ryuers of water: Lyke as the braunches vpon y mount Lybanus in the tyme of Sommer: As a fyre & incense that is kyndled: Lyke as an whole ornamente of pure golde, set wyth al maner of precyous stones: and as an olyue tre that is frutefull, and as a Cypres tre whiche groweth vp an hyghe.

B When he put on the garmente of honour, and was clothed wyth al bewtye: whan he wente to the holy altare, to garnyshe the couerynge of the Sanctuarye: whan he toke the porcyōs out of the prestes hande, he hymselfe stode by the herth of the altare, and hys brethren rounde aboute in ordre, as the braunches of the Cedre tre vpon the mounte Lybanus, so stode they round aboute hym. And as the braunches of the olyue tre, so stode all the sonnes of Aaron in theyr glorye. And that he myghte sufficyentlye perfourme hys seruyce vpon the altare, and garnyshe the offerynge of the hyghest God, he stretched out hys hande and toke of y drynkofferynge, and poured in of the wyne: so he poured vpon the botome of the aulter a good smell vnto the hyghest prynce.

Then beganne the sonnes of Aaron to synge, and to blowe wyth trompettes, and to make a greate noyse, for a remembraunce and prayse vnto the LORDE. Then were the people astrayed, and fell downe to the earth vpon theyre faces, to worshyppe the LORDE theyr God, and to geue thankes to almyghtye God. They sung goodly also with theyr voyces, so that ther was a pleasaunt noyse in y great house of the LORDE. And the people in theyre prayer besoughte the LORDE the hyghest, that he wold be mercyfull, tyll the honoure of the LORDE were perfourmed. Thus ended they theyre mynystracyon, and seruyce.

C Then wente he downe, and stretched oute hys handes ouer the whole mutytude of the people of Israel, that they shulde geue prayse, and thankes oute of theyre lyppes vnto the LORDE, and to reioyce in hys name. He beganne yet once also to praye, that he myghte onelye shewe the thankesgeuynge before the hyghest, namelye thus: O geue prayse and thankes (ye all) vnto the LORDE oure God, which hath euer done noble, and great thynges: whiche hathe increased oure dayes from oure mothers wombe, and dealte wyth vs accordynge to hys mercye: that he wyll geue vs the ioyfulnes of harte, and peace for oure tymes in Israell. Which faythfully kepeth hys mercye for vs euermore, and alway delyuereth vs in due season.

Ther be two maner of people, that I abhorre fro my hart: as for y thyrd, whome I hate, it is no people: They that sytte vpon the mountayne of Samarya, the Phylystynes, and the foolyshe people that dwell in Sychymys. D

I Jesus the sonne of Syrac Eleazarus of Jerusalem, haue marked vp these informacyons and documentes of wysedome and vnderstandynge in thys boke, and poured oute the wysedome of my harte. Blessed is he that exercyseth hymselfe therein: and who so taketh suche to harte, shall be wyse. Yf he do these thinges, he shal be strōg in all. For the lyghte of the LORDE ledeth hym.

The. li. Chapter.

A prayer of Jesus y son of Syrac.

A prayer of Jesus Syrac. Wysedome calleth the ignoraunte vnto her.

I Thanke the O LORDE kynge, and prayse y, O God my Saueoure I will yelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou arte my defender and helper, and haste preserued my bodye from destruccyon, from the snare of traytorous tunges, and frō the lyppes that are occupyed wyth lyes. Thou haste bene my helper, from suche as stode vp agaynste me and hast delyuered me after the multytude of thy mercye, and for thy holye names sake. Thou haste delyuered me from the rorynge of them, that prepared A them selues to deuoure me, oute of the handes of suche as soughte after my lyfe: from the multytude of them that troubled me, and wente aboute to set fyre vpon me on euery syde, so that I am not brente in the myddeste of the fyre: From the depe of hel, from an vncleane tunge, from lyenge wordes, frō the wycked kynge, and from an vnryghteous tunge. My soule shal prayse the LORDE vnto death, for my lyfe drewe nye vnto hell.

B They compassed me round about on euerye syde, and ther was no man to helpe me. I loked aboute me, yf ther were onye man that wolde succoure me: but ther was none. Then thoughte I vpon thy mercy O LORDE, and vpō thy actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namelye, that thou delyuerest suche as put theyr truste in the, and ryddeste them oute of the handes of the heythen. F

Thus lyfte I vp my prayer from the earth, and prayed for delyueraunce from death. I called vpon the LORDE my father, that he wold not leaue me wythoute helpe, in the daye of my trouble, and in the tyme of ỹ proude. I praysed thy name continually, yelding honoure and thankes vnto it: and so my prayer was herde. Thou sauedest me from destructyon, and delyueredst me from the vnryghteous tyme. Therfore wyl I aknowlege and prayse the, and magnifye the name of the LORDE.

C When I was yet but yonge, or euer I wente astraye, I desyred wysedome openly in my prayer. I came therfore before the temple and soughte her vnto the laste. Then floryshed she vnto me, as a grape that is soone rype. My harte reioyced in her, then wente my foote the ryght way, yee from youth vp soughte I after her: I bowed downe myne eare and receaued her. I founde me muche wysedome and prospered greatlye in her. Therfore wyll I ascribe the glory vnto hym, that geueth me wysdome: for I am aduysed to do therafter. I wyll be gelous to cleue vnto ỹ thynge that is good, so shall I not be confounded. My soule hath wrasteled wyth her, and I haue bene diligent to be occupyed in her. I lifte vp myne handes on hyghe, then was my soule lyghtned thorowe wysdom, that I knowleged my foolyshnesse. I ordred my soule after her, she & I were one harte from the begynnynge, and I found her in clennesse. And therfore shall I not be forsaken.

D My harte longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Thorowe her the LORDE hathe geuen me a newe tunge, wherewyth I wyll prayse him. O come vnto me ye vnlearned, & dwel in the house of wysedome: wythdrawe not youre selues from her, but talke, and comon of these thynges, for youre soules are verye thyrstye. I opened my mouthe, and spake: * O come and bye wysedome wythoute moneye, bowe downe youre necke vnder hyr yocke, and youre soule shal receaue wysdom. (Esay.55.a) She is harde at hande, and is content to be founde. Beholde wyth your eyes * howe that I haue had but lytle laboure, and yet haue founde much rest. (Eccli.6.e) O receaue wysdome, and ye shall haue plenteousnesse of syluer and golde in possessyon. Let youre mynde reioyce in hys mercye, and be not ashamed of his praise. Worke his worke by times and he shall geue you youre rewarde in due tyme.

Here endeth the sōnge of the thre chyldren.

The story of Susanna which is the xiii. chapter of Daniel after the Latyn.

There dwelte a man in Babilon, called Joachim, that toke a wife whose name was Susanna, (the doughter of Helchias) a verye fayre woman, & suche one as feared God.

hyr father, and hir mother also were godly people, & taught their doughter accordyng to the law of Moses. Now Joachym (hir husbande) was a great ryche man, and had a fayre orcharde ioy nynge vnto his house. And to hym resorted the Jewes co̅munly: because he was a man of reputacyon amonge the̅.
The same yeare were ther made two iudges, such as the LORDE speaketh of: All the wyckednesse of Babylon, co̅ meth from the elders (that is) from the iudges, which seme to rule the people.
These came ofte to Joachims house: and all such as had ony thynge to do in the lawe, came thyther vnto them.

B Now wha̅ the people came agayn at after noone, Susanna wente in to hir husbandes orcharde, to walke. The elders [illegible] this, that she went in day lye and walked: they burned for lust to her, yee they were elmoost out of theyr wyttes, & cast down theyr eyes, yt they shulde not se heauen, nor remembre, yt God is a ryghteous iudge. For they were both wounded with the loue of her, nother durst one shew another his grefe. And for shame they durst not tell her theyr inordynate lust, yt they wolde fayne haue had to do with her. Yet they layed wayte for her earnestlye fro̅ daye to daye, that they myghte (at the leest) haue a syght of her. And the one sayd to the other: Up, let vs go home, for it is dyner tyme. So they we̅t theyr waye from her.

Whan they returned agayne, they came together, enquerynge out ye matter betwixt them selues: yee ye one tolde the other of his wycked lust. Then ap-poynted they a tyme whan they myght take Susanna alone.

C It happened also that they spyed out a conuenient tyme, whan she went forth to walke (as hir maner was) and no body with her but two maydens, & Gen. 18. thought * to washe herselfe in the gar-2.Re.11.a. den, for it was an hote seaso̅. And ther was not one persone there, excepte the two elders that had hyd them selues, to beholde her. So she sayd to hir may dens: go fet me oyle and sope, and shut the orcharde dore, that I maye washe me. And they dyd as she bad them, and shut the orcharde dore, and wente out the selues at a backe dore, to fet ye thing that she had co̅maunded: but Susa̅na knewe not, that the Elders laye there hyd within. Now whan the mayde[s] were gone forth, the two elders gat the̅ vp and ranne vpon her, sayenge: Now the orcharde dores are shut, that no man can se vs: we haue a luste vnto the, therfore consente vnto vs, and lye wyth vs.

Yf thou wylt not, we shall bryng D a testymonyall agaynste the, that ther was a yonge felow wyth the, and that thou haste sente awaye thy maydens from the for the same cause. Susanna syghed, & sayde: Alas * I am in trou- 2.Re.24.b ble on euerye syde. Though I folowe youre mynde, it wyll be my death: and yf I consente not vnto you. I can not escape youre handes. Well, it is better for me, to fall in to youre handes with oute the dede doynge, then to synne in the syghte of the LORDE: and wyth that, she cryed oute wyth a loud voyce: the elders cryed also oute a-gaynste her.

Then ranne ther one to the or-charde dore, and smote it open. Nowe whan the seruau̅tes of the house herd the crye in the orcharde they rushed in at the backe dore, to se what the matter was. So wha̅ the elders told the̅, the seruauntes were greatly ashamed: for why, ther was neuer suche a report made of Susanna. On the morowe af- E ter came the people to Joachym hyr husbande, and the two elders came also ful of myscheuous ymagynacyo̅s a gaynst Susa̅na, to bryng her to death, & spake thus before ye people: Sende for Susanna ye doughter of Helchyas Joachyms wife. And immediatly they sente for her. So she came wyth hyr fa ther and mother, hyr chylderen, and all hyr kynred. Nowe Susanna was a tender person, and maruaylous fayre of face. Therfore the wycked men co̅- maunded to take of the clothes from hyr face (for she was couered) that at the leest, they myghte so be satisfyed in hyr bewtye. Then hyr frendes, yee and all they that knewe her, beganne to wepe. These two elders stode vp in the myddeste of the people, * and lay- Leui.24.a ed theyr handes vpon the heade of Su sanna: which wept & loked vp toward heauen for hyr harte had a sure truste in the LORDE. And the elders sayd: As we were walkynge in the orchard alone, thys woman came in wyth hyr two maydens: whome she sente awaye from her, and sparred the orcharde dores. Wyth that, a yonge felow (which ther was hyd)came vnto her, and laye with her. As for vs, we stode in a cor-F ner of the orcharde. And whā we sawe this wyckednes, we ranne to her, & per ceaued that they had medled together.

But we coulde not holde hym, for he was stronger than we, thus he opened the dore, and gat hym awaye. Now whan we had taken thys woman, we axed her, what yonge felow this was: but she wolde not tell vs. This is the mater, and we be wytnesses of ye same.
The commune sorte beleued them, as those that were the elders and iudges of the people, and so they condempned her to death. Susanna cryed out with a loude voyce, and sayd: O euerlastyng Hebr.4.c. God, * thou searcher of secretes, thou that knowest all thynges afore they borne false wytnes agaynst me: and be holde I muste dye, where as I neuer dyd ony such thinges, as these mē haue maliciously inuented agaynst me. And the LORDE herde hir voyce. For when she was led forth to the death, ye LORDE raysed vp the sprete of a yonge chylde, whose name was Dani el, whiche cryed with a loude voyce: 2.Reg.3.f * I am clene from this bloude. Then Matth.20.d. all the people turned thē toward hym, G and sayd: What meane these wordes condempned a doughter of Israel vnto death, & knowe not the trueth wher fore go ye agayne on iudgement agayne, for they haue spokē false wytnes agaynst

Wherfore ye people turned agayne in al ye haist. And the elders (yt is ye prin vnder what tre sawest yu thē talkynge bery tre. And Daniel sayd: very well.

Now thou lyest euen vpon thyn heed.
Lo ye messaunger of the LORDE, hath receaued ye sētēce of hī, to cut ye in two.
Then put he hym asyde & called for the other, & sayd vnto hym: O yu sede of Canaā, but not of Iuda: Fayrnes hath deceaued the, & lust hath subuer-ted thyne harte. Thus dealt ye afore wt the doughters of Israel, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but ye dough ter of Iuda wold not abyde your wyc kednesse. Now tell me thē, vnder what tre dyddest thou take them speakynge together? He answered: vnder a Pom granate tre. Then sayd Daniel vnto hym: very wel, now thou lyest also vpō vpon thyne heade. The messaunger of the LORDE standeth waytynge with the sweard to cut the in two, and to slaye you both.
With that, all the whole multy-tude gaue a great shoute, and prayse God, * which alwaye delyuereth them Psal.36.f that put theyr trust in hym. And they came vpon the two elders (whom Daniel had cōuicte by theyr owne mouth that they had geuē false wytnesse) and dealte with thē, euen lykewyse as they wolde haue done with theyr neyghbou resse: Yee they dyd * accordynge to the Deut.19.d

Thus the innocent bloude was saued the same daye.
Then Helchias and his wyfe pray sed God for theyr doughter Susanna with Ioachim hir husbande, & all the kynred: that ther was no dishonestye founde in her. From that daye forth was Daniel had in great reputacyon in the syght of the people.

The ende of the story of Susanna.

The story of Bell: which is the .xiiii. Chapter of Daniel after the Latin.

A There was at Babilon an ymage, called Bel: and ther were spent vpon him euery daye xii. cakes, xl. shepe, & sixe greate pottes of wyne. Hym dyd the kynge worshippe him self, and wente dayly to honoure him: but Daniel worshipped his owne god. And the kynge sayde vnto him: Why doest not thou worshippe Bel? He answered & sayde: * Because I maye not worshippe thynges yt be made wt hondes, but the lyuynge God which made heauen and earth, and hath power vpon all flesh. The kynge sayde vnto him: Thenkest thou not, that Bel is a lyuynge God? Or seyst thou not, how much he eateth and drynketh euery daye? Daniel smiled, and sayde: O kynge deceaue not thyself: Thys is but made of claye wtin: & of matall wt out * nether eateth he euer eny thynge.

B Then the kynge was wroth, & called for hys prestes: and sayde vnto them: If ye tell me not who this is, that eateth vp these expences, ye shal dye: But yf ye can certifie me yt Bel eateth them, then Daniel shall dye: for he hath spoken blasphemye agaynst Bel. And Daniel sayd vnto the kynge: Let it be so, accordynge as thou hast sayde. The prestes of Bel were .lxx. besyde theyr wyues & chyldren. And the kynge wet with Daniel in to the temple of Bel. So Bels prestes sayde: Lo, we wyll go out, & se thou yt thou set the meate there (O kyng) and poure in the wyne, then shut yt dore fast, and seale it with thine owne signet: and tomorow whan thou comest in, yf thou fyndest not that Bel hath eaten vp all, we wyl suffre death: or els Daniel that hath lyed vpon vs. The prestes thought them selues sure ynough, for vnder the altar they had made a preuy intraunce, and there went they in euer, & dyd eate vp what there was.

C So when they were gone forth, the kyng set meates befor Bel. Now Daniel had commaunded his seruauntes to brynge asshes & these he syfted throw out all yt temple, that the kynge myght se. Then wente they out, and sparred the dore, sealynge it with the kynges signet: and so departed. In the nyght cam the prestes with theyr wyues and children (as they were wonte to do) & dyd eate and drynke vp all. In yt mornynge by tymes at the break of yt daye the kynge arose and Daniel with him. And the kynge sayde: Daniel, are the seales whole yet? He answered: yee (O kynge) they be whole. Now as soone as he had opened the dore, the kynge loked vnto the altare, and cryed with a loude voyce: Great art thou O Bel, & wt the is no deceate. Then laughed Daniel & held the kynge that he shuld not go in, & sayde: Beholde the pauemente, marke wel, whose footesteppes are these? The kynge sayde: I se the footsteppes of men, women & chyldre.

D Therfore the kynge was angrye, & toke the prestes, with their wyues and chyldren, and they shewed hym the preuy dores, where they came in, and dyd eate vp such thynges as were vpon yt altare. For the which cause the kynge slewe them, * and delyuered Bel in to Daniels power, which destroyed hym and hys temple.

And in the same place ther was a great dragon, which they of Babilon worshypped. And the kynge sayde vnto Daniel: Sayest thou, yt thys is but a god of matall also? lo he lyueth, he eateth and drynketh, so that thou canst not saye yt he is no lyuynge God, therfore worshyppe hym. Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: I wyll worshyppe the LORDE my God * he is the true lyuynge God: as for thys he is not the God of lyfe. But geue me leaue (O kynge) and I shall destroye thys dragō without swearde or staf. The kynge sayde: I geue the leaue. Then Daniel toke pitch, fatte and heery woll, & dyd seth them together, & made lōpes therof thys he put in the dragons mouth, & so the dragon barst in sonder, and Daniel sayd: Lo there is he whom ye worshypped.

E When they of Babilon herde that, they toke greate indignacion, and gathered the together agaynst the kynge saynge: The kynge is become a Iewe also, he hath destroyed Bell, he hath slayne the dragon, and put the prestes to death. So they came to the kynge & sayde: Let vs haue Daniel, or els we wyll destroye the and thyne house.

Now whan the kynge sawe, that they russhed in so sore vpon hym, and yt necessite coustrayned hym: * he delyuered Daniel vnto them, which cast hym in to the lyōs dēne, where he was sixe dayes. In the dēne ther were seuen

So when Antiochus beganne to be

And whan he had taken awaye all to-and so fulfilled his malicious pryde, he it a stronge holde for them. Besyde all this they set wicked people and vngod-ly men to kepe it, stoared it with wea-pens and vytayles: gathered the goo-des of Ierusalem, and layed them vp there: thus became it a theues castell.

And this was done to laye wayte for the people that wente in to ye Sanctuary, and for the cruell destruccyon of Israel. Thus they shed innocent bloud on euery syde of the Sanctuarye, and defyled it: In so much that ye cytesyns were fayne to departe, and the cytie became an habitacyon of straungers, beynge desolate of hir owne sede, for hir owne natiues were fayne to leaue her.
Hir Sanctuarye was clene wasted, Tobi.2.b
* hir holy dayes wer turned in to mor- Amos.8.b nynge, hir Sabbathes were had in derision, & hir honour brought to naught Loke how great hir glory was afore, so great was hir confusyon, & hir ioye turned in to sorowe.

E * Antiochus also the kinge sent out 2.Mac.6.a a commission vnto all his kyngdome, that all the people shulde be one. Then they lefte euery man his lawe, and al ye Heythen agreed to the cōmaundement of kynge Antiochus. Yee many of the Israelites cōsēted there vnto, offryng vnto Idols, & defelynge the Sabbath.
So the kynge Antiochus sent his mes-saungers with his cōmissyon vnto Ie-rusalem, and to all the cyties of Iuda: that they shulde folowe the lawes of ye Heythen, and forbad ether burntoffe-ryng, meatofferynge, or peaceofferynge to be made in the Temple of God, and ther shulde no Sabbath nor hys feast daye be kepte: but commaunded that the Sanctuarye and the holy peo ple of Israel shulde be defyled.

He commaunded also yt ther shuld be set vp other altares, temples and I= dols: to offre vp swynes fleshe & other vnclene beastes: that men shulde leaue theyr chyldren vncircumcised, to defyle theyr soules wyth all maner of vnclen= nes and abhominacyons: yt they might so forget the lawe, and chaunge all the holy ordynaunces of God: and yt who so euer wolde not do accordyng to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus shulde suffre death. In lyke maner com maunded he thorow out al his realme, and set rulers ouer the people, for to cō pel them to do these thynges, commaū dynge the cytyes of Juda to do sacri= fice vnto Idols.
Then wente the people vnto ye Hei then by heapes, forsoke the lawe of the LORDE and commytted much euell in the lande: yee and chased out the se= crete Israelites, whiche had hyd them selues in corners & preuy places. The F xv. daye of the moneth Casleu, in the C.xlv. yeare, set kynge Antiochus an ab hominable Idoll of desolacion vpō the altare of God, and they buylded alta= res thorowe out all the cyties of Juda on euery syde, before the dores of ye hou ses, and in the stretes: where they brent Jere.36.c. incense, and dyd sacrifice. * And as for the bokes of the lawe of God, they brent them in the fyre, and rente them in peces. What so euer he was yt had a boke of ye Testament of ye LOR DE founde by hym, yee who so euer en deuoured hymselfe to kepe the lawe of the LORDE, the kynges commaūde= ment was that they shulde put hym to death. And thorow his authorite they executed these thynges euery moneth, vpon the people of Israell that were founde in the cyties.
2.Mac.6b *The fyue and twentye daye of ye moneth, what tyme as they dyd sacry= fice vpon the altare (which stode in the steade of the altare of the LORDE) accordynge to the commaundement of kyng Antiochus, they put certayne wo men to death, whiche had caused theyr chyldren to be circumcysed: Not onely that, but they hanged vp the chyldren by the neckes thorow out all theyr hou= ses, and slewe the circumcysers of thē.

Yet were ther many of the people of Israel, which determined in thēselues, yt they wolde not eat vncleane thin ges: but chose rather to suffre death, thē to be defyled with vncleane meates.
So because they wolde not breake the blessed lawe of God, they were cruelly slayne. And this great tyranny increa= sed very sore vpon the people of Is= rael.

The.II. Chapter.

How feruently Matathias and his sonnes stryue for the honoure of God and welfare of the people: Howe swetely he exorteth his sonnes (euen in the houre of his death) to be stedfast in the lawe of God.

IN those dayes ther dyd ry A se vp one Mathathias the sonne of Jhon, the sōne of Simeon the prest (out of ye kynred of Joarib) from Je rusalem, and dwelt vpon the mount of Modin, and had fyue sōnes: Jhon cal= led Gaddis: Simon called Thasi: Ju= das otherwyse called Machabeus: E= leasar otherwyse called Abaron: & Jo= nathas, whose surname was Apphus.
These sawe the euel, that was done a= monge the people of Juda and Jeru= salem. And Matathias sayde: Wo is me, alas that euer I was borne, to se this mysery of my people, and the pite= ous destruccyon of the holy cytie: and thus to syt so styll, it beynge delyuered in to the handes of the enemies. *Hir 1.Mac.4 Sanctuary is come in to the power of straungers, hir temple is, as it were a man that hath lost his good name. Hir precyous ornamentes are caryed awaye captiue, hyr olde men are slayne in the stretes, and hyr yonge men are falle tho rowe the swearde of the enemyes.
What people is it, that hath not some possession in hir kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten some of hir spoy= les? All hir glory is taken awaye. She was a Quene, and now she is become an handmayde. Beholde our Sāctuary our bewty & honour is waisted awaye and defyled by the gentyles. What hel peth it vs thē to lyue? And Mathathi as rente his clothes, he and his sōnes, & put sackcloth vpon them, and mour ned very sore.
Then came the men thyther which B were sent of kynge Antiochus, to cōpel such as were fled in ye cytie of Modin, for to do sacryfyce and to burne incense unto Idols, and to forsake the lawe of God. So manye of the people of Is raell consented and enclyned unto the̅, but Matathias and his sonnes remay ned stedfaste. Then spake the commis sioners of kynge Antiochus, and sayd unto Matathias: Thou arte a noble man, of hyghe reputacyon and greate in thys cytye, havynge fayre chylderen and brethren Come thou therfore fyrst and fulfyll the kynges commaundemente, lyke as all the Heythen have done, yee and the men of Juda, & such as remayne at Jerusalem: so shalte thou and thy chyldren be in the kinges favoure, and enryched wyth golde, syl uer and greate rewardes.

Matathias answered, and spake wyth a loude voyce: Though all nacy ons obeye the kynge Antiochus, and fall awaye everye man from kepynge the lawe of theyr fathers: though they consente to his commaundementes, yet wyll I and my sonnes and my brethre̅, not fall from the lawe of our fathers.
...u.5.b God forbyd we shulde: * that were not good for us, that we shuld forsake the lawe and ordinaunces of God, and to agre unto the commaundemente of kynge Antiochus. Therfore we wyll do no such sacryfyce, nother breake the wordes ther came one of the Jewes, whiche openlye in the syghte of al, dyd sacryfyce unto the Idols upon the aul ter in the cytye of Modin, accordynge to the kynges commaundemente.

C When Matathias sawe thys, it greued hym at the harte, so that hys raynes shoke wythall, and hys wrath kyndled for verye zele of the lawe.
Wyth that he gave a skippe forth, and kylled the Jewe besyde the aulter: Yee and slewe the kynges commissioner, that compelled hym to do sacryfyce, and destroyed the aulter at the same of God, * lyke as Phineas dyd unto Zambri the sonne of Salomi. And Ma tathias cryed wyth a loude voyce throrowe the cytye, sayenge: Who so is fer ...ue.5.a uente in the lawe, to kepe the convenaunte, let hym folowe me. * So he and hys sonnes fled in to the moun-taynes, and lefte all y^t ever they hadde in the cytye. Manye other godlye men also departed in to the wyldernesse, wyth theyre chylderen, theyre wyves, and theyre cattell, and remayned there: for the tyrannye increased so sore upon them.

D Nowe whan the kynges servauntes and the hooste, whiche was at Jerusalem in the cytye of David herde, that certayne men hadde broken the kynges commaundemente, and were gone theyre waie to the wyldernesse in to secrete places, and that ther were manye departed after them: they folowed upon them to fyghte agaynste them on the Sabbath daye, and sayde: Wyll ye yet rebell? Get you hence, and do the commaundemente of kynge An tiochus, and ye shall lyve. They answe red: * We wyll not go forthe, nother Josue. 5.b wyll we do the kynges commaunde-ment, to defile the Sabbath day. Then beganne they to fyghte againste them: nevertheless they gave them none other answer, nother cast they one stone at them, nor made faste theyre prevye places, but sayde: We wyll dye all in oure innocency, heaven and earth shal testify with us, that ye put us to death wrongeouslye. Thus they foughte a-gaynste them upon the Sabbath, and slewe both men and cattell, theyre wyves and theyr chylderen, to the nombre of a thousande people.

E When Matathias and his fren-des herde thys, they mourned for them ryghte sore, and sayde one to another: Yf so be that we all do as oure brethren have done, and fyghte not for oure lyves and for oure lawes agaynst the Heythen, then shall they soone rote us oute of the earth. So they con cluded among them selves at the same tyme, sayenge: What so ever he be that commeth to make battayll wyth us upon the Sabbath daye, we wyll fyghte agaynste hym, and not dye all, as oure brethren that were murthe-red so haynouslye. Upon thys came the Synagoge of the Jewes unto the stronge men of Israell, all suche as were fervente in the lawe. And al they that were fled for persecucyon, came to helpe them, and to stonde by them: In so muche that they gathered an hooste of men, and slewe the wyc-ked doers in theyre gelousye, and the ungodlye men in theyre wrath. Some of the wycked fled unto the Heythen, and escaped.

Thus Matathias and hys frendes wente about, and destroied the aulters, and cyrcumcysed the chylderen, that had not yet receaued the cyrcumcysyon, as manye as they founde with in the coastes of Israell: and folowed myghtelye vpon the chyldren of pryde and thys acte prospered in theyre handes: In so muche, that they kepte the lawe agaynst the power of the Gentyles and the kynges, and gaue not ouer theyr dominiō vnto wicked doers.

F After thys when the tyme drewe on faste, that Matathias shuld dye, he sayde vnto his sonnes. Nowe is pryde and persecutyon increased, now is the tyme of destruccyon and wrathfull displeasure: Wherfore (o my sonnes) be ye feruent in ỷ law, & ioperde your lyues for ỷ Testament of the fathers: cal to remembraunce what actes oure fathers dyd in theyr tyme, so shall ye receaue greate honoure and an euerlastynge name.

And beholde, I knowe that youre brother Symon is a man of wysdome se that ye geue eare vnto hym alwaye, he shall be a father vnto you. So he gaue them hys blessynge: and was layed by hys fathers: and dyed in the C.xlvi. yeare at Modin, where hys sonnes buryed hym in hys fathers sepulcre, and all Israell made greate lamentacyon for hym.

A Josephus cap.8.9.li 12.Antiq. Then stode vp Judas Machabeus in his fathers stede, and all hys brethren helped hym: and so dydde all that helde wyth hys father and foughte wyth chearfulnesse for Israell. So Judas gat hys people great

Ps.100.b. at hys praye. * He was an enemye to the wycked, and hunted them oute:

2.Ma.8.a * and brente vp those, that vexed hys people. So that hys enemyes fled for feare of hym, and all the workers of vngodlinesse were put to trouble: such lucke and prosperyte was in his hand. Thys greued dyuerse kynges, but Jacob was greatlye reioyced thorow his actes, and he gat hymself a great name for euer.

He wente thorowe the cytyes of Juda, destroyenge the vngodlye oute of them, turnynge awaye the wrathe from Israell, and receauynge suche as were oppressed: and the fame of hym wente vnto the vttermooste parts of the earthe. Then Appollonius (a prynce of Syria) gathered a myghtye greate hooste of the Heythen and oute of Samaria, to fyghte agaynste Israell. Whiche whan Judas perceaued, he went forth to mete him, fought wyth hym, slewe hym and a great multytude wyth hym: the remnaunte fled, and he toke theyre substaunce. Judas also toke Appollonius owne swearde, and foughte wyth it all hys lyfe longe.

B Nowe whan Seron (another prynce of Syrya) herde saye, that Judas hadde gathered vnto hym the congregacyon and church of the faythful, he sayde: I wyll get me a name and a prayse thorowe oute the realme: for I wyll go fyghte wyth Judas and them that are wyth hym, as manye as haue despysed the kynges commaundemēt. So he made hym ready, and ther went wyth hym a grea myghtye hoost of the vngodlye, to stonde by hym, and to be auenged of the chylderen of Israell. And whan they came nye vnto Bethocon. Judas wente forth agaynst them wyth a small companye. And whan hys people sawe suche a greate hooste before them, they sayde vnto Judas: Howe are we able (beynge so fewe) to fyghte agaynste so greate a multytude and so stronge? seynge we be so werye, and haue fasted all thys daye?

1.Re.14.a *But Judas sayde: * It is a small matter for many to be ouercome wyth fewe: Yee ther is no dyfference to the God of heauen, to delyuer by a greate multytude or by a small companye: * for the victorye of the bat- 2.Pa.25.b C tayll stondeth not in the multytude of the hooste, but the strengthe commeth from heauen: Beholde, they come agaynste vs wyth a presumptuous and proude multytude, to destroye vs oure wyues, and oure chylderen, and to robbe vs: But we wyll fyghte for oure lyues, and for our lawes, and the LORDE hymselfe shall destroye them before oure face: therfore be not ye afrayed of them.

As soone as he had spoken these wordes, he leapte sodenlye vpon them Thus was Seron smytten, and hys hooste put to flyghte, and Judas folowed vpon them beyonde Bethoron vnto the playne felde: where ther were slayne eyghte hundrethe men of them, and the resydue fled in to the londe of the Phylystynes. Then all the Heythen on euerye syde were afrayed for Judas and hys bretheren: so that the rumour of hym came vnto the kynges eares, for all the Gentyles coulde tell of the warres of Judas.

So whan kynge Antiochus herd these tydynges, he was angrie in hys mynde: wherfore he sente forth and gathered an hooste of hys whole realme, verye stronge armyes: and opened his treasurye, and gaue hys hoost a yeares wages in hande, commaundyng them to be readye at all tymes. D

Neuerthelesse whan he saw, that ther was not moneye ynoughe in hys treasuries, and that thorowe the dyscorde and persecucyon, which he made in the londe (to putte down the lawes that had ben of olde tyme) hys costumes and trybutes of the lond were mynyshed: he feared that he was not able for to beare the costes, and charges onye lenger, nor to haue suche gyftes, to geue so lyberallye as he dydde afore, more then the kynges that were befor hym:

Wherfore he was heuye in hys mynde, and thoughte * to go in Persides, for to take trybutes of the lond, and so to gather muche moneye. So he lefte Lisias (a noble man of the kinges bloude) to ouerse the kynges busynesse, from the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egypte: and to kepe well hys sonne Antiochus, tyl he came agayne. 1.Ma.6.a

Moreouer, he gaue hym half of his hooste, and Elephantes, and committed vnto hym euerye thynge of hys mynde, concernyng those which dwelt in Juda, and Jerusalem: that he shuld sende oute an armye agaynste them, to destroye and to rote oute the power of Israell and the remnaunte of Jerusalem, to put oute theyr memoryall from that place, to set straungers for to inhabyte all theyre quarters, and to parte theyr londe amonge them. Thus the kinge toke the other parte of the hoost and departed from Antioche (a cyte of hys realme) ouer the water of Euphrates, in the hundrethe and. xlvii. yeare, and wente thorowe the hyghe contryes. E Jose. cap. 10. libro. 12 Antiqui.

*And Lisias chose vnto him Ptolome the sonne of Dorimnus, Nicanor, and Gorgias myghtye men, and the kynges frendes. These he sente with 2.Mac.8.b fourtye thousande foote men, and. vii. thousande horsmen, for to go in to the londe of Juda, and to destroye it, as the kyng commaunded. So they went forth with al their power, and came to Emmaus in to the playn felde. Whan the marchauntes herde the rumoure of them, they and theyr seruauntes toke verye muche sylver and golde, for to bye the chylderen of Israell to be theyre bonde men. Ther came vnto them also yet men of warre on euerye syde, oute of Syria and from the Palestynes.

F Nowe whan Judas and hys brethren sawe that trouble increased, and that the hooste drewe nye vnto theyre borders: consyderynge the kynges wordes whiche he commaunded vnto the people: namelye, that they shulde vtterlye wayste and destroye them: They sayde one to another: Let vs redresse the decaye of oure people, let vs fyght for oure folke and for oure Sanctuary. Then the congregacyon were soon readye gathered to fyghte, to pray and to make supplycacyon vnto God, for mercye and grace.

1.Ma.1.d. * As for Jerusalem, it laye voyde, and was as it had bene a wyldernesse. Ther wente no man in or oute at it, and the Sanctuarye was troden downe. The aleauntes kepte the castel, there was the habitacyon of ye Heythen. The myrthe of Jacob was taken away the pype and the harp was gone from amonge them.

The Israelytes gathered them together, and came to Maspha before Jerusalem: for in Maspha was the

So they fasted that daye, and put sack clothes vpon them, caste ashes vppon theyre heades, rente theyr clothes, and layde forth the bokes of the law (wher oute the Heythen soughte the lykenesse of theyr ymages) and broughte the prestes ornamentes, the fyrstlynges, and the tythes. They set there also Num.6.a. the * absteyners (whiche had fulfylled theyr dayes) before God, and cryed wyth loude voyce towarde heauen, sayenge: what shall we do wyth these? and whyther shall we carye them awaye?

G For thy Sanctuarye is troden downe, and defyled, thy prestes are come to heuynesse, and dyshonour: and beholde, the Heythē are come together for to destroye vs. Thou knowest what thynges they ymagen agaynste vs. Howe maye we stonde before them, excepte thou (o God) be oure helpe?

They blewe oute the trompettes also wyth a loude voyce. Then Judas ordened * captaynes ouer the people: Exo.18.d.

where the Jewes hooste laye, and so to slaye them sodenlye. Nowe the men that kepte the castell, were the conueyers of them. Then arose Judas to smyte the chefe, and pryncypall of the kynges hooste at Emmaus: for the armye was not yet come together. In the meane season came Gorgias by nyghte in to Judas tentes: and whan he found no man there, he sought them in the mountaynes, and thoughte they had ben fled away because of him. But whan it was daye, Judas shewed hymselfe in the felde with thre thousande men onelye, which hadde nother harnesse nor sweardes to theyre myndes.

But on the other syde, they sawe that the Heythen were myghtye, and well harnesshed, and theyr horsmen aboute them, and all these well experte in feates of warre. Then sayde Judas to the men ÿ were wyth hym: * Feare

Then the Heythen lyfte vp theyr eyes: and whan they sawe that they were commynge agaynste them, they wente oute of theyr tentes in to ÿ battayll: and they that were wyth Judas
2. Ma. 8. d blewe vp the trompettes. * So they buckled together, and the Heythe were dyscomfyted, and fled ouer the playn felde: but the hyndmooste of them were slayne. For they folowed vpon them vnto Assaremoth, and in to the feldes of Idumea towarde Azot, and Jamnia: so that ther were slayn of them vpon a thre thousande men. So Judas turned agayne wyth hys hooste, and sayde vnto the people: Be not gredye of the spoyles, we haue yet a battayll to fyghte: for Gorgias and hys hooste are here by vs in the mountaynes, but stonde ye fast agaynste youre enemyes and ouercome them: then maye ye safe lye take the spoyles.

C As Judas was speakynge these wordes, ther appeared one part of thē vpon the mounte. But whan Gorgias saw that they of hys party were fled, and thr tentes brēt vp (for by ÿ smoke they myghte vnderstonde what was done) they perceauynge thys, were verye sore afrayed: and whan they sawe also that Judas and hys hooste were in the felde readye to stryke battayll, they fled euerychone in to the londe of the heythen.

So Judas turned agayn to spoyle the tentes, where they gat much golde & syluer, precyous stones, purple & great ryches. Thus they wente home, and

Dan. 3. a. for euer: And so Israell hadde a greate victorye in that daye.

Nowe all the Heythen that escaped, came and told Lisias euerye thing as it happened: Wherfor Lisias was sore afrayed and greued in his mynde, because Israell had not gotten suche mysfortune as he wolde they shulde, nother as the kynge commaunded. The nexte yeare folowynge, gathered Lisias thre score thousande chosen men of foote, and fyue thousand horsmen, to fyghte agaynste them.

So they came in to Jewrye, and D pitched theyre tentes at Bethoron, where Judas came agaynste them wyth ten thousande men. And whan he sawe so greate and myghtye an hooste, he made hys prayer and sayde: Blessed be thou (o Sauioure of Israell,) * whiche dyddeste destroye 1. Re. 17. g then in to the hande of Jonathas (the sonne of Saull,) and of hys weapenbearer.

Put thys hooste nowe in to the hande of thy people of Israell, and let them be confounded in theyr multytude and horsmen. Make them afrayed, and dyscomforte the boldnesse of theyr strengthe, that they maye be moued thorowe theyre destruccyon. Caste them downe thorowe the swearde of thy louers, then shal al they that know thy name, prayse the wyth thankesgeuynge.

So they stroke the battayll, and ther were slayne of Lisias hoost, fyue thousande men. Then Lisias seynge the dyscomfytynge of hys men, and ÿ manlynesse of the Jewes, howe they were readye, ether to lyue or to dye lyke men, he wente vnto Antioche, and chose oute men of warre: that whan they were gathered together, they myghte come agayne in to Jewrye. Then sayde Judas and hys brethren: Beholde, oure enemyes are dyscomfyted: Let vs nowe go vp, to clense and repayre the Sanctuarye. E
* Upon thys, all the hooste ga- 2 Ma. 10. a thered them together, and went vp vnto mounte Syon. Nowe whan they sawe the Sanctuarye layed wayst, the aulter defyled, the dores brente vp, the shrubbes growing in the courtes, lyke as in a wood or vpon mountaines, yee & that the prestes celles were broken downe: They rent theyr clothes, made greate lamentacyon, caste ashes vpon theyre heades, fell downe flat to the grounde, made a greate noyse wyth the trompettes, and cryed towarde heauen.

Then Judas appoynted certayne men to fyghte agaynste those whiche were in the castell, till they had clensed the Sanctuarye. So he chose prestes that were vndefyled, such as had pleasure in the lawe of God: and they clen-sed the Sanctuarye, and bare oute the defyled stones in to an vncleane place.
And for so much as ỹ aulter of burntofferynges was vnhalowed, he toke aduysement, what he myght do wyth all: so he thoughte it was beste to destroye it (lest it shulde happen to do the onye shame) for the Heythen had defy-led it, and therfore they brake it down.
As for the stones, they layed them vp vpon the mountayne by the house in a conueniente place: tyll ther came a prophet to shewe, what shulde be done F wyth them.
Exo. 20.d. *So they toke whole stones ac-vp the Sanctuarye wythyn and wyth made newe ornamentes, and broughte the candelstycke, the aulter of incense and the table in to the temple. The incense layed they vpon the aulter, and lyghted the lampes whiche were vpon the cādelstycke, that they myght burne the newe burntofferynge aulter, that they had made: after the tyme and season that the Heythen had defyled it.

The same daye was it set vp agayne wt songes, pypes, harpes, and cymbales.
G And all the people fell vpon theyr the temple also wyth crownes, & shyland celles, and hanged dores vppon them. Thus was ther very great glad nesse amonge the people, because the blasphemye of the Heythen was put thane (for they dwelte rounde aboute the Israelytes) where he slewe a spoythoughte also vpon the malyce and vn faythfulnesse of the chyldren of Bean, howe they were a snare and stoppe vn to the people, and howe they layed wayte for them in the hygh way, wher fore he shut them vp in to towers, and came vnto them, condempned them, and brente vp theyre towres, wyth all that were in them.

Afterwarde wente he agaynst the chyldren of Ammon, wherof he founde a myghtye power and a greate multytude of people, wyth Timothe theyr captayne. So he stroke many battayls wyth them, whiche were destroyed before hym. And whan he had slayne them he wanne Gazer the cytye, wyth the townes belongynge therto, and so turned agayne in to Iewrye. The Heythen also in Galaad gathered them together, agaynste the Israelytes that were in theyr quarters, to slaye them: but they fled to the castell of Dathema, and sent letters vnto Iudas, and B hys brethren sayenge: The Heythē are gathered agaynste vs on euerye syde, to destroye vs, and nowe they make them for to come and laye sege to the castell, whereunto we are fled, and Tymothe is the captayne of theyre hoost: come therfore: and delyuer vs oute of theyr handes, for ther is a greate multytude of vs slayne alreadye. Yee and oure brethren that were at Tubin, are slayne and destroyed (well nye a thousande men) and theyr wyues, theyr children and theyre goodes haue the enemyes led awaye captyue.

Whyle these letters were yet a readynge: behold, ther came other messaungers from Galile, wyth rente clothes: which tolde euen the same tydynges, and sayd, that they of Ptolomais of Tyre and Sydon were gathered agaynst them, and that all Galile was fylled wyth enemyes to destroye Israell. * Whan Iudas and the people herde this, they came together (a great congregacyon) to deuyse, what they myght do for theyr brethren, that were in trouble and beseged of theyr enemyes. And Iudas sayde vnto Symon his brother: chose the oute certayne men, and go delyuer thy brethren in Galyle. As for me and my brother Ionathas, we wyll go in to Galaadithim. So he lefte Iosephus the sonne of Zachary, & Azarias to be captaynes of ŷ people and to kepe the remnaūt of the hoost in Iewrye, & commaunded thē, sayenge: Take the ouersyghte of this people, and se that ye make no warre agaynste the Heythen, vntyll the tyme that we come agayne. And vnto Symon he gaue thre thousand men for to go in to Galyle, but Iudas hymselfe had eyghte thousande in to Galaadithim.

C Then wente Symon in to Galyle, and stroke dyuerse battayls wyth the Heythen: whome he dyscomfyted, and folowed vpon them vnto ŷ porte of Ptolamais. And ther were slayn of the Heythen almoost .iii. thousand mē. So he toke the spoiles of them, and caryed awaye the Israelytes (that were in Galile and Arbatis) wyth theyre wyues, theyre chylderen and all ŷ they had, and broughte them in to Iewrye wyth greate gladnesse. Iudas Machabeus also and hys brother Ionathas, wente ouer Iordan, and trauayled .iii. dayes iourneye in the wyldernesse: where the Nabuthees met them, and receaued them louynglye, and told thē euerye thynge that had happened vnto theyr brethren in Galaadithim, and how that many of thē were beseged in Barasa, Bosor, Alimis, Casphor, Mageth and Carnaim (all these are strōg walled and myghtye great cytyes) and that they were kept in other cytyes of Galaad also: and tomorowe they are appoynted to brynge theyre hooste vnto these cytyes, to take them, and to wynne them in one daye.

So Iudas and hys hoost turned in all the hayste in the wyldernesse towarde Bosor, and wanne the cytye, slewe all the males wyth the swearde, toke all theyr goodes, and set fyre vpō the cytye. And in the nyght they toke theyr iourneye from thence, and came to the castell. And by tymes in the mornynge whan they loked vp: beholde, ther was an innumerable people bearynge ladders and other instrumentes of warre to take the castel and to ouercome them.

Whan Iudas sawe that the battayll beganne, and that the noyse therof wente vp and ranne in to the heauen, and that ther was so great a crie in the cytye: he sayde vnto hys hooste: Fyght thys daye for youre brethren. And so came behynde theyr enemies in thre companyes, and blewe vp the trompettes, and cryed in theyr prayer to God.

But as soone as Tymothes hoost perceaued ŷ Machabeus was there, they fled from hym, and the other slew them downe ryghte sore, so that ther were kylled of them the same daye, almooste eyghte thousande men. Then departed Iudas vnto Maspha, layed sege vnto it and wanne it, slewe all the males in it, spoyled it, and set fyre vpon it. Frō thence wente he and toke D

Casbo, Mageth, Bosor and the other cytyes in Galaad.

2.Ma.10.d * After thys gathered Timothe another hooste, whiche pitched theyre tentes before Raphon beyonde the wa ter. Judas sente to spye the hoost, and they broughte hym worde agayne, sa= yenge: All the Heythen that be rounde aboute vs, are gathered vnto hym, and the hooste is verye greate: Yee they haue hyred the Arabians to helpe them and haue pitched theyr tentes beyonde the water, and are readye to come and fyghte agaynste the. So Judas wente on to mete them.

And Timothe sayde vnto the cap taynes of his hooste: whan Judas and hys hooste come nye the ryuer: yf he go ouer firste, we shal not be able to with stonde hym: for why? he wyl be to strõg for vs. But yf he darre not come ouer, so that he pitche hys tente beyonde the water: then wyll we go ouer, for we shall be stronge ynough agaynste hym.
Nowe as soone as Judas came to the ryuer, he appoynted certayne scrybes of the people and commaunded them, sayeng: Se that ye leaue none behynde vpon thys syde of the ryuer, but let eue rye man come to the battayll. So he wente fyrste ouer vnto them, and hys people after hym.

And all the Heythen were dyscom fyted before him, and let theyr weapẽs fall, and ranne in to the temple that was at Carnaim. Whiche cytye Ju= das wanne and brent the temple wyth all that were in it: So was Carnaim subdued, and myghte not wythstonde Judas. Then Judas gathered all the Israelytes that were in Galaad, thim from the leeste vnto the mooste, wyth theyr wyues, and theyr chylderen (a ve ry greate hooste) for to come in to the londe of Juda.

E * So they came vnto Ephron, 2.Ma.12.e whiche was a myghtye greate and stronge cytye, and laye in theyr waye.
For they coulde not go by it, nother of the ryghte hande, nor of the lefte, but muste go thorowe it. Neuerthelesse they that were in the cytye, wolde not let them go thorow, but walled vp the portes wyth stones. And Judas sente vnto them wyth peaceable wordes, sa Nu.20.c. yenge: * Let vs passe thorowe youre londe, that we maye go in to oure own countre: ther shall no body do you harm we wyll but onely go thorowe. But they wolde not let them in.

Wherfore Judas commaunded a proclamacyon to be made thorowe oute the hooste, that euery man shulde kepe hys ordre: and so they dyd theyre beste lyke valeaunte men.

And Judas beseged the cytye all that daye, and all that nyghte, and so wanne it: where they slewe as manye as were males, and destroyed the cytie and spoyled it, and wente thorowe all the cytye ouer them that were slayne.
Then wente they ouer Jordane in to the playne felde before Bethsan. And Judas helped those forwarde that came behynde, and gaue the people good exhortacyon all the waye tho= londe of Juda. Thus they wente vp vnto the mounte Syon, where they of slayn, but came home agayn peaceably.

Now what tyme as Judas, and Jo mõ theyr brother in Galile before Pto lomais: Then Josephus the son of Za= charye, and Azaryas the captaynes, hea of the battels that were striken, sayde: Let vs get vs a name also, & go fyghte agaynste the Heythen, that are rounde aboute vs.

So they gaue theyr hooste a com= F maundement, and went toward Jam= oute of the cytye, to fyghte agaynste them: Josephus also and Azarias were chased vnto the borders of Jewrye, and ther were slayne that daye of the people of Israell two thousande men: so that ther was a greate myserye a= monge the people, * and all because 1.Ma.5.b they were not obediente vnto Judas, and hys brethren, but thoughte they shulde quyte them selues manfully.

Neuerthelesse they came not of the se= helped. But the men that were wyth Judas, were greatlye commended in the syghte of all Israell and all Hey= then, where so euer theyre name was herde vpon, and the people came vnto them byddynge them welcome.

After thys went Judas forth wyth hys brethren, and foughte agaynst the chylderen of Esau, in the londe that ly the cytye of Hebron, and the townes that lye besyde it: and as for the walles & towres rounde about it, he burnt them vp. Than remoued he to go in to the londe of the Philistines, and wente thorowe Samaria. At the same tyme were ther many prestes slayne in ŷ battayl, which wylfully and wythout aduysemēt, wente out for to fyght to get them honoure. And whan Judas cam to Azot in the Philistines londe, * he brake downe theyr altares, burnte the images of theyr Idols, spoyled the cyties, and came agayne in the lande of Juda.

Antiochus doth besege Elimas in Persia. Judas layeth sege to ŷ castell at Jerusalem, the kynge goeth aboute to helpe them that are therein.

A Josephus lib.12 an. ca.13. 2.mac.9.a

NOw * whan kynge Antiochus trauayled thorowe the hygh contreys, he herde ŷ Elimas in Persia was a noble and plenteous cytie in syluer and golde, and that ther was in it a very rych temple where as were clothes, cote armoures, and shyldes of golde: which Alexander the sonne of Philippe kynge of Macedonia had left behynde hym. Wherfore he went aboute to take the cytie, and to spoyle it, but he was not able: for the cytesīs were warned of it, and foughte wyth hym. And so he fled, and departed wt great heuynesse, and came agayne into Babilō. Moreouer ther cam one which broughte hym tydynges in Perside, * that hys hoostes, which were in the lande of Juda, were dryuen awaye, & howe that Lisias wente forth fyrste wt a great power, and was dryuen away of the Jewes: howe they had wonne the victorye, and gotten great goodes out of the hoostes that peryshed: how they had broken downe the abhominacion, * which he set vp vpon the altare at Jerusalem, and sensed the Sanctuarye wyth hygh walles, lyke as it was afore tyme & Bethsura hys cytie also.

1.Mac.1.f.

B So it chaunced that whā the kyng had herde these wordes, he was afrayed and greued verye sore. Wherfore, he layed hym downe vpon hys bedde, and fell sycke for very sorowe: and all because it had not happened as he had deuysed And there contynued he longe for hys grefe was euer more and more, so that he sawe he muste nedes dye. Therfore he sente for hys frendes, and sayd vnto them: the slepe is gone from myne eyes, for the very sorowe and vexacion of harte that I haue. For whan I consydre in my mynde the greate aduersyte that I am come vnto, and the floudes of heuynesse ŷ I am in, where as afore tyme I was so merye. and so greately set by (by reasō of my power.) Forwhy? I knowe, ŷ these troubles are come vpō me for the same cause. And beholde, I must dye wyth greate sorow in a straunge londe,

Then called he for one Phylyppe a frende of hys: whom he made ruler of all hys realme, & gaue hym the crowne the robe and hys rynge: that he shulde take hys sonne Antiochus vnto hym & brynge hym vp, tyll he myght reygne hymself.* So the kynge Antiochus dyed there in the C.xlix. yeare. When Lysyas knewe ŷ the kynge was dead, he ordened Antiochus his sōne (* whō he had brought vp) to raygne in hys fathers steade and called hym Eupator. Now they that were in the castell (at Jerusalem) kepte in the Jewes rounde aboute the Sanctuarye, and sought euer styl to do them harme, for the strengthenynge of the heythen.

As for the remnaũt of the horsemẽ deuided, one parte vpon the hygh mou the londe, were afrayed at the noyse of theyr hoost, whan the multytude went forth, and whan the weapens smote to myghtye. Iudas also and his hoost en-

Now whan Eleasar the sonne of

But whan they came out of the 2. mac. 13. d 15. d cytie (because they had no vytayles the toke Bethsura, and set men to kepe it, and turned his hoost to the place of the Sãctuarye, and layed sege to it a great whyle, where he made all maner of ordynaunce: handbowes, fyrye dartes, rackettes to cast stones, scorpions to shute arowes, & slynges. The Iewes also made ordynaunce agaynst theyrs, and fought a longe season.

But in the cytie, ther were no vytayles, for it was the seuenth yeare of the warres, and those Heythen that remained in Iewry had eaten vp al theyr stoare. And in the Sãctuary were few men lefte, for the hunger came so vpon them, that they were scattered abrode euery man to his owne place.
So whan Lysias herde, that Phi-

Let vs agre with these men, and take truce wt them and with all theyr people and graunte them to lyue after theyr lawe, as they dyd afore. For they be greued, and do al these thynges against vs because we haue despysed theyr lawe. So ye kynge and the prynces were content, and sent vnto them to make peace, and they receaued it. Now whan the kynge, and the prynces had made an oth vnto the, they came out of the castell, & the kyng wente vp to mount Sion. But whan he sawe that the place was well fenced he brake the oth that he had made, and commaunded to destroy the wal rounde aboute. Then departed he in al ye haist, and returned vnto Antioche, where he founde Philippe hauynge domynion of the cytie. So he fought agaynst him and toke the cytie agayne in to his hondes.

The.vii.Chapter.

The tyranny of Demetrius. They take truce with the people of God, and kepe it not.

A 2.Mac.14.a In the.C.li. yeare came Demetrius the sonne of Seleucus from the cytie of Rome with a smal company of men, vnto a citie of the see coast, and there he bare rule. And it chaunced ye whan he cam to Antioche the cytie of his progenitours, his hoost toke Antiochus & Lisias, to bryng the vnto him. But whan it was tolde hym, he sayde: Let me not se theyr faces. So the hoost put them to death. Now whan Demetrius was set vpon ye trone of his kyngdome, ther came vnto hym wicked and vngodly men of Israel: whose captayn was Alcimus, ye wolde haue ben made hygh prest. These men accused the people of Israell vnto the kynge, sayenge: Judas and his brethre haue slayne thy frendes, & dryuen vs out of our owne lande. Wherfore sende now some man (to whom thou geuest credence,) that he maye go and se all the destruccyon, which he hath done vnto vs and to ye kynges lande, and let hym be punysshed with all his frendes and fauourers.

B Then the kynge chose Bachydes a frende of his whiche was a man of great power in the realme (beyonde the great water) and faythful vnto ye kyng and sent hym to se the destruccyon that Judas had done. And as for that wycked Alcimus, he made him hyghe prest, and commaunded hym to be auenged of the chyldre of Israell. So they stode vp, and came with a greate hoost in to the lande of Juda, sendynge messaungers to Judas and his brethre, & spea kynge vnto them with peaceable wordes: but vnder deceate. *Therfore Judas and his people beleued not theyr sayenge, for they sawe that they were come with a great hoost. 1.Mac.2.D

After this came the scribes together vnto Alcimus and Bachides, trustynge the best vnto them. And fyrst the Assideans requyred peace of them, sayenge: Alcimus the prest is come of the sede of Aaron, how can he deceaue vs? So they gaue them louynge wordes, & swore vnto them, and sayd: We wyll do you no harme, nother your frendes: and they beleued them. But the very same daye toke they.lx.men of them, & slewe them: accordynge to the wordes that are wrytten. *They haue caste ye flesh of thy sayntes, & shed theyr bloud rounde aboute Jerusalem, & ther was no man that wolde bury them. Psa.78.a

C So ther cam a great feare, & drede amonge the people, sayenge: Ther is nother trueth nor righteousnes in the, for they haue broke the appoyntement and oth that is made. And Bachydes remoued his hoost from Jerusalem, & pitched his tent at Bethzecha: wher he sent forth, and toke many of them that had forsaken hym: He slewe many of ye people also, and cast them in to a great pyt. Then commytted he the lande vnto Alcimus, and lefte men of warre wt hym to helpe hym, and Bachides hym selfe wente vnto the kynge. And thus Alcimus defended his hygh presthode, and all suche as vexed Israel, resorted vnto hym: In so much that they optayned the lande of Juda, and dyd muche euel vnto the Israelites.

Now whan Judas sawe all ye myschefe that Alcimus, and his companye had done (yee more then the Heythen them selues) vnto the Israelites: He wente forth rounde aboute all the borders of Jewry, and punysshed those vnfaythfull rennagates, so that they cam nomore out into the contry. So whan Alcimus saw, that Judas and his people had gotten the vpperhande, and ye he was not able to abyde the, he went agayne to the kynge, & sayd al ẏ worst 2.mac.14.a of them that he coulde. * Than the kynge sent Nicanor, one of his chefe prynces (which bare euel wyl vnto Israel) and commaunded hym, ẏ he shuld vtterly destroye the people.

D So Nicanor came to Jerusalem & a great hoost, and sent vnto Judas, & his brethren with frendly wordes (but vnder deceate) sayeng: Ther shalbe no warre betwixte me and you: I wyll come with a few men, to se how ye do, with frendshippe. Upon this he came vnto Judas, and they saluted one ano ther peaceably: but the enemyes were appoynted to take Judas by violence.
Neuertheles it was tolde Judas, that he came vnto hym but vnder deceate: wherfore he gat hym away from him, and wolde se his face nomore. When Nicanor perceaued that his counsell was bewrayed, he wente out to fyghte against Judas besyde Capharsalama: Where ther were slayne of Nicanors hoost. v. M. men: the resydue fled vnto the castell of Dauid.

After this came Nicanor vp vnto mount Siō, & the prestes wyth ẏ elders of ẏ people wente forth to salute hym peaceably, & to shew hym the burntsacrifices that were offred before ẏ kyng But he laughed thē to scorne, mocked them, defyled theyr offerynges, & spake disdaynedly, yee & swore in his wroth, E sayenge: * Yf Judas and his hoost be 2.mac.14.e not now delyuered in to my handes, as soone as euer I come agayne (and fare well) I shall burne vp this house.
With that, wente he out in a great an ger. Then the prestes cam in, and stode before the alter of the temple, wepyng 3.Reg.8.f. and sayenge: * For so muche as thou that thy name myghte be called vpon ple: be auenged of this man, and hys hoost, and let them be slayne with the swearde: remembre the blasphemyes of of them, and suffre them not to conty-nue ony longer.

Whan Nicanor was gone frō Jerusalem, he pitched his tente at Betho ron, and there an hoost met hym out of Siria. And Judas came to Adarsa & 4.Re.19.g thre thousande men, & made his prayer wente forth, and slewe an hūdreth and foure score and fyue thousande of thē: Euen so destroye thou this hoost before vs to daye: that other people may knowe, how that he hath blasphemed thy Sanctuary: and punysh hym, accor dynge to his malicyousnes.

And so the hoostes stroke the feld, F the thyrtenth daye of ẏ moneth * Adar Februari. and Nicanors hoost was discomfyted, * and he hymselfe was fyrst in the bat 2.mac.15.d tayll. When Nicanors men of warre saw that he was killed, they cast away theyr weapens and fled: but the Jewes folowed vpō thē an whole dayes iour ney, from Adazar vnto Gazara, blowynge with the trompettes, and ma-kynge tokens after them. So the Je-wes came forth of all the townes there about, and blewe out theyr hornes vppon them, and turned agaynst them: Thus were they all slayne, and not one of them lefte.

Then they toke theyr substaunce for a praye, & smote of Nicanors head, and his ryght hande (* which he helde 2.mac.14.f vp so proudly) and brought it with thē, and hanged it vp before Jerusalem.
Wherfore the people were excedyng-ly reioyced, and passed ouer that day in gladnesse. And Judas ordeyned, that ẏ same daye (namely the. xiii. daye of the moneth Adar) shulde be kept in myrthe euery yeare. Thus the lande of Juda was in rest a lytle whyle.

The. viii. Chapter.

¶ Judas hearynge how reasonable ẏ Romaynes are, seketh for to make pea ce with them.

IUdas herde also the fame A of the Romaines, that they were myghtye and valeaūt men, agreable to al thynges that are requyred of them, and make peace with all men, whiche come vnto them, and how they were doughtye men of strength. Besydes ẏ it was tolde hym of theyr battayles, & noble actes which they dyd in Galacia how they had cōquered thē & brought them vnder trybute: & what great thin ges they had done in Spayne, how ẏ with theyr wysedome, and sober beha-uoure they had wonne the Mynes of syluer and golde, that are there, and op tayned all the lande, with other places farre from them: how they had discom kyled, and slayne downe the kynges ẏ came vpon them from the vttermoost parte of the earth, and how other people geue thẽ trybute euery yeare: How they had slayne & ouercome Philippe, and the Perses, the kynge of Cethim, and other mo (in battayll,) which had brought theyr ordynaunce agaynst thẽ, how they discomfited great Antiochus kynge of Asia (that wolde nedes fyght with them) hauynge an hundreth and xx. Elephantes, with horsemen, charettes and a very great hoost: how they toke hymselfe alyue, and ordeyned him (with such as shulde raygne after him) to paye them a great tribute, * yee and to fynde them good suerties & pledges. Besydes all this, how they had taken from hym India, Media, and Lidia, (his best landes) & geuen them to kyng Eumenus. Agayne, how they percea-

B uynge that the Grekes were commyng to vexe them, sent agaynst them a captayne of an hoost which gaue them battayle, slewe many of them, led awaye theyr wyues and chyldrẽ captiue, spoyled them, toke possession of theyr londe, destroyed theyr stronge holdes, and subdued them to be theyr bonde men vnto this daye: Moreouer, how that as for other kyngdomes and Iles, which somtyme withstode them, they destroyed them, and broughte them vnder theyr domynyon: But helped euer theyr own frendes and those that were cõfederate with them, and conquered kyngdomes both farre and nye, and that who so euer herde of theyr renowme, was afrayed of them: for whom they wolde helpe to theyr kyngdomes, those raygned: and whome it lyked not them to raygne, they put hym downe: And how they were come to great preeminence: hauynge no kynge amonge them, nother ony man clothed in purple, to be magnyfyed there thorow: but had ordened them selues a courte, where in ther sat.iii.C.and.xx. Senatours daylye vppon the counsell, to dispatch euer ẏ busynesse of the people, and to kepe good ordre: And how that euery yeare they chose a Mayre, to haue ẏ gouernaunce of all theyr lande: to whom euery man was obedient, & that ther was nother euell wyl nor dissencyon amonge them.

C Then Iudas chose Eupolemus the sonne of Jhon, the sonne of Iacob, and Iason, the sonne of Eleasar, and sente thẽ vnto Rome for to make frendshippe, and a bonde of loue with them: that they myght take from them ẏ bondage of the Grekes: for ẏ Iewes sawe that the Grekes wolde subdue ẏ kyngdome of Israel. So they wente vnto Rome (a very great iourney) and came in to the courte, and sayd: Iudas Machabeus with his brethren, and ẏ people of ẏ Iewes hath sent vs vnto you, to make a bõde of frendshippe & peace with you, and ye to note vs as youre louers and frẽdes. And the matter pleased ẏ Romaynes ryght well, wherfore it was wrytten vp: of the which ẏ Romaynes made a wrytynge in tables of laton, and sent it to Ierusalem: ẏ they myght haue by them a memoriall of ẏ same peace and bonde of frendshippe, after this maner: God saue ẏ Romaynes, and the people of the Iewes both by see and by londe, and kepe ẏ sweard and enemy from them for euermore.

Yf ther come fyrst ony warre vpõ the Romaynes or ony of theyr frendes thorowe out all theyr domynyon, the people of the Iewes shall helpe them (as ẏ tyme requyreth) and that with al theyr hartes. Also they shall nother geue nor sẽde vnto theyr enemyes vytayles, weapẽs, money, nor shippes: but fulfyl this charge at the Romaynes pleasure, and take nothynge from them therfore. Agayne yf the people of the Iewes happen fyrst to haue warre, the Romaines shall stonde with thẽ with a good wyl, accordynge as the tyme wyl suffre: Nother shall they geue vnto the Iewes enemyes, vytayles, weapens, monye nor shippes. Thus are the Romaynes content to do, and shall fulfyl theyr charge without ony deceate.

Accordynge to the articles, the Romaynes made the bonde with the Iewes. Now after these artycles (sayde they) yf ony of the partyes wyll put to them, or take ony thynge from them, they shall do it with the cõsent of both: and what so euer they adde then vnto them or take from them, it shal stonde fast. And as touchynge the euell that Demetrius hath done vnto ẏ Iewes, we haue wrytten vnto hym, sayenge: Wherfore layest thou thy heuy yocke vpon the Iewes our frendes & louers? Yf they make ony complaynte of the agayne vnto vs, we shall defende thẽm, and fight with the by see, and by lande.

The.ix.Chapter.

¶ How Judas was slayne in the bat tayle, and how ther came vp derth after hys death. Jonathas was captayn after hym and gat the victorye of Bachides.

A 1. Mac.7.f Josephus anti.lib 12 capite .17.

IN the meane season whā Demetrius herde ỳ * Nicanor and hys hooste was slayne in the felde, he proceded farther to sende Bachides and Alchimus agayn into Jew ry, and those that were in the ryghte wynge of hys hooste wyth them. So they went forth by the way that ledeth vnto Galgala, and pytched theyr tētes before Mesaloth, which is in Arbellis and wanne the cytie, and slewe much people. In ỳ fyrst moneth of the .Clii. yeare they brought theyr hooste to Jerusalem, and rose vp and came to Berea wyth .xx.M. footemen, and .ii.M. horsmen.

Now Judas had pytched hys tēte at Laisa, wyth thre thousande chosen men. And whan they sawe the multitude of the other armye, that it was so great, they were sore afrayed, & many conueyed themselues oute of the hoost.
Insomuch ỳ ther abode nomo of them but .viii. hundreth men. Whan Judas sawe that hys hooste fayled hym, and that he must nedes fyght: it brake hys hart that he had nomo tyme to gather them together: wherfore the man was in extreme trouble. Neuerthelesse he sayde vnto them that remayned wyth hym: Up, let vs go agaynst oure ene-myes, peraduenture we shal be able to fyght wyth thē. But they wolde haue stopped hym, sayenge: We shal not be able, therfore let vs now saue oure ly-ues, and turne agayne to oure brethrē, and than wyll we fyght agaynste thē: for we are here but fewe. And Judas B sayde: God forbydde that we shulde flye from them: wherfore yf oure tyme be come, let vs dye manfullye for oure bretheren, and let vs not stayne oure honoure. Than the hoost remoued out of the tentes, and stode agaynst them.
The horsmē were diuided in two par-tes, the slynge casters and the archers went before the hoost, and al ỳ myghty men were formest in the felde. Bachi des hymselfe was in the ryght wynge of the battayll, and the hoost drew nye in two partes, and blew the trompet-tes, they of Judas syde blew ỳ trōpet-tes also, and the earth shoke at ỳ noyse of the hoostes, and they stroke a felde from the morowe tyll nyght. And whā Judas sawe that Bachides hoost was strōgest of the ryght syde, he toke with hym all the hardy men, and brake the ryght wynge of theyr ordre, & folowed vpon them vnto the mount Azot.

Now whan thy which were of the lefte wynge, sawe that the ryght syde was discomfyted, they persecuted Judas and them that were with hym.
Then was there a sore battayll, for ma ny were slayne and wounded of bothe partes: Judas also hymselfe was kyl-led, and the remnaunt fled. So Jona-thas and Simon toke Judas theyr brother and buryed hym in theyr fathers sepulcre in the cytie of Modin. And al ỳ people of Israel made great lamētacyon for hym, and mourned longe, say-enge: Alas, that this worthy shulde be slayne, whiche delyuered the people of Israel. As for other thynges pertaynynge to the battaylles of Judas, the noble actes that he dyd, and of his wor thynes: they are not wrytten, for they were very many.

And after the death of Judas, wyc C ked men came vp in al the coastes of Is Joseph. anti rael, and ther arose all suche as worke lib.13.[illegible] vngodlynes. In those dayes was ther a great derth in the lande, and al ỳ con tre gaue ouer them selues & theirs vnto Bachides. So Bachides chose wyc ked men, and made them lordes in the lande. Those sought out & made search for Judas frendes, and brought them vnto Bachides: which auēged hymself vpon them with great despyte. And ther came so great trouble in Israel, as was not sence ỳ tyme that no prophete was sene there.

Then came all Judas frendes together, and sayd vnto Jonathas: For so much as thy brother Judas is dead, ther is none lyke hym to go forth a-gaynst our enemyes, against Bachides and such as are aduersaries vnto oure people. Wherfore this daye we chose ỳ for hym, to be our prynce and captaine to ordre our battayll. And Jonathas toke the gouernaunce vpon hym at the same tyme, & ruled in steade of his brother Judas. Whan Bachides gat knowlege therof, he sought for to slaye hym: But Jonathas and Simon his brother, perceaupnege that, fled in to ỳ wyldernesse of Thecua with all theyr company and pitched theyr tentes by ÿ water pole of Asphar.

Whiche whan Bachides vnder stode, he came ouer Jordane with all his hoost vpon the Sabbath daye.

Now had Jonathas sent his brother D Jhon (a captayne of the people) to pray his frendes the Nabuthites, that they wold lende them theyr ordynaunce, for they had much. So the chyldren of Jã bri came out of Madaba, & toke Jhon and all that he had, & wente theyr way with all. Then came worde vnto Jonathas, and Simon his brother, that the chyldren of Jambry made a greate mariage, and brought the bryde from Madaba, wt great pompe: for she was doughter to one of the noblest prynces of Canaan. Wherfore they remẽbred the bloude of Jhon theyr brother, and wente vp, and hyd them selues vnder the shadowe of the mountayne.

So they lyfte vp theyr eyes, and loked: and beholde, ther was much ado, and great repayre: for the brydegrome came forth, and his frẽdes, and his brethren met them with tympanys, instrumentes of musyck, and many weapens Then Jonathas and they that were wt hym, rose out of theyr skoulkynge places agaynste them, and slewe many of them. As for the remnaunt, they fled in to the mountaynes, and they toke all theyr substaunce. Thus the mariage was turned to mournynge, & the noyse of theyr melody in to lamẽtacyon. And so whan they had auenged the bloude of theyr brother, they turned agayn vnto Jordane.

Bachides hearynge this, came vnto the verye border of Jordane with a great power vpon the Sabbath daye. And Jonathas said vnto his company let vs get vp, and fyght agaynst our e-E nemyes: for it stondeth not with vs to daye, as in tymes past: Behold our enemyes are in our way, the water of Jordane vpon the one syde of vs, with bãkes, fẽnes & woodes of the other syde, so ÿ ther is no place for vs to departe 2 Pa.20.a vnto. *Wherfore crye now vnto hea-
1 Mac.4.b uen, that ye may be delyuered from the power of your enemyes. So they stroke the battayl. And Jonathas stretched out hys hande to smyte Bachides but he fled backwarde. Then Jonathas and they ÿ were with hym leapte in to Jordane, and swymmed ouer Jordane vnto hym, and ther were slayne of Bachides syde ÿ day a thousãd mẽ.

Therfore Bachides with his hoost turned agayne to Jerusalem, & buylte vp the castels, and stronge holdes that were in Jewry, Jericho, Emaus, Bethoron, Bethel, Thannata, Phara, & Thopo, with hyghe walles, with portes, and with lockes: & set men to kepe them, that they myght vse theyr malyce vpon Israel. He walled vp Bethsura, Gazara and the castel at Jerusalẽ also, and prouyded them with men, and vytayles: He toke also the chefest mens sonnes in the contre for pledges, & put thẽ in ÿ castel at Jerusalem to be kept.

After warde in the C liii. yeare in the seconde moneth, Alcimus commaũded, ÿ the walles of the ynmoost Sãctuary shulde be destroyed, and the buyldinges of the prophetes also. And F when he beganne to destroye them, the thynges that he went aboute were hyndered: for he was smytten with a palsy and his mouth was shut, so ÿ he could nomore speake nor commaunde ony of his house concernynge his busynesse. Thus dyed Alcimus in great myserye at the same tyme. And whan Bachides sawe that Alcymus was dead, he turned agayne to the kynge, and so ÿ lãde was in rest two yeares. Then all ÿ vngodly men helde a counsel, sayenge: Beholde, Jonathas and his company are at ease, and dwell without care. Wherfore let vs bryng Bachides hyther, and he shall take them all in one nyght.

So they wente and gaue Bachides this counsell, which arose to come with a great hoost, and sent letters priuely to his adherentes whiche were in Jewry, to take Jonathas and those ÿ were with him: but they might not, for the other had gotten knowlege of their deuyce. And Jonathas toke fyftye mẽ of the contry (whiche were the ryngleders of them) and slew them. Then Jonathas and Simeon with theyr company departed vnto the cytie Bethbessen, which lyeth in the wyldernesse, and repayred the decaye therof, and made it stronge. When Bachides knewe this, he gathered all his hoost, & sent worde to them that were of Jewrye. Then came he and layed sege to Bethbessen, and fought agaynst it a longe season, and made instrumẽtes of warre. Now Jonathas lefte his brother Simon in the cytie, and wente forth hym selfe in G the contre, and came with a certayne nombre, and slewe Odares, and his brethren, & ỳ chyldrē of Phaseron in theyr tentes: so that he beganne to be strōge, and to increase in power.

As for Simon and his company, they wente out of the cytie, and brente vp the instrumētes of warre, & fought agaynst Bachides, & discomfyted him. And Bachides was sore vexed, because his counsell & trauayle was in vayne. Wherfore he was wroth at the wycked men (that gaue hym coūsel to come in to theyr lāde) and slew many of thē. Then purposed he with his company to go away in to his owne cōtre: wherof when Jonathas had knowlege, he sente embassadours vnto hym for to make peace with hym, and ỳ he shulde delyuer hym his presoners agayne. To the which Bachides consented gladly, and dyd accordynge his desyre: yee and made an oth, that he shulde neuer do hym harme all the dayes of his lyfe. So he restored vnto hym all the presoners that he had taken out of ỳ lande of Juda, and thē turned and went his waye in to his owne lande, nother proceded he ony further to come vnto the borders of Juda. Thus Israel hadde nomore warre. And Jonathas dwelte at Machmas, and beganne there to go uerne the people, and destroyed the vngodly men out of Israel.

The.x.Chapter.

¶ Of Alexander the sonne of Antiochus. Demetrius maketh peace with Jonathas, and so doth Alexander afterwarde. Ptolome geueth his doughter Cleopatra vnto Alexander. Demetrius desyreth Jonathas.

A Josephus Ca, 2. 3. libro.13.

In the hundreth .lx. yeare came Alexander the sonne of noble Antiochus, & toke Ptolomays, whose cytesyns receaued hym, & there he raygned. When Demetrius herde therof, he gathered an exceadyng great hoost, and wente forth agaynst hym to fyght. Wherfore Demetrius sent letters vnto Jonathas with louyng wordes, and praysed hym greatly. For he sayd: we wyll fyrst make peace wᵗ hym, before he bynde hymselfe with Alexander agaynst vs: els he shall remembre ỳ euell that we haue done agaynst hym, his brother & his people. And so he gaue Jonathas leaue to gather an hoost, to make weapens, and to be confederate with hym, and commaunded the pledges, that were in the castell, to be delyuered vnto him.

Then came Jonathas to Jerusalem, and red the letters in the audience of all the people, and of them that were in the castell. And therfore were they sore afrayed, because they herde, that ỳ kynge had geuē hym lycence to gather an hoost. Thus were the pledges delyuered vnto Jonathas whiche restored them to theyr elders. Jonathas also dwelt at Jerusalem, & began to buylde vp, and to repayre the cytie: commaundynge the workmen, to wall it, and the B mount Syon rounde aboute with fre stone, to be a stronge holde, and so they dyd. As for the Heythen that were in the castels which Bachides had made vp, they fled, so that euery man left the place and wente in to his owne contry. Onely at Bethsura remayned certain of the Jewes, which had forsaken the lawe, and commaundementes of God, for Bethsura was theyr refuge.

Now whan kynge Alexander herd of the promyses that Demetrius had made vnto Jonathas, and whā it was tolde hym of the battayls, and noble actes, which he and his brethrē haddone, and of ỳ great trauayles that they had taken, he sayd: Where shal we fynde such a man? Well, we wyll make hym our frende, and be confederate wᵗ hym. Upon this he wrote a letter vnto him, with these wordes: Kynge Alexander saluteth his brother Jonathas. We haue herde of the, that thou art a valeaunt man, and mete to be oure frende, wherfore this daye we ordeyne the to be the hygh prest of thy people, and to be called the kynges frende. (Upō this he sente hym a purple clothynge and a crowne of golde) that thou mayest consyder what is for our profyte, and kepe frendshippe towarde vs.

So in the .vii. moneth of the .C.lx. C yeare vpon the solempne feast daye of tabernacles, Jonathas put the holy rayment vpon hym. Then gathered he an hoost, and made many weapens. Which whē Demetrius herde, he was maruaylous sory, and said: Alas, what haue we done, that Alexander hath preuented vs in gettynge the frendshippe of the Jewes, for his owne defence? Yet wyll I wryte louyngly vnto them also: yee and promyse them dignities & rewardes, that they may be of my syde Wherupon he wrote vnto them these wordes: Kynge Demetrius sendeth gretynge vnto the people of the Jewes. Where as ye haue kepte youre couenaunte towarde vs, and continued in oure frendeshyppe, not enclynynge to oure enemyes, we were glad, whan we herde therof. Wherfore remayne styll and be faythful to vs: and we shal well recompense you for the thynges that ye haue don on our party: we shal release you of many charges, and geue you rewardes.

And nowe I dyscharge you, and al the Jewes from tributes, I forgeue you the costumes of salte, and release you of the crowne taxes, of the thyrde parte of sede, and halfe of the frute of trees, which is myne own dewty. The fee I leaue for you, frō thys day forth, so that they shall not be taken of the londe of Juda nor of the thre cytyes, which are added therunto out of Samaria and Galile, from this day forth for euermore. Jerusalem also wyth all thynges belongynge therto, shall be holy and fre, yee the tythes, and trybutes

D shal pertayn vnto it. As for the power of the castell which is at Jerusalem, I exempte and geue it vnto the hyghe preste, that he maye set in it such men, as he shall chose to kepe it. I frelye delyuer all the Jewes that are presoners thorowe oute all my realme: so that euerye one of thē shal be fre frō payeng ony trybute, yee euen of theyr cattell.

All the solempne feastes, Sabbathes, Newmones, the dayes appoynted, the thre dayes before and after the feaste shall be fre for all the Jewes in my realme: so that in them no mā shall haue power to do onye thynge, or to moue onye busynesse agaynste onye of them in onye maner of cause. Ther shall. xxx. thousande also of the Jewes be wrytten vp in the kinges hoost, and haue theyre wages payed, as all other men of warre of the kynges shulde haue: and of them shall be ordened certayne, to kepe the kynges stronge holdes: yee and some of them shall be set ouer the kynges busynesse, that they maye faythfully deale wyth the same. The Jewes also shall haue prynces of theyr owne, and walke in theyr owne lawes, as the kynge hath commaunded in the londe of Juda.

And the thre cytyes that are fallen vnto Jewrye from the countre of Samaria and Galile, shall be taken as Jewrye, and be vnder one: nother be subiecte to onye straunge lorde, but to the hyghe preste. As for Ptolomays and the londe pertaynynge therto. I geue it vnto the Sanctuarye at Jerusalem, for the necessarye expences of the holye thynges. Moreouer, I wyl geue euerye yeare. xv. thousande Sycles of syluer out of ŷ kynges checker (which pertayneth vnto me) to the worke of the temple: yee and loke what remayneth (which they that hadde oure matters in hande in tymes paste, haue not payed) that same shall they geue vnto them also. And besyde all thys, the. v. thousande sycles which they toke yearlye of the rentes of the Sanctuary shal belonge vnto the prestes that do seruyce. E

Item, who so euer they be that flye vnto the temple at Jerusalem, or wythyn the lybertyes therof, where as they are fallen in to the kynges daunger for onye maner of busynesse, they shall be pardoned, & al the goodes that they haue in my realme, shall be fre. For the buyldynge also and repayrynge of the worke of ŷ Sanctuary, expences shall be geuen oute of the kynges checker: Yee and for the makynge of the walles rounde aboute Jerusalem, for the breakynge downe of the olde, and for the settynge vp of the stronge holdes in Jewrye, shal the costes and charges be geuen oute of the kynges checker.

¶ But whan Jonathas, and the people herde these wordes, they gaue no credence vnto them, nother receaued them: for they remēbred the greate wyckednesse that he hadde done vnto Israell, and howe sore he hadde vexed them. Wherfore they agreed vnto Alexander, for he was a prynce that had dealte frendelye wyth them, and so they stode by hym alway. Then gathered kynge Alexander a greate hooste, and broughte hys armye agaynst Demetrius. So the two kynges stroke battayl together, but Demetrius hooste fled and Alexander folowed after, and fell vpon them. A myghtye sore felde was it, continuynge tyll the Sonne wente downe, and Demetrius was slayne the same daye. 1. mac. 7. b Josephus cap. 5. li. 13

F And Alexander sent embassadours vnto Ptolome the kynge of Egypte wyth these wordes, sayenge : For so muche as I am come agayne to my realme, and am set in the trone of my progenitour, and haue gotten the dominion, ouercome Demetrius, conque red the londe, and stryken a felde wyth hym, so that we haue discoinfited both hym and hys hooste, and sytte in the trone of hys kyngdome. Let vs nowe make frendeshyppe together, geue me thy doughter to wyfe: so shall I be thy sonne in lawe, and both geue the rewardes, and her greate dignyte. Pto-lome the kynge gaue answere, sayeng: Happye be the daye wherein thou arte come agayne to the londe of thy proge nitours, and set in the trone of theyre kyngdome. And nowe wyll I fulfyll thy wrytynge : but mete me at Ptolomays, that we maye se one another, and that I maye marye my doughter vnto the accordynge to thy desyre. So Ptolome wente oute of Egypte wyth hys doughter Cleopatra, and came vn to Ptolomays in the hundrethe and lxii. yeare : where kynge Alexander met hym, & gaue Alexander his dough ter Cleopatra, and maryed thē at Ptolomais wyth great worshyppe, lyke as the maner of kynges is to be.

Then wrote kynge Alexander vnto Jonathas, that he shulde come, and mete hym. So he wente honora-G bly vnto Ptolomays, and there he met two kynges, and gaue them greate pre sentes of golde and syluer, and founde fauoure in theyr syght. And ther came together agaīst Jonathas certayn wyc ked men and vngracious personnes of Israell, makynge complayntes of hym, but the kyng regarded them not.
As for Jonathas, the kynge commaun ded to take of hys garmentes, and to clothe hym in purple: and so they dyd.
Then the kynge appoynted hym to syt by hym, and sayde vnto hys prynces: Go wyth hym in to the myddest of the cytye, and make a proclamacyon, that no man complayne agaynste hym of onye matter, and that no man trouble hym, for onye maner of cause.

So it happened that whan hys accusers sawe the worshyppe, whiche was proclamed of hym, and that he was clothed in purple, they fled euerychone. And the kynge made muche of hym, wrote hym amonge hys chefe frendes, made hym a duke, and parta-ker of hys domynyon. Thus Jona-thas wente agayn to Jerusalem, with Josephus peace, and gladnesse. In the hundreth Ca.6.li.13 and .lxv. yeare came Demetrius the Antiq. sonne of Demetrius from Creta in to hys fathers londe: whereof whan Alex ander herde tell, he was ryghte sorye, & returned vnto Antioche. And Deme trius chose * Appollonius (which had 1.Ma.1.4. the gouernaunce of Celosyria) to be hys captayne.

So he gathered a greate hooste, and came vnto Jamnia, and sent word vnto Jonathas the hyghe preste, say-enge: Darreste thou wythstond vs thy selfe alone? As for me I am but laughed to scorne and shamed, because thou prouest thy strengthe agaynste H vs in the mountaynes. Now therfore yf thou trustest in thyne own strength come downe to vs in to the playne feld, and there let vs proue our strēgth together : thou shalte fynde, that I haue valeaunt men of warre with me, and shalte knowe who I am, and the other that stonde by me : whiche saye, that youre foote is not able to stonde before oure face, for thy fathers haue bene twyse chased in to theyre owne londe. And now, how wylte thou be able to abyde so greate an hoost of horsmen, and foote men in the felde, where as is nother rocke, stone, nor place to flye vnto.

Whan Jonathas herde the wor-des of Appollonius, he was moued in hys minde: wherfore he chose ten thou sande men and wente oute of Jerusalem, and Symon hys brother met him for to helpe hym : And they pytched theyre tentes at Joppa, but the cytye kepte hym forthe : for Joppa was an holde of Appollonius. Then Jona-thas layed sege to it, & they that were in the cytye, for verye feare let hym in: and so Jonathas wanne Joppa. Ap-pollonius hearynge of thys, toke thre thousande horsmen, wyth a greate hooste of foote men, and wente as thoughe he wolde go to Azotus, and came immediatlye in to the plaine feld because he hadde so manye horsemen, and putte hys truste in them. So Jonathas folowed vpon hym to Azotus, and there they stroke the battayll.
Nowe hadde Appollonius left a thou sande horsmen behynde them pryuelye in the tentes.

And whan Jonathas knewe that suche wayte was layed behynde them, they wente rounde aboute the enemy-es hooste, and shotte dartes at the people from the mornynge to the euening.
As for Jonathas people, they kepte theyre ordre as he hadde commaunded them, and the enemyes horses were e-uer labourynge.

I Then broughte Symon forthe hys hooste, and sette them agaynst the foote men. For the horsmen were wee-rye alreadye. So he dyscomfyted them, and they fled And they that were scattered in the felde, gat them to Azo-tus, and came in to the temple of Dagon theyr Idoll, that they myght there saue theyr lyues. But Jonathas sette fyre vpon Azotus, and all the cytyes rounde aboute it, and toke theyre goo-2.Ma.11.8 des, * and brente vp the temple of Dagon wyth all them that were fled in to it.

Thus were slayne and brente wel nye.viii. thousande men. So Jona-thas remoued the hooste from thence, and brougthe them to Ascalon: where the men of the cytye came forthe, and met him wyth great worshyppe. After thys wente Jonathas and hys hooste agayne to Jerusalem, wyth great substaunce of good. And whan kynge Alexāder herd these thynges, he thought to do Jonathas more worshyppe, and sente hym a collar of golde, as the vse is to be geuen vnto suche as are of the kynges nexte bloude. He gaue hym also the cytye of Accaron (wyth the lon-des belongynge therto) in possessyon.

The.xi. Chapter.

Ptolome ryseth agaynste Alexender and Jonathas, and promyseth to geue Demetrius hys doughter, whome he hadde geuen alreadye vnto Alexander.
The deathe of Alexander and Ptolo-me, the raygne of Demetrius. Demetrius and Jonathas are frendes. Alexanders sonne taketh the kyngdome vp pon hym.

A AND the kynge of Egypte Josephus gathered an hooste, (lyke capit.7 the sonde that lyeth vppon libro.13. the see shore) and manye shyppes: and wente about thorowe deceate to optayne the kyngdome of Alexander, and to ioyne it vnto hys owne realme. Upon thys he to-ke hys iourneye in to Syrya, and was letten in to the cytyes, and men came forthe to mete hym: for kynge Alexander hadde commaunded them so to do, because he was hys father in lawe.
Nowe whan Ptolome dyd entre in to onye cytye, he lefte men of warre to ke pe it, and thys he dydde thorowe oute all the cytyes. And whan he came to Azotus, * they shewed him ẏ temple of 2.Ma.10.f Dagō & Azotus ẏ was brent vp, & the other thynges whiche were destroyed, the dead bodyes caste abrode, and the graues that they hadde made by the waye syde, for suche as were slayne in the felde: And tolde the kynge that Jo nathas hadde done all these thynges, to the intente they myghte get hym euell wyll. But the kynge sayde not a worde therto.

And Jonathas met the kynge wyth greate honoure at Joppa, where they saluted one another, & toke theyre reste. So whan Jonathas hadde gone wyth the kynge, vnto the water that was called Eleutherus, he turned agayne to Jerusalem. Now Pto-lome hadde gotten the domynyon of the cytyes vnto Seleucia vpon the see coaste, ymagynynge wycked counsels agaynste Alexander, and sente embassadours vnto Demetrius, sayenge: Come let vs make a bonde betwixte vs, so shall I geue the my doughter B that Alexander hathe, and thou shalte raygne in thy fathers kyngdome. I repent that I gaue Alexander my dough ter, for he goeth aboute to slaye me.
And thus he sklaundred Alexander, because he wolde haue hadde hys realme.

Thus he toke hys doughter from hym, & gaue her vnto Demetrius, and forsoke Alexander, so that hys malyce was openlye knowen. And Ptolome came to Antioche, where he set two crownes vpon hys owne heade: the crowne of Egypte and of Asia. In the meane season was kynge Alexander in Cilicia: for they that dwelte in those places, hadde rebelled agaynste hym.
But whan Alexander herd of thys, he came to warre agaynst him So kinge Ptolome broughte forthe hys hooste, and met hym wyth a myghtye power, an chased hym awaye. Then fled Alexander in to Araby, there to be defēded, ẏ kynge Ptolomes honour increased,

And zabdiell the Arabyan smote of Alexanders heade, and sente it vnto Ptolome. But the thyrde daye after, dyed kynge Ptolome hymselfe: and they whom he hadde set in the stronge holdes, were slayne of those that were wythin the cytyes. And Demetrius raygned in the hundrethe and seuen and syxtye yeare.

C At the same tyme gathered Jonathas them that were in Jewrye to laye sege vnto the castell whiche was at Jerusalem, and so they made manye instrumentes of warre agaynst it. Then wente ther certayne vngodlye personnes (which hated theyre owne people) vnto kynge Demetrius, and tolde hym, that Jonathas beseged the castell. So whan he herde it, he was angrye, and immediatlye came to Ptolomais, and wrote vnto Jonathas, that he shulde not laye sege to the castel, but come and speake wyth hym in all the hayste. Neuerthelesse whan Jonathas herde thys, he commaunded to besege it. He chose also certayne of the elders, and prestes of Israell, and put hymselfe in the parell, and toke wyth hym golde, syluer, clothynge, and dyuerse presentes: and wente to Ptolomais vnto the kynge, and founde hym gracyous.

And though certayne vngodlye men of hys owne people made complayntes vpon hym, yet the kynge intreated hym, * lyke as hys predecessours hadde done before: and promoted hym in the syghte of all hys frendes, confyrmed hym in the hyghe presthode wyth all the worshyppe that he hadde afore, and made hym hys chefe frende. Jonathas also desyred the kynge that he wolde make Jewry fre, * wyth the thre head cytyes of Samaria, and the londes partaynynge therto: vpon thys dyd Jonathas promyse hym thre hundrethe talentes. Where vnto the kynge consented, and gaue Jonathas wrytynge of the same conteynynge these wordes:

1.Ma. 10.b

1.Ma. 10.c and.11.d

D Kyng Demetrius sendeth gretynge vnto hys brother Jonathas and to the people of the Jewes. We sende you here a coppye of the lettre which we dydde wryte vnto oure elder Lasthenus, concernynge you, that ye shulde knowe it.

Kynge Demetrius sendeth gretynge vnto Lasthenus hys elder. For the faithfulnesse that oure frendes the people of the Jewes kepe vnto vs, and for the louynge kyndnesse, which they beare towarde vs: we are determyned to do them good. Wherfore we ordene all the coastes of Jewrye wyth the thre cytyes, Lyda, and Ramatha, (whiche are added vnto Jewrye from Samaria,) and all the londes pertaynynge there vnto, to be frely separated, for suche as do sacryfyce in Jerusalem: both concernynge the paymentes, which the kynge toke yearly afore tyme, and the frutes also of the earthe and trees.

As for other tythes and trybutes that belonge vnto vs, we dyscharge them thereof from thys tyme forthe. In lyke maner we graunte vnto them all the costumes of salte and crowne taxes, whiche were broughte vnto vs. And thys fredome shall they haue fyrme and stedfaste, from thys tyme forth for euermor. Therfore se that ye make a coppye of these oure letters, and delyuer it vnto Jonathas: that it maye be kepte vpon the holye mounte in a conueniente place.

After thys, whan Demetrius the kynge sawe that thys londe was in reste, and that no resystaunce was made hym: he sente awaye all hys hooste euerye man to hys owne place, excepte an armye of straungers, whome he broughte from the Iles of the Heythen, wherfore all hys fathers hoostes hadde euell wyll at hym. * Now was ther one Tryphon (that had bene of Alexanders parte afore) whiche whan he sawe that all the hooste murmured agaynste Demetrius: he wente to Emalcuell the Arabyan (that broughte vp Antiochus the sonne of Alexander) and laye sore vppon hym, to delyuer hym thys yonge Antiochus: that he myghte raygne in hys fathers steade. He tolde hym also what greate euell Demetrius had done, and how his men of warre loued hym not: and so remayned there a longe season.

And Jonathas sente vnto kynge Demetrius, to driue them oute which were in the castell at Jerusalem and in the other refugies, for they dyd Israel great harm. So Demetrius sent word vnto Jonathas, sayenge: I wyll not onely do these thynges for the, and thy people, But at tyme conueniente, I will do both the, and thy peo ple greate worshyppe. But nowe thou shalte do me a pleasure, yf thou wylte sende me men to helpe me: for all myne armye is gone fro me. So Jonathas F sente hym. iii. thousande stronge men vnto Antioche, and they came vnto the kynge: wherfore the kynge was verye gladde at theyr commynge. But they that were of the cytye (euen an hun-dreth and twentye thousande men) ga thered them together, and wolde haue slayne the kynge, whiche fled in to his courte: and the cytesyns kepte the stre-tes of the cytye, and beganne to fyght.

Then the kynge called for the Jewes helpe, whiche came vnto hym altogether, and wente abrode thorowe the cytye, and slewe the same daye an hundrethe thousande men: set fyre vppon the cytye, gat manye spoyles in that daye, and delyuered the kynge.
So whan the cytesyns sawe that the Jewes hadde gotten theyre wyl of the cytye, and they themselues dyspoynted of theyr purpose: they made theyr supplicacyon vnto the kynge, sayenge: Graunte vs peace, and let the Jewes ceasse from troublynge vs, and the cytye, and vpon this they cast away theyr weapēs. Thus they made peace, and the Jewes gat great worshyppe in the syghte of the kynge, and in the syghte of al that were in hys realm, and were spoken of thorowe oute the kyngdom: and so they came agayne to Jerusalem wyth greate goodes.

G So the kynge Demetrius sat in the trone of hys kyngdome, and hadde peace in hys londe. Neuerthelesse he dyssembled in all that euer he spake, and wythdrewe hymselfe from Jona-thas, nother rewarded hym accordyng to the benefytes, whiche he had done for hym, but troubled hym verye sore.
After thys came Triphon agayn with yonge Antiochus, whiche raygned and was crowned kynge. Then ther gathered vnto hym all the men of warre, whome Demetrius hadde put awaye: these foughte agaynste Demetrius, whiche fled and turned hys backe. So Tryphon toke the Elephantes, and wanne Antioche. And yonge Antiochus wrote vnto Jonathas, sayenge: I confirme the in thy presthode, and make the ruler of. iiii. contryes, that thou mayeste be the kinges frende.

Upon thys he sente hym golden vessel to be serued in, and gaue hym leue to drynke in golde, to be clothed in purple, and to weare a colour of golde: he made hys brother Symon also captayne, from the coastes of Tyrus vnto the borders of Egypte. Then Jona-thas toke hys iourneye, and wente tho rowe the cytyes beyonde the water (of Jordane) and all the men of warre of Syrya gathered them vnto hym for to helpe hym. So he came vnto Ascalon, and they of the cytye receaued hym ho-norablye: and from thence wente he vn to Gaza, but they wolde not let hym in: wherfore he layed sege vnto it, burnynge vp and spoylyng the places that were aboute the cytye.

And the cytesyns of Gaza submit ted them selues vnto Jonathas, which H made peace wyth them, but toke of theyr sonnes to pledge, sente them to Jerusalem, and wente thorowe the contry vnto Damascus. Nowe whan Jonathas herde that Demetrius prin ces were come in to Cades whiche is in Galile: wyth a greate hooste, purpo synge to putte Demetrius oute from meddelynge in the realme: he came a-gaynste them, and lefte Symon hys brother in the londe: whiche came to Bethsura, and layed sege to it a longe season, and dyscomfyted them. So they desyred to haue peace wyth hym, whiche he graunted them, and afterward put them oute from thence, toke the cytye, and set men to kepe it. And Jonathas wyth hys hoost came to the water of Genesar, and by tymes in the mornynge gat them to the playne feld of Asor.

And beholde, the hoostes of the Hey then met them in the felde, and layed watch for them in the mountaynes: so that whan Jonathas came agaynste them, the other (whiche were layed to watch) rose oute of theyr places, and fought, & they that were of Jonathas syde, fled euery man: and ther was not one of them left, except Mathathias the sonne of Absalomus, and Judas ye son of Calphi the captayne of the hooste.
Thē Jonathas rent his clothes, layed earth vpon his heade, made his prayer and turned agayne to them in ye felde: where they foughte together, & he put them to flyght. Now whan hys owne men yt were fled, saw this, they turned again vnto him, & helped him to folow vpon all theyr enemyes vnto theyr ten-tes at Cades. So ther were slayne of the Heythen the same daye.iii. thousand men, and Jonathas turned agayn to Jerusalem.

The.xii.Chapter.

¶ The Jewes wryte vnto the Romaynes and Sparcyans to renue the olde frendeshyppe. Tryphon receaueth Jonathas wyth fayre wordes, and then causeth hym and hys to be slayne.

A JOnathas seynge that the tyme was mete for hym, chose certayn men, and sent them vnto Rome for to sta-1.Ma.8.a. blyshe and to renew * the frendshyppe wyth them. He sente lettres also vnto Sparta, and to other places in lyke maner. So they wente vnto Rome and entred in to the counsell, and sayde: Jonathas the hyghe prest, and the people of the Jewes sent vs vnto you, for to renue the old frend shyppe and bonde of loue. Upon thys ỹ Romaines gaue them fre pasportes, that men shulde lede them home in to the londe of Juda peaceablye. And thys is the copye of the lettres that Jonathas wrote vnto the Sparcians: Jonathas the hyghe preste, wyth the elders, prestes, and the other people of the Jewes, sende gretynge vnto the Sparcians theyr brethren. Ther were lettres sente longe ago vnto Onias ỹ hyghe preste, from Arius whiche than raygned amonge you, that ye are oure brethren, as the wrytyng made there-vpon specyfyeth. And Onias intreated the embassadour ỹ was sent honorbly, ꝫ receaued ỹ lettres: wherin ther was mencyon made of the bonde of loue, ꝫ B frendeshyppe. But as for vs, we nede no suche wrytynges: for why, we haue the holye bokes of scrypture in oure handes to oure comforte. Neuerthelesse we had rather sende vnto you, for the reneuyng of the brotherheade, and frendeshyppe: leste we shuld be straũge vnto you: for it is long, sence the tyme that ye sente worde vnto vs. Wherfore in the sacryfices that we offre and other ceremonyes vpon the hyghe solemne dayes and other, we alwaye remẽbre you wythout ceassyng (lyke as reason is, and as it becommeth vs to thinke vpon oure brethren) yee and are ryghte gladde of youre prosperous ho-noure.

And though we haue had greate troubles and warres, so that the kynges aboute vs haue foughten agaynst vs, yet wolde we not be greuous vnto you nor other of oure louers and fren-des in these warres. For we haue had helpe from heauen, so that we are delyuered, and oure enemyes subdued.
Wherfor we chose Numenius the son of Antiochus and Antipater the sonne of Jason, and sente them vnto the Ro-maynes, for to renue the olde bonde of frendshyppe and loue wyth them. We commaunded them also to come vnto you, to salute you, and to delyuer you oure lettres, concernynge the renouacion of oure brotherhead. And nowe ye shall do ryghte well, to geue vs an an-swere thereunto.
And thys is the copye of the wry- C tynge, whiche Areus the kyng of Sparta sente vnto Onias: Areus kynge of Sparcians sendeth gretynge vnto Onias ỹ hygh preste: It is found in wry-tynge, that the Sparcyans and Jew-es are brethren, and come of the generacyon of Abraham. And nowe for so muche as thys is come to oure knowlege, ye shall do well, to wryte vnto vs of your prosperite. As for vs, we haue wrytten oure mynde vnto you: Oure cattell and goodes are yours, ꝫ yours, ours. These thynges haue we commaunded to be shewed vnto you.
Whan Jonathas herde, that Demetrius prynces were come forthe, to fyghte agaynste hym wyth a greater hooste then afore, he wente from Jerusalem, and mette them in the londe of Hemath: for he gaue them not space to come in to his own contre. And he sent spyes vnto theyr tentes, whiche came agayne and tolde hym, that they were appoynted to come vpon hym in the nyghte season. Wherfor whan ỹ Son was gone downe, Jonathas commaũ-ded hys men to watche all the nyghte, and to be readye wyth weapens for to fyght: and set watchmen round about the hooste. But whan the aduersaryes D herde that Jonathas was ready wyth hys men to the battayll, they feared, ꝫ were afrayed in theyr hartes, and kindled fyres in theyr tentes, brake vp, and gat them awaye. Neuerthelesse Jona-thas and hys companye knewe it not tyl in the mornynge, for they sawe the fyres burnynge.
Then Jonathas folowed vppon them, but he myghte not ouertake thē, for they were gone ouer the water Eleuterus. So Jonathas departed vnto the Arabians (whiche were called Zabadei) slewe them, and toke theyr goodes. He proceded furthur also, & came vnto Damascus, and wente thorowe all that contrye. But Simon hys brother toke hys iourneye and came to Ascalon and to the nexte stronge holdes, departynge vnto Joppa, and wanne it. For he herde, that they wolde stonde of Demetrius partye: wherfor he sent men of warre in the cytye, to kepe it. After thys cam Jonathas home agayn and called the elders of the people together: & deuysed wyth them for to build vp the stronge holdes in Jewrye, and the walles of Jerusalem, to sette vp an hyghe wall betwixte the castell and the citye, for to separate it from the cytye, that it myghte be alone, and that men shulde nother bye nor sell in it.

Upon thys they came together for to buylde vp the cytye: and for muche as the wall vpon the broke of the west syde (called Caphetheta) was fallen downe, they repayred it. And Symon E set vp Adiada in Sephela, and made it stronge, settynge gates and lockes vppon it. Nowe whan * Triphon purposed to raygne in Asia, to be crowned and to slaye the kynge Antiochus: he was afrayed that Jonathas wold not suffre hym, but fyghte agaynste hym. Wherfore he wente aboute to take Jonathas, and to kyll hym.

* 1.Ma.11.e Josephus cap.19.li.13. Antiq.

So he departed, and came vnto Bethsan. Then wente Jonathas forthe agaynste hym to the battayll wyth fourtye thousande chosen men, and came vnto Bethsan also. But whan Triphon sawe that Jonathas came wyth so greate an hooste to destroye hym, he was afrayed: and therfore he receaued hym honorablye, commended hym vnto al hys frendes gaue hym rewardes, and commaunded hys men of warre to be as obedyente vnto hym as to hymselfe.

And sayde vnto Jonathas: why haste thou caused thys people to take suche trauayle, seyng ther is no warre betwixte vs? Therfore send thē home agayne, and chose certayne men to wayte vpon the, and come thou wyth me to Ptolomais for I wyll geue it the wyth the other stronge holdes, mē of warre, and theyr officers: As for me I muste departe, thys is onelye the cause of my comminge. Jonathas beleued hym, and dydde as he sayde puttynge awaye hys hooste, whiche wente in to the londe of Juda. He kepte but thre F thousande by hym whereof he sente two thousande in to Galile, and one thousande wente wyth hymselfe.

Nowe as soone as Jonathas entred in to Ptolomais, the cytesyns sperred the gates of the cytie, and toke hym, and slew al them wyth ỹ sweard that came in wyth hym. Then sent Triphon an hooste of foote men, and horsmen in to Galile and in to the greate playne felde, to destroye all Jonathas companie. But whan they knewe that Jonathas was takē, and al they slayn that waited vpon hym: they toke counsell together, and came forthe ready to the battayll. So whan they whiche followed vpon them, sawe that it was a matter of lyfe, they turned backe agayne: as for the other, they went in to ỹ lond of Juda peaceablye, and bewayled Jonathas, and thē that were wyth hym ryghte sore. And Israell made greate lamentacyon. Then all the Heythen that were rounde aboute them, soughte to destroye them. For they sayd: Now haue they no captayne, nor onye man to helpe them. Therfore let vs ouercome them, and rote oute theyr name from amonge men.

The. xiii. Chapter.

¶ After the deathe of Jonathas is Simon hys brother made captayne of the people, whiche goeth forth agaynst Triphon, and buryeth hys brother. Tryphon slayeth Antiochus haynouslye. Simon maketh peace wyth Demetrius, and layeth sege to Gaza.

Nowe whan Symon herde A that Triphon gathered a greate hoste to come in to the londe of Juda, and to destroye it: and sawe that the people was in greate fearfulnesse, and care: He came vp to Jerusalem, and gathered the people together, and gaue them exhortacyon, sayenge: Ye knowe what great battayls I and my brethren and my fathers house haue stryken for the lawe, and the Sanctuarye, and what maner of troubles we haue sene: thorowe occasyon wherof

1.Ma.6.c. Hb.d.13.c. * all my brethren are slayne for Israels sake, and I am lefte alone. And nowe let not me spare myne own lyfe in onye maner of trouble, for I am no better then my brethren: but wyll auenge my people and the Sanctuarye, our chylderen and oure wyues: for all the Heythen are gathered together, to destroye vs of verye malyce.

At these wordes the hartes of the people were kyndled togyther, so that they cryed with a loude voyce, sayeng: Thou shalte be our captayne in steade of Iudas, and Ionathas thy brethren ordre thou oure battayll, and whatsoeuer thou commaundeste vs, we shall do it.

So he gathered al the men of war makyng hayst to fynysh all the walles of Ierusalem, whiche he made stronge round about. Then sent he Ionathas the sonne of Absalomus wyth a freshe

B hooste vnto Ioppa, which droue them oute that were in the castell, and remayned there hymselfe. Triphon also remoued from Ptolomais wyth a greate armye, to come in to the londe of Iuda, and Ionathas wyth hym beynge in warde. And Simon pytched hys tentes at Addus before the playne felde.

But whan Triphon knewe that Simon stode vp in steade of hys brother Ionathas, and that he wolde war agaynste hym: he sente messaungers vnto hym, sayenge: Where as we haue kepte Ionathas thy brother, it is for money that he is owenge in the kynges accompte, concernynge the busynesse that he hadde in hande. Wherfor sende nowe an hundrethe talentes of syluer and hys two sonnes for suertyes, that whan he is letten forth he shall not forsake vs: and we shall send hym agayne. Neuerthelesse Symon knewe that he dissembled in hys wordes: yet commaunded he the moneye and chylderen to be delyuered vnto hym: leste he shulde be the greater enemy agaynst the people of Israell, and saye: Because he sente hym not the moneye, and the chylderen, therfore is Ionathas dead.

C So Simon sente hym the chylderen and an hundreth talentes, but he dyssembled, and wolde not let Ionathas go. Afterwarde came Triphon in to the londe, to destroye it, and went rounde aboute by the waye, that ledeth vnto Ador. But where so euer they wente, thyther wente Simon and hys hooste also. Nowe they that were in the castell, sente messaungers vnto Triphon that he shulde make hayste to come by the wildernesse, and to send them vytayles: And Triphon made readye all hys horsmen to come that same nyghte. Neuerthelesse it was a verye greate snowe, so that he came not in Galaaditim. And whan he drewe nye Bascama, he slewe Ionathas and hys sonnes there, and then turned for to go home in to hys owne londe.

Then sente Simon forthe to hys brothers dead coarse, and buryed it in Modin hys fathers cytye. So all Israell bewayled hym wyth greate lamentacyon, and mourned for hym verye longe. And Symon made vppon the sepulchre of hys father and his brethren a buyldynge hyghe to loke vnto of fre stone behynde and before: and set vp seuen pylers, one agaynste another (for hys father, hys mother and foure brethren) and set greate pylers rounde aboute, wyth armes vpon them for a perpetuall memorye, and carued shyppes besyde the armes: that they myght be sene of men saylyng in the see. This sepulcre which he made at Modin, stondeth yet vnto thys daye.

D Iosephus ca.10.li.13 Antiq.

* Nowe as Triphon went forth to walke wyth the yonge kynge Antiochus, he slewe hym trayterouslye, and rayned in hys steade, crowned hymselfe kynge of Asia, and dyd muche euell in the londe. Simon also buylte vp the castels in Iewrye, makynge the strong wyth towres, greate walles, portes, & lockes, and layed vp vytayles in the stronge holdes. And Simon chose certayne men, and sente them to kynge Demetrius: to desyre hym, that he wolde discharge the londe from al bondage, for Triphon had spoyled it very sore. Where vpon Demetrius ye kyng answered hym, and wrote vnto hym after thys maner

Demetrius the kynge sendeth gretynge vnto Simon the hyghe prest hys frende, wyth the elders and people of the Iewes. The golden crowne, and precyous stone that ye sente vnto vs, haue we receaued: and are ready to make a stedfaste peace wyth you, yea and to wryte vnto oure offycers, for to release you, cocernyng the thyn-

ges wherein we made you fre: and the appoyntment that we make with you shall be fyrme and stable. The stronge holdes which ye haue buylded, shall be youre owne. As for ony ouersyght or faute committed vnto thys daye, we forgeue it, and the crowne taxe that ye ought vs also. And where as was ony other trybut in Ierusalem, it shal now be no tribute: and loke who are mete amonge you to be in oure courte, let the be written vp that ther maye be peace betwixte vs.

Thus ÿ yock of the Heithen was E taken from Israel, in the hundreth and seuentie yeare. And the people of the Iewes begāne to write in their lettres Luk. 14 d and actes on thys maner: ✱ In ÿ first yeare of Symō the hye prest and prince of the Iewes.

In those dayes wente Symon vnto Gaza, and beseged it rounde aboute, where he set vp ordynaunce of warre. And wanne a towre, which he toke. So they that gat in to the towre leapt in to the cytie, which was in a greate feare. In so much that the people of ÿ cytie rente their clothes, and clymmed vp vpon the walles with their wyues and chyldren, besekynge Symon to be at one with them, sayenge:

O rewarde vs not after oure wickednes, but be gracious vnto vs, & we shall do thy seruice. Then Symon for F very pytie, wolde fight nomore agaynst them, but put them out of the cytie, & caused the houses (wherein the ymages were) to be clensed: and so entred the cytie with Psalmes of prayse, geuyng thankes vnto the LORDE. So when he had cast all abhominacions out of the cytie he set such men in it as kepte the lawe of God, and made the cytie stronge, and buylded a dwellyng place for hymself.

Now when they in the castel at Ierusalem were kepte so straitely, ÿ they coulde not come forth nor in to the cōtrye, and myghte nother bye nor sell: they were verye hungrye, and many of them famyshed to death: In so much that they besought Symon to be at one with them, which he graunted them. So he put them out frō thēce and clensed the castel from fylthynesse. And vpon the .xxiii. daye of the second moneth in the Clxxi. yeare they entred in to it with thankesgeuynge and braunches of palme trees with harpes, crowdes, cymbals, and lutes, syngyng psalmes & songes of prayse vnto God that the great enemy of Israel was ouercome.

And Symon ordened that the same daye shuld be kept euery yeare in gladnesse and made stronge the hyl of ÿ temple, that was besyde the castell, where he dwelt hymself with hys company. Symon also perceauynge that John hys sōne was a myghtye man of armes, made hym captayne of all ÿ hoostes, & caused hym to dwell at Gaza.

Demetrius seketh helpe agaynst Tryphon. Demetrius is taken. Peace in Iewry Symon ruleth well. The Romaynes and they of Sparta renewe ÿ peace with Symon.

In the Clxxii. yeare gathe- A red kynge Demetrius hys hoost, & departed vnto Media, to get hym helpe for to fyght agaynst Tryphon. Now whē Arsaces ÿ kynge of Persia & Media herde, that Demetrius was ētred within hys borders, he sente one of hys prynces to take hym alyue and to brynge hym vnto hym. So he went and slewe Demetrius hoost, toke hym self, brought hym to Arsaces. which kepte hym in warde. And all the londe of Juda was in rest, so longe as Symon lyued: for he sought the wealth of hys people, therfore were they glad to haue hym for their rular, and to do hym worshippe alwaye.

Symon wanne the cytie of Joppa also for an hauen towne, and made it an intraunce in to the Iles of the see. He enlarged ÿ borders of his people, and conquered them more londe: He gathered vp many of their people ÿ were presoners: he had the dominion of Gaza, Bethsura and ÿ castell, which he clensed frō fylthynes, & there was no man that resisted hym: So that euery man tylled hys grounde in peace, ÿ londe of Juda & the trees gaue their frute and encreace. The elders sat all B in iudgement. and toke their deuyce for the wealth of the londe: the yonge men put on worshippe and harnesse vpon them. He prouyded vytayles for the cyties, and made goodlye stronge holdes of them: so that the fame of his worshippe was spoken of vnto ÿ ende

Euery man sat vnder hys vyne & fygge tryes, and ther was no man to fraye thē awaye: ther was none in the lāde to fyght agaynst them, for thē the kynges were ouercome. He helped those that were in aduersite amōge his people, he was diligent to se the lawe kepte: as for such as were vngodly and wicked, he toke them awaye. He set vp the Sanctuary, and encreased the holy vessels of the temple.

Whan the Romaynes and Sparcyans had gottē worde, that Jonathas was dead, they were ryght sory. But whan they herde that Simon his brother was made hygh prest in his steade and how he had wōne the lande agayn with the cyties in it: they wrote vnto hym in tables of laton, to renue ÿ frendshippe and bande of loue, whiche they 1.ma.8.c.d had made afore with * Judas & ‡ Jo ‡ and.12.a. nathas his brethren. Which wrytynges were red before the congregacyon at Jerusalem.

C And this is the copy of the letters, that the Sparcians sent: The Senatours, & cytesins of Sparta sende gretyng vnto Simon the great prest with the elders, prestes and the other people of the Jewes theyr brethren: Whan your embassadours that were sent vnto our people, certified vs of your worshippe, honoure & prosperous wealth, we were glad of theyr commynge, and haue written the earande whiche they spake before the councel of the people: namely, that Numenius the sonne of Antiochus, and Antipater the sonne of Jason the Jewes embassadours are come vnto vs, for to renewe the olde frendshippe ꝯ vs. Upō this the people consented, that the men shulde be honorably intreated, and that the copye of theyr earande shulde be wrytten in the specyall bokes of the people, for a perpetuall memory vnto the Sparcyans: yee and that we shulde sende a copye of the same vnto Symon the great prest.

D After this dyd Symon sende Numenius vnto Rome, & a golden shylde of a thousande pounde weyght, to confirme the frendshippe with them: which whan the Romaynes vnderstode, they sayd: what thankes shall we recōpence agayne vnto Symon and his chyldrē. For he hath stablyshed his brethrē, and ouercom the enemyes of Israel. Wherfore they graunted hym to be fre. And all this, wrote the Jewes in tables of laton, and nayled it vnto the pilers vpon the mount Sion. The copy of the wrytynge is this:

The.xvii.daye of the moneth * E- * August.
lul in the.C.lxxii.yeare in the.iii. yeare of Symon the hygh prest, in the great congregacyon of the prestes, rulers of the people, and elders of the contre at Asaramel, were these wordes openlye declared:

E For so muche as ther was muche warre in our lande, Simon the sonne of Matathias (come of the chyldren of Jareb) & his brethrē, put themselues in parel, and resisted the enemyes of theyr people: that theyr Sanctuary and law myght be mayntayned, & dyd theyr people great worshippe. Jonathas in lyke maner, after that he had gouerned his people and bene theyr hygh prest dyed, and lyeth buried besyde his elders.

After ÿ wolde theyr enemyes haue troden theyr holy thynges vnder foote, destroyed theyr lande, and vtterly wasted theyr Sanctuary. Then Simon withstode them, and fought for his people, spēt much of his owne monye, weapened the valeaunt men of his people, gaue them wages, made stronge the cyties of Juda, with Bethsura that lyeth vpō the borders of Jewry, (where the ordynaunce of theyr enemyes laye somtyme) and set Jewes there for to kepe it.

F He made fast Joppa also, whiche lyeth vpon the See, and Gaza that bordreth vpō Azotus, (where the enemyes dwelt afore) and there he set Jewes to kepe it: and what so euer was mete for the subduynge of the aduersaries, that layed he therin. Now whan the people sawe the noble actes of Symon, and what worshippe he purposed to do for them, his godly behauoure and faythfulnesse which he kept vnto thē & how he sought alwayes the wealth of his people: Because he dyd al this, therfor they chose hym to be theyr prince and hygh prest. And in his tyme they prospered well by hym, so that the Heythen were taken out of theyr londe: and they also which were in the cytie of Dauid at Jerusalem in the castell (where they wente out and defyled all thynges that were aboute the Sanctuarye, and dyd greate harme vnto clenlynes) and Simon put men of the Jewes in it, for ÿ defence of the lande and the cytie, & set vp the walles of Jerusalem.

6 And kynge Demetrius confirmed hym in his hygh presthode, made hym his frende, and dyd hym great worship For he herde that the Romaines called the Jewes theyr frendes, louers, & bre-thre: how honorably they receaued Si mons embassadours: how the Jewes and prestes consented that he shulde be theyr prynce and hyghe prest perpetually (tyll God raysed vp the true pro-phete) and that he shulde be theyr captayne, to care for the sanctuary: and to set officers vpon the workes therof, ouer the londe, ouer the weapens, ouer ouer the houses of defence, to make prouysyon for the holye thynges, and to be obeyed of euery man, and all the wrytynges of the londe to be made in his name: that he shulde be clothed in purple and golde, and that it shulde be lawfull for none of the people nor prestes to breake ony of these thynges, to withstonde his wordes, nor to call ony congregacion in the lāde without him: that he shulde be clothed in purple, and weare a colar of golde: And yf ther were ony whiche disobeyed or brake this ordynaunce, that he shulde be punyshed.

So all the people consented to a-lowe Simon, and to do accordynge to these wordes. Simon also hymselfe toke it vpon hym, and was content to be the hygh prest, the captayne & prince of the Jewes and prestes, & to gouerne them all. And they commaunded to make this wrytyng in tables of laton, and to fasten it vnto the compasse of ÿ Sanctuary in an open place: & to laye vp a copy of the same in the treasury, ÿ Simon & his posterite myght haue it.

The.xv.Chapter.

¶ Antiochus wryteth louyngly vnto the Jewes, and persecuteth Triphon.
He breaketh the bonde with ÿ Jewes.

A MOreouer kynge Antiochus ÿ sonne of Demetrius sent letters frō the Iles of the see, vnto Simon the hyghe prest and prynce of the Je-wes, and to all the people, conteynyng these wordes: Antiochus ÿ king sēdeth gretyng vnto Simō the hygh prince & to the people of ÿ Jewes. For so much as certayne wycked men haue gotten the kyngdome of our progenitours, I am purposed to chalenge the realme a-gayne, & to restore it to the olde estate.
Wherfore I haue gathered a great hoost and made shippes of warre, that I may go thorow ÿ contre, & be auenged of thē which haue destroyed our lande, and waisted many cyties in my realme.
And therfore now I make the fre also from all the tributes, wherof all kynges my progenitours haue discharged the, and from other customes (where from they haue released the) what so e-uer they be: Yee I geue the leaue to coyne money of thyn owne within thy lande. As for Jerusalem, I wyll that it be holy and fre: and all the weapens & houses of defence which thou hast buil ded and kepest in thyne handes, shalbe thyne. Where as ony thynge is or shall B be owynge vnto the kynge, I forgeue it the, frō this tyme forth for euermore And whā we haue optayned our kyng dome, we shall do the, thy people and ÿ temple great worshippe: so that youre honoure shalbe knowen thorow out ÿ whole worlde.

In the. C.lxxiiii. yeare wente Anti ochus in to his fathers lande, and all ÿ men of warre cam together vnto him so that fewe were lefte with Triphon So the kynge Antiochus folowed vppon hym. But he fled vnto Dora, whiche lyeth by the see syde, for he sawe ÿ ther was myschefe cōmynge vnto him, and that his hoost had forsaken hym.
Then came Antiochus vnto Dora & an hundreth & twentye thousande men of armes on foote, and eyghte thousande horsmen. So he compassed the cytie rounde aboute, and shippes came by the see. Thus they vexed ÿ cytie by lande and by water, in so muche ÿ they suffered no man to go in nor out.

In the meane season came * Nu- 1.mac.4.d menius (and they that had ben wt him) frō the cytie of Rome, hauynge letters writtē vnto the kynges and prouinces, wherin were conteyned these wordes: Lucius ÿ Mayre of Rome sendeth gre- C tynge vnto Ptolome the kynge. The embassadours of the Jewes our fren-des beynge sent from Simon the hygh prest and from the people of ÿ Jewes, came vnto vs, for to renewe the olde frendshippe & bonde of loue, & brought a shylde of golde weyenge a thousande pounde, which we were content to receaue of them. Wherfore we thoughte it good to wrytte vnto the kynges and prouinces, to do them no harme, nor to take parte agaynst them, theyr cyties, nor contries, nother to mayntene theyr enemyes agaynst them. Yf ther be ony wycked personnes therfore fled from theyr contre vnto you, delyuer them vnto Simon the hygh prest, that he maye punysh them accordynge to theyr owne lawe.

The same wordes wrote the Romaines also vnto Demetrius ye kinge, to Attalus, Araba, Arsaces, and to all the regions: as Sansanes, to them of Sparta, Delo, Mido, Sidon, Caria, Samos, Phamphilia, Licia, Alicarnassum, and to Rhodes: to Facelis, Coo, Sida, Arado, Gortina, Gnidum, to D Cypres and to Cyren. And of euery lettre they sent a copye to Simon the hyghe prest and to the people of the Jewes. So Antiochus the kynge brought his hoost vnto Dora the seconde tyme, to take it: where he made dyuerse ordynaunces of warre, and kepte Triphon in, that he shulde not come forth. Then Simon sent Antiochus two thousand chosen men to helpe hym with golde, syluer and other plenteous gear: Neuerthelesse he wolde not receaue them, but brake all the conuenaunt whiche he made with Simon afore, and withdrewe hymselfe from hym.

He sent Athenobius also a frende of his vnto Symon for to reason with hym, sayinge: Ye witholde fro me Joppa and Gaza (with the castell that is at Jerusalem) whiche are cyties of my realme, whose borders ye haue destroyed, and done great euel in the lande, hauynge the dominacyon in many other E places of my kyngdome. Wherfore delyuer now the cyties which ye haue taken, with the tributes of the places ye ye haue rule vpon without the borders of Jewry: Or els geue me fyue hũdreth talẽtes of syluer, yee and for the harme that ye haue done in the cyties and for the tributes of the same, other fyue hũdreth talentes. Yf no, we shall come & fyght agaynst you.

So Athenobius the kynges frẽde came to Jerusalem, and whan he sawe the great worshippe & honoure of Simon in golde, syluer, and so great plenty of ornamentes: he maruayled, & told Simon as the kynge cõmaunded hym. Then answered Symon and sayd vn-Jud 11 c.d to hym: * As for vs, we haue nother taken other mens lande, nor witholden them, but onely oure fathers heretage, which our enemies had vnrighteously in possession a certayne tyme. This heretage of oure fathers haue we chalenged in proces of tyme. And where as thou complaynest cõcernyng Joppa and Gaza, they dyd great harme to oure people and in our lande, yet wyll we geue an hundreth talentes for them.

Neuerthelesse Athenobius answered him not one worde, but turned agayn F wrothfully vnto the kynge, and tolde hym al these wordes, and the great dignite of Simon with all that he hadde sene, and the kynge was very angrye. In the meane tyme fled Triphon by shippe vnto Ortosaida. Then ye kynge made Cendebeus captayne of the see coast, and gaue hym an hoost of fote men and horsemen, cõmaundynge hym to remoue the hoost towarde Jewry, & to buylde vp the cytie of Cedron, to make vp the portes, and to warre agaynst the people of the Jewes. As for the kynge hymselfe, he folowed vpon Triphon. So Cendebeus came vnto Jamnia, and beganne to vexe the people, to treade downe Jewry, to take ye people presoners to slaye them and * to 1.Ma.16 buylde vp Cedron: where he set horsemen and other men of warre that they myght come forth and go thorowe the stretes of Jewry, lyke as the kinge had commaunded hym.

Upon this called Simon two of his eldest sõnes, Judas & Jhõ, and sayd vnto them: I and my brethrẽ and my fathers house, haue euer from our youth vp vnto this day, foughtẽ agaynst ye enemies of Israel, & god gaue vs good fortune to deliuer Israel ofty mes. And now for so muche as I am old, be ye in steade of my & my brother, to go forth & fyght for our people, & the helpe of God be with you. their enemies horsmen were very ma-was goynge aboute thorow the cities that were in the contre of Jewry, and carynge for them: he came downe to Je richo, with Matathias and Judas his sonnes, in the. C.lxxvii. yeare in the January. xi. moneth called * Sabat. Then Pto-lome the sonne of Abobus receaued thē (but with deceate) in to a strōge house of his called Doch, which he had buyl-ded, where he made them a banket.

So whan Simon and his sōnes were mery and had dronken well, Pto lome stode vp with his men (whom he had hyd there) and toke theyr weapēs, entred into the bāket house, and slewe Simon with his two sonnes, and cer-tayne of his seruauntes. Suche great vnfaythfulnesse dyd Ptolome in Isra el, and recompensed euel for good. The wrote Ptolome the same vnto kynge Antiochus, requyrynge hym ỹ he shuld sende hym an hoost to helpe hym, & so shulde he delyuer hym the lande with the cytie and tributes of the same. He D sent other men also vnto Gaza, for to take Jhon: and wrote vnto the captaynes to come to him, and he shulde geue them syluer, golde and rewardes. And to Jerusalem he sent other to take it & the Sanctuary.
Then ranne ther one before, and tolde Jhon in Gaza, that his father & his brethren were slayne, and how that Ptolome had sent to slaye hym also.
Whan Jhon herde this, he was sore abashed, and layed hādes on them that were come to destroye hym, and slewe them: for he knewe, that they wente a-boute to kyll hym.
As for other thynges concernynge Jhon: of his warres, and of his noble actes (wherin he behaued hymselfe mā fully) of the buyldyng of walles which he made, and other of his dedes: They are written in the croni-the tyme forth ỹ he was made hygh prest after his father.

the LORDE be gracyous vnto you, & thynke vpon his couenaunt that he made with Abraham, Isaac, & Jacob Deut.30.b his faythfull seruauntes: * and geue you all suche an hart, that ye may loue and serue hym, yee, and perfourme his wyll with an whole hart, and of a wyllynge mynde: He open youre hartes in his lawe, and his commaundementes, sende you peace: heare your prayers, be at one with you, and neuer forsake you in tyme of trouble. This is here oure prayer for you.

What tyme as Demetrius raygned, in ye .C.lxix. year, we Jewes wrote vnto you in ye trouble & violence that came vpon vs. In those yeares after ye Jason departed out of the holy lande and kyngdom, they brēt vp the portes and shed innocent bloude. Then made B we our prayer vnto the LORDE, & were herde: we offred, and lyghted the candels, settynge forth cakes & bread.
Leui.23.f * And now come ye vnto the feast of tabernacles in the moneth † Casleu.
† Nouember.

In the .C.lxxxviii. yeare the people that was at Jerusalem and in Jewry, the councel and Judas hymselfe, sente this wholsome salutacyon vnto Aristobolus kynge Ptolomes master, which came of the generacyon of the anoynted prestes: & to the Jewes that were in Egipte: In so much as God hath delyuered vs from great parels, we thāke him hyghly, in that we resisted so myghtye a kynge. And why? he brought men out of Persia by heapes, to fyghte agaynst vs and the holy cytie. For as he was in Persis (namely, the captayne with the great hoost) he peryshed in the temple of Naneas, beyng deceaued thorow the deuyce of Naneas prestes. For as he was purposed to haue dwelt there, Antiochus and his frendes came thyther, to receaue muche monye for a a dowry. So whan Naneas prestes had layed forth the monye, he entred & a small cōpany in to the compasse of ye temple, and so they shut the temple.
C Now whan Antiochus entred by openynge the preuy intraunce of ye temple the prestes stoned the captayne to death, hewed them in peces that were with hym, smote of theyr heades, and threwe them out. In all thynges God be praysed, which hath delivered ye wicked in to oure handes.

Where as we now are purposed to kepe the purificacyon of the temple vpon the .xxv. day of the moneth Casleu

we thought necessarye to certifye you therof: that ye also myght kepe the tabernacles feast daye, and the daye of ye fyre, which was geuen vs whan Nehemias offred, after that he had set vp ye temple and the aulter. For what tyme as oure fathers were led awaye vnto Persis, the prestes (which sought ye honour of God) toke the fyre priuely frō the aulter, and hyd it in a valley, where as was a depe drye pyt: & therin they kepte it, because the place was vnknowen to euery man. Now after many yeares whā it pleased God, that Nehemias shulde be sent from the kynge of Persia: * he sent the chylders chyldren Leui.6.a of those prestes (which had hyd ye fyre) 10.a.16.a to seke it. And as they tolde vs, they founde no fyre, but thycke water.

Then cōmaunded he them to draw it vp, and to brynge it hym, and the of- D ferynges withall. Now whan the sacrifices were layed on and ordred, the prest Nehemias cōmaunded to sprinkle them and the woode with the water. Whan this was done, & the tyme cam that the Sōne shone, which afore was hyd in the cloude: ther was a great fyre kyndled, in so much that euery mā marueyled. Now all the prestes prayed, whyle the sacrifice was a makynge. Jonathas prayed fyrste, and the other gaue answere.

And Nehemias prayer was after this maner: O LORDE God maker of al thynges, thou fearful & strōge thou ryghteous and mercyfull, thou ye arte onely a gracyous kynge, onely liberall, onely iust, Almyghtye and euerlastynge, thou that delyuerest Israel from all trouble, thou that hast chosen the fathers and halowed them: receaue the offerynge for the whole people of Israel, preserue thyne owne porcyon, & halowe it, gather those together that are scattred abrode frō vs: delyuer thē that are vnder the Heythens bondage, loke vpon them whiche are despysed & abhorred, that the Heythē may knowe and se how that thou art our God: punyshe them that oppresse vs, and proudly put vs to dishonoure. Set thy people agayne in thy holy place, * lyke as Deu.30.a Moses had spoken.
E And the prestes songe Psalmes of thankesgeuyng, so longe as ye sacrifice endured. Now whan the sacrifice was burnt, Nehemias cōmaunded the greate stones to be sprenkled wyth the [Leuit.6.b] resydue of the water. * Which whan [3.reg.18.e] it was done, ther was kindled a flame [2.Par.7.a] of thē also: but it was consumed tho-row the lyght that shyned from the altare. So whā thys matter was know-en, it was tolde the kynge of Persia that in ye place wher the prestes (which were led awaye) had hydde fyre, ther appeared water in steade of fyre, and that Nehemias and hys cōpanye had purifyed the sacrifices wythal. Than the kynge considerynge the matter diligently, made hym a temple to proue the thynge that was done. And whan he fōude it so in dede, he gaue the pres-tes many gyftes & dyuerse rewardes: yee he toke them with hys owne hāde, and gaue them. And Nehemias called the same place Nephthar, which is as much to saye as a clensynge: but many men call it Nephi.

The. ii. Chapter.

¶ What Jeremye requyred of the Jewes that were in preson, & of theyr storyes.

A IT is founde also in the wrytynges of Jeremy the prophet, that he cōmaunded them, which were caryed awaye to take fyre, [2.Mac.1.c] * as it is sayde afore: ‡ He cōmaūded [Jer.29.b] them also that they shulde not forget [Baruc 6.a] the lawe and cōmaundementes of the LORDE, and that they shulde not erre in theyr myndes whā they se images of syluer and golde wyth theyr ornamētes. These & such other thynges cōmaunded he them, and exhorted thē that they shuld not let the lawe of God go out of theyr hartes.

It is wrytten also, howe the prophet (at the commaundement of God) charged them to take the tabernacle & the arke wyth them, and he went forth [Deu.34.a] vnto the mountayne, * where Moses clymmed vp, and sawe the heretage of God. And whan Jeremye came there, he fōude an open caue, wherin he layed the tabernacle, the arke, and the altare of incense, & so stopped the hole. Ther came certayne mē together also folowenge hym to marke the place, but they B coulde not fynde it. Which whā Jeremy perceaued, he reproued thē sayeng: As for the place it shall be vnknowen, vntyll the tyme that God gather hys people together agayne, & receaue thē vnto mercye. Than shall God shewe them these thynges, and the mayestye of the LORDE shall appeare, & the cloude also * lyke as it was shewed [Exod.13.d] vnto Moses: and ‡ lyke whan Salo- [3.reg.8.b] mon desyred that the place myghte be sanctifyed, and it was shewed hym.

For he beynge a wyse man handled honorably and wysely, offerynge vnto God in the halowynge of the temple, whan it was fynyshed. * And lyke as [Leuit.9.d.] whan Moses prayed vnto ye LORD, the fyre came downe from heauen, & consumed the burntoffrynge: * Euen [2.Par.7.a] so prayed Salomon also, and the fyre came downe from heauen, and consumed the burntofferynge. And Moses sayde: Because the synofferynge was not eaten, therfore it is consumed. In lyke maner Salomon kepte the dedicacion (or halowenge) eyghte dayes.

In the annotaciōs and wrytynges C of ☞ Jeremy were these thinges put [Somerea de Nehemias.] also: and how he made a librarye, and howe he gathered oute of all contryes the bokes of the prophetes, of Dauid, the epistles of the kynges, and of the prestētes. Euen so Judas also, loke what he learned by experiēce of warre, and such thynges as had hppened vnto vs, he gathered them altogether, & so we haue them by vs. Yf ye now desyre to haue the same, sende some body to fetch them vnto you. Where as we than are aboute to celebrate the purifycacion, we haue wrytten vnto you. Therfore ye shall do well yf ye kepe the same dayes. We hope also that the God (which delyuered hys people, and gaue them al the heretage, kyngdome, presthode and Sanctuarye * that he [Deu.30.a.] promysed thē in the lawe) shall shortly haue mercye vpon vs, and gather vs together frō vnder the heauē into hys holy place: for he hath saued vs from great parels, & hath clensed the place.

As concernynge Judas Machabe D us and hys bretheren, the purifycacion of the temple, the dedicacion of the altare, yee & of the warres that concerne noble Antiochus and * Eupator hys [1.Mac.6.e] sonne, of the shynynges ye came down from heauen vpon those which manfully defended the Jewes. (For though they were but fewe, yet defended they the whole lande, droue awaye the enemyes hooste, recouered agayne the tēple that was spoken of thorowoute al the worlde, delyuered the cytie, doynge theyr best ye the lawe of the LORDE which was put downe, myght with al tranquillite be restored agayne vnto ye LORDE that was so mercyful vnto them.) As touchynge Jason also of Cyren, we haue vndertaken cōpendiously to brynge in to one boke, the thynges that were cōprehended of hym in fyue. For we consyderynge the multitude of the bokes, & how harde it shulde be for them that wolde medle with stories & actes (and that because of so dyuerse maters) haue vndertakē so to cōprehēd the storyes: that such as are disposed to reade, myght haue pleasure & pastyme therin: and that they which are diligēt in such thynges, myght ye better thynke vpon thē: yee and that who so euer red them myght haue profyte therby.

Neuerthelesse we our selues ye haue medled with this matter for the shortenynge of it, haue takē no smale labour but great diligence, watchynges & trauayle. Lyke as they that make a feast, wolde fayne do other men pleasure: Euen so we also (for many mēs sakes) are very wel content to take ye labour, where as we may shortly comprehende the thynges that other men haue truly written.

For he that buyldeth an house a new, must prouyde for many thynges to the whole buyldynge: but he ye paynteth it afterwarde, seketh but onely what is comly, mete and conuenient to garnysh it withall. Euen so do we also in lyke maner. And why? He that begynneth to wryte a storye for the fyrst, must with his vnderstandynge gather the matter together, set his wordes in ordre, & diligently seke out euery part: But he that afterward wyl shorten it, vseth fewe wordes and toucheth not ye matter at the largest. Let this be suffi- cyent for a prologe, now wyll we begynne to shewe the matter: for it is but a foolyshe thynge to make a longe prologe, and to be shorte in the story it self.

The. iii. Chapter.

¶ The Heythen kynges helde the temple at Jerusalem in honoure. The variaunce betwixte Symon and Onias. What Appollonius and Heliodorus dyd at Jerusalem. The punyshment of Heliodorus.

The. iii. Chapter.

What tyme as the holy cytie was inhabited in all peace and wealth and whan the lawes were yet very well kepte. (For so was it ordened by Onias the hygh prest and other godly men, that were enemyes to wyckednesse:) It came therto, * ye euen the kynges and prynces themselues dyd ye place great worshippe, and garnyshed the temple with greate gyftes: In so muche that Seleucus kynge of Asia of his owne rentes bare all the costes belongynge to the seruyce of the offerynges. Then * Simon of the trybe of Beniamin, a ruler of the temple, laboured to worke some myschefe in ye cytie but the hygh prest resysted hym.

Neuerthelesse when he myght not ouercome Onias, he gat hym to * Apollonius the sonne of Thersa (which then was chefe lorde in Celosyria and Phenices) and tolde hym, that the tresury in Jerusalem was full of innumerable money, and howthat the comuns goodes (which belonged not to the offerynges) were exceadynge great also: yee and how it were possible, ye al these myght come vnder the kynges power.

Now whan Appollonius had shewed the kynge of the money, as it was tolde hym, the kynge called for Heliodorus his stewarde and sent hym with a commaundement, to brynge hym the sayd money. Immediatly Heliodorus toke his iourney, but vnder a coloure, as though he wolde go thorowe Celosyria and Phenices to vyset the cities: but his purpose was to fulfyll ye kynges pleasure. So whan he came to Jerusalem, and was louyngly receaued of the hygh prest into the cytie: he tolde what was determined concernynge the money, and shewed the cause of his cōmyng: he axed also, yf it were so in dede. Then the hygh prest tolde hym, ye ther was such money layed vp for ye vpholdynge of wedowes and fatherlesse chyldren, and how that a certayne of it belonged vnto Hyrcanus Tobye a noble man: and that of all the money (which that wicked Simon hadde bewrayed) ther were foure hundreth talētes of syluer, and two hundreth of gold: yee and that it were vnpossible for those mens meanynges to be deceaued, that had layed vp theyr money in the place and temple (which is had in worshippe thorowe the whole worlde) for the mayntenaunce, and honoure of the same.

Wherunto Heliodorus answered that the kynge hadde commaunded hym in anye wyse, to brynge hym the moneye.
C So at the daye appoynted, Helio dorus entred in to the temple to ordre thys matter. But ther was no small feare thorowe oute the whole cytye.
The prestes fell downe before the aul ter in theyr vestimentes, and called vn Exo.22.b to heauen vpon hym, * which hadde made a lawe concernynge stuffe geuen to kepe, that they shulde be safelye pre serued, for suche as committe them vn to kepynge. Then who so hadde loked the hyghe preste in the face, it wolde haue greued hys harte: For hys coun tenaunce and the chaungynge of his co loure, declared the inwarde sorowe of hys mynde. The man was all in heuy nesse, and hys bodye in feare: wherby they that loked vpon hym, myght per ceaue the grefe of hys hart. The other people also came oute of theyre houses by heapes vnto the commune prayer, because the place was lyke to come in to confusyon. The women came toge ther thorowe the stretes, wyth heerye clothes aboute theyr brestes.
D The virgyns also that were kept in came to Onias, some to the walles, other some loked oute at the wyndow were they all helde vp theyre handes towarde heauen, and prayed. A myse rable thynge was it, to loke vpon the commune people, and the hyghe preste beynge in suche trouble. But they be sought Almyghty God, that the goo des which were committed vnto them myghte be kepte whole, for those that had delyuered them vnto theyr keping Neuerthelesse the thynge that Helio dorus was determined to do, that per fourmed he in the same place, he hym selfe personally beynge aboute the trea surye wyth his men of warre. But the spirite of Almyghtye God shewed him selfe openlye, so that al they which pre sumed to obeye Heliodorus, fell tho rowe the power of God in to a greate 2.Mac.10.e fearfulnesse and drede. For * ther ap and.11.b peared vnto them an horse, wyth a ter rible man syttynge vpon hym, deckte in goodlye araye, and the horse smote at Heliodorus with hys fore fete. Now he that sat vpon the horse, hadde har nesse of golde vpon hym.
Moreouer ther appeared. ii. fayre and bewtyfull yonge men in goodlye araye, whiche stode by hym, scourged hym on both the sydes, and gaue hym manye strypes wythoute ceassynge.
* Wyth that, fell Heliodorus sodenly 2.Mac.5.c vnto the grounde. So they toke hym vp (beynge cōpassed about with great darknesse) and bare hym oute vpon a E beare. Thus he that came wyth so ma nye runners and men of warre in to ye sayde treasurye, was borne out, where as no man myghte helpe hym: and so ye power of God was manyfeste and knowne. He laye styll domme also by the power of God, destitute of al hope and lyfe. And they praysed the LOR DE, that he had shewed hys power vpon hys place and temple, whiche a lytle afore was full of feare and trou ble: and that thorowe the reuelacyon of the Almyghtye LORDE, it was fylled wyth ioye and gladnesse.
Then certayne of Heliodorus fren des prayed Onias, that in all hayst he wolde call vpon God, to graunte hym hys lyfe, whiche was geuynge vp the goost. So the hyghe preste considered the matter, and leste the kynge shulde suspecte that the Jewes had done He liodorus some euel: he offred an health offerynge for hym. Nowe whan the hyghe preste had optayned hys peticy on, the same yonge men in the same clo thynge appeared, and stode besyde He liodorus, sayenge: Thanke Onias the hyghe preste, * for hys sake hathe the Act.27.c LORDE graunted the thy lyfe: ther F fore seynge that God hath scourged ye, geue hym prayse, & shew euery mā hys ke these wordes, they appeared nomor So Heliodorus offred vnto God, made greate vowes vnto hym whiche had graunted hym hys lyfe, thanked Onias, toke hys hooste and wente a gayne to the kynge. Then testifyed he vnto euerye man, of the great workes of God, that he had sene with his eyes And whan the kynge axed Heliodo rus who were mete to be sent yet once agayne to Jerusalem, he sayd: Yf thou haste onye enemye, or aduersarye vnto thy realme, sende hym thyther, & thou shalte haue hym punished yf he escape wyth hys lyfe: for in that place (no doute) ther is a speciall power & wor kynge of God. For he that dwelleth in heauen, visyteth and defendeth that place: and al that come to do it harme, he punisheth & plageth them. Thys is now the matter concernynge Heliodo ous, and the kepynge of the treasurye at Jerusalem.

The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ The wyckednesse of Symon. The faythfulnesse of Onias. Jason laboureth to be hyghe prieste. Of his wycked nesse, and howe he was dryuen awaye.
The alteracyon of the priesthode. An-dronicus destroyeth Onias, and God stryketh hym therfore.

A 2.mac.3.a. This Simon nowe * (of whome we spake afore) beynge a bewrayer of the money and hys owne naturall contrye, reported y worste of Onias: as though he hadde moued Heliodorus vnto thys, and as though he had bene a brynger vp of euell. Thus was he not ashamed to call him an enemie of the realme, that was so faithfull an ouerseyer, and defender of the cytye and of hys people: yee and so feruente in the lawe of God. But whan the malyce of Simon increased so farre, that thorow hys frendes ther were certayne manslaughters commit ted: Onias consydered the parell that myghte come thorowe thys stryfe, and howe that Appollonius (namelye the chefe lord in Celosyria and Phenices) was all set vpon tyrannye, and Symons malyce increased the same: He gat hym to the kynge, not as an accu-sar of the cytesyns, but as one that by hymself inentded the commune wealth of the whole multytude. For he sawe it was not possible to lyue in peace, no ther Symō to leaue of frō his foolysh nesse, excepte the kyng dyd loke therto.

But after the deathe of Seleucus B whan Antiochus (which is called the noble) toke the kyngdome: Jason the brother of Onias laboured to be hygh prest: For he came vnto the kynge, and promysed hym thre hundreth and. lx. ta lētes of syluer, & of y other rētes. lxxx. talētes. Besydes thys he promised him yet an hundreth & l. yf he myghte haue the scole of the chylderen, and that he myghte call them of Jerusalem Antio chians. Which whan the kynge hadde graunted, and he had gotten the supe-riorytie: he began immediatlye to draw hys kynsmen to the costumne of the Hey-then, put downe the thynges, that the Jewes had set vp of loue, by Jhon the father of Eupolemus (whiche was sente embassadoure vnto Rome, for to make the bonde of frendeshyppe and loue.) He put downe al the lawes, and liberties of the Jewes, and set vp wyc ked statutes. He durste make a fyghtynge scole vnder the castell, & set fayre yonge men to learne y maners of who res, and brodels.

Thus was nowe the begynnyng C of the Heythenyshe, and straunge conuersacyon, brought in thorowe the vn gracyous, and vnherde wyckednesse of Jason (which shulde not be called a prieste, but an vngodlye personne.) In so muche, that the priestes were nowe nomore occupyed aboute the seruyce of the aulter, but despysed the temple, regarded not the offerynges: yet gaue theyr diligence to learne to fyghte, to wrestle, to leape, to daunce, and pushynge the stone: not settinge by the ho-noure of the fathers, but lyked the glorye of the Grekes best of all: for the which they stroue perlously, and were gredye to folowe theyre statutes, yee theyr lust was in all thinges to be lyke them, which afore were theyr enemies and destroyers. Howe be it to do wyckedlye agaynste the lawe of God, shal not escape vnpunyshed: but of this we shall speake here after. D

What tyme as the * Olympia These were kepte euery fyfth yeare. des sportes were played at Tyrus (the kynge hymselfe beynge presente) thys vngracyous Jason sent wycked men, bearynge from them of Jerusalem (which now were called Antiochians) iii. hundreth drachmas of siluer for an offerynge to Hercules. These had they that caryed them desyred vnder such a fashyon, as thoughe they shulde not haue bene offered, but bestowed to other vses. Neuertheles he that sent the sent them to the intent that they shuld be offered vnto Hercules. But because of those that were presente, they were geuen as to the makynge of shyppes.
And Appollonius the sonne of Nesteus was sente in to Egypte, because of the noble men of kynge Ptolome Phy lometor. Nowe whan Antiochus perceaued y he was put oute frō medlyng in the realme, he soughte hys own pro fyte, departed from thēce, came to Jop pa, and then to Jerusalem: where he was honorablye receaued of Jason, and the cytye, & was broughte in wyth torche lyghte, and wyth greate prayse: and so he turned hys hooste vnto Phe nices.

C After thre yeare Jason sente Me-
1.Mac.4.b. nelaus the forsayde Simons brother * to beare the moneye vnto the kynge and to brynge hym answere of other necessarye matters. But he (whan he was prayled of the kynge for magnyfyenge of hys power) turned the hygh presthode vnto hymselfe, layenge vp iii.hundreth talentes of syluer for Jason. So whan he had gotten commaundementes from the kynge, he came, hauyng nothing that becommeth a prest, but bearynge the stomacke of a cruell tyraunte, and the wrath of a wylde 1.Ma.4.b brute beaste. Then Jason (* whiche hadde deceaued hys owne brother) seynge that he hymselfe was begyled also, was fayne to flye in to the londe of the Ammonites, and Menelaus gat the dominion. But as for the moneye that he hadde promysed vnto the kyng he dydde nothynge therein, whan Sostratus the ruler of the castell requyred it of hym. (For Sostratus was the mã that gathered the costumes) wherfore they were both called before the kynge. Thus was Menelaus put out of the presthode, and Lysymachus hys brother came in hys steade. Sostratus also was made lorde of the Cyprians. :

F It happened in the meane season, that the Tharsyans and Mallocyans made insurreccyon, because they were geuen for a presente vnto kynge Antiochus concubyne. Then came the kynge in all the hayste, to styll them agayne and to pacifye the matter, leauynge Andronicus there to be hys debyte, as one mete therfore. Nowe Menelaus supposynge that he hadde gotten a ryghte conueniente tyme stale certayne vessels of golde oute of the temple, and gaue them to Andronicus for a presente: and some he solde at Tyrus and in the cytyes therebye.

Which whan Onias knewe of a suerty, he reproued hym: but he kepte hym in a sentuarye besyde Daphnis, that lyeth by Antioche. Wherfore Menelaus gatte hym to Andronicus, and prayed hym that he wolde slaye Onias. So whan he came to Onias, he counseled hym craftelye to come oute of the Sanctuarye, geuynge hym hys hande wyth an ooth (how be it he suspecte hym) and then he slewe Onias, wythoute onye regarde of ryghteousnesse. For the whiche cause not onelye the Jewes, but other nacyons also toke indygnacyon, and were dyspleased for the vnryghteous death of so godlye a man.

And whan the kynge was come G agayne from Cilicia, the Jewes and certayne of the Grekes wente vnto hym, complaynynge for the vnryghteous death of Onias. Yee Antiochus hymselfe also was sorye in hys mynde for Onias, so that it pytyed hym, and he wepte, remembrynge hys sobernesse and manerlye behauioure. Wherfore he was so kyndled in hys mynde, that he commaunded Andronicus to be stripped oute of hys purple clothynge, and so to be led thorowe oute all the cytye, yee and the vngracious mã to be slayn in the same place, where he committed hys wyckednesse vpon Onias. Thus the LORDE rewarded hym hys punyshemente, as he hadde deserued. Nowe whan Lysimachus hadde done manye wicked dedes in the temple thorowe the counsell of Menelaus, and the voyce came abrode: the multytude gathered them together agaynste Lysimachus, for he hadde caried out now muche golde.

So whan the people arose & were ful of dyspleasure, Lysimachus armed thre thousande vnthriftes to defende hym: a certayne tyraunte beynge theyr captayne, which was growen both in age and wodnesse. But whan the people vnderstode the purpose of Lysimachus, some gatte stones, some good stronge klubbes, and some caste asshes vpon Lysimachus. Thus ther were manye of them wounded, some beinge slayne, and all other chaced awaye. But as for that wycked churchrobber hymselfe they kylled hym besyde the treasurye. Of these matters therfore ther was kepte a courte agaynste Menelaus.

Nowe whan the kynge came to H Tyrus, they made a complaynte vnto hym of Menelaus, concernynge thys busynesse, and the embassadours were iii. But Menelaus wente & promysed Ptolome to geue hym muche moneye yf he wolde persuade the kynge. So Ptolome wente to the kynge in to a courte (where as he was sette to coole hym.) and broughte hym oute of that mynde: In so much that he discharged Menelaus from the accusacyons, that not wythstondynge was cause of all myschefe:and those poore men (which yf they had tolde theyre cause, yet before the Scithians, they shulde haue bene iudged innocente) them he condemned to death . Thus were they soone punyshed, which folowed vpon the matter for the cytye, for the people, and for the holye vessel. Wherfor they of Tyrus toke in dignacyon, and buryed them honorablye. And so thorow the couetousnesse of them that were in power, Menelaus remayned styl in au thorytye, increasynge in malyce, to the hurte of the cytesyns.

The.v.Chapter.

¶ Wõderous thynges done at Jeru-

A AT ẏ same tyme Antiochus made hym readye to go a-gayne in to Egypte. Then were ther sene at Jerusa-which hadde raymente of golde, and speares. Ther were sene also whole hoostes of men weapened, and horses runnynge in an ordre, howe they came together, howe they helde forth theyre shyldes, howe the harnessed men drew oute theyr swerdes, and shote theyre dartes. The shyne of the golden wea-pens was sene, and of all maner of armure. Wherfore euerye man prayed, that those tokens myght turn to good sande men, and came sodenlye vpon ẏ cytye. The cytesyns ranne vnto ẏ wal les, at the laste was the cytye taken, & Menelaus fled in to the castell.

B As for Jason, he spared not hys own cytesyns in the slaughter, nother consydered he what great euel it were to dostroye the prosperyte of hys own kynsmen: but dyd as one that had gotten the victorye of hys enemyes, & not of hys frendes. For all thys gat he not the superiorytie, but at the laste recea-2.Ma 4 c. ued confusyon for hys malyce, * and fled agayne like a vagabunde in to the londe of the Ammonytes. Finally (for a reward of hys wyckednesse) he was accused before Aretha the kyng of the Arabyans: In so muche that he was fayne to flye from cytye to citye, being despysed of euerye man as a forsaker of the lawes, and an abhominable per sonne. And at the laste (as an open enemye of hys owne naturall contrye and of the cytesyns,) he was dryuen in to Egypte.

Thus he that afore put many out of theyr owne natiue londe, peryshed from home hymselfe. He wente to La-cedemon, thynkynge there to haue got ten succoure by reason of kynredde.
And he that afore hadde casten manye one oute vnburyed, was throwen out hymselfe, no man mournynge for him, nor puttynge him in his graue: so that he nother enioyed the buryal of a strã ger, nother was he partaker of hys fa thers sepulchre.

C Nowe whan thys was done the kynge suspected, that the Jewes wold haue fallen frõ hym: wherfore he came in a greate displeasure out of Egypte, 1.Mac.1.c. * and toke the cytye by violence. He commaunded hys men of warre also, that they shulde kyll and not spare, but slaye downe suche as wythstode them; clymmed vp vpon the houses.
Thus was ther a greate slaughter of yonge men, olde men, women, chylderen, and virgyns. In thre dayes were ther slayne .lxxx. thousande, fourtye thousande putte in preson, and no lesse solde. Yet was he not content wt thys, but durst go in to the moost holy tem beynge hys gyde) and wyth hys wyc-ked handes toke the holy vessel, which other kynges, and cytyes hadde geuen thyther, for the garnyshynge and honoure of the place: them toke he in hys handes vnworthelye, and defyled them.

D So madde was Antiochus, that he consydered not, howe that god was a lytle wroth for the synnes of them ẏ dwelte in the cytye, for the which such confusyon came vpon that place.
Judit.5.d * And why? yf it hadde not happened them to haue bene lapped in many syn come) had sodenlye bene punished, and

E So whan Antiochus had taken a thousande and. viii. hundreth talentes oute of the temple, he gat hym to Antioche in all the hayste, thynkynge in hys pryde, that he myghte make mē sayle vpon the drye londe, and to go vpon the see, suche an hyghe mynde had he. He left debytes there to vexe ẏ people: At Jerusalem lefte he Philippe a Phrigian, in maners more cruell then hymselfe that set hym there. At Garysim he lefte Andronicus, and Menelaus, which were more greuous to the

When he came nowe to Jerusalem, he fayned peace, and kepte hym styll vntyll the Sabbath daye. And then he commaunded his men to take them to theyr weapens (for the Jewes kepte holy day,) & so he slewe all them, ẏ were gone forth to the open playe, runnynge here and there thorowe the cytye wyth his men weapened, and murthured a greate

The.vi.Chapter.

¶ The kynge procedeth forth in hys tyranny, as well in other cytyes where the lawe of God is kepte, as at Jerusalem. Al thys sendeth God for the wickednesse of the people. The stedfastnesse of Eleazar.

1.mac.1.e. NOt longe after thys, sente the kynga messaunger frō Antioche, for to compell ẏ Jewes to altre the ordynaūces of the fathers, and the lawe of God, to defyle the temple that was at Jerusalem, and to call it the temple of Jupiter Olympius: and that they whiche shuld be in Garisim, shulde be as those whiche dwell at the place of Jupiter the herberous. Thys wycked sedicyon of the vngodlye was heuye vpon all the people: For the temple was full of volupteousnesse, bebbynge, and bollynge of the Heythen, of rybaudes and harlottes together. The women went in to the holy place, and bare in that was vnlawful. The altar also was full of vnlawfull thynges, which the lawe forbyddeth to laye vpon it. The Sabbathes were not kept, the other solempne feastes of the londe were not regarded. To be playne, ther durste no man be aknowne that he was a Jewe.

In the daye of the kynges byrthe they were compelled perforce to offre: and whan the feaste of Bacchus was kepte, they were constrayned to weare garlandes of yuey, and so to go aboute for the honoure of Bacchus.

Moreouer thorowe the counsel of B Ptolome, ther went oute a commaundemente in the nexte cytyes of the Heythen, that they shulde intreate the Jewes in lyke maner: namelye, to compell them for to do sacryfyce after the lawes of the Gentyles: and who so wold not, to put thē to death. A piteous thīg was it to se. Ther were two women accused to haue cyrcumcysed theyr sonnes, whom whan they had led rounde aboute the cytye (the babes hāginge at theyr brestes) they caste them downe headlynges ouer the walles. Some ẏ were crepte in to dennes, and had kepte the Sabbath, were accused vnto Philippe, and brente in the fyre: because that for the feare of God, they kepte the commaundemente so stedfastlye, and wolde not defende themselues.

Nowe I beseke all those, whiche reade this boke, that they refuse it not for these falles of aduersyte: and iudge the thynges (that are happened) for no destruccyon, but for a chastenynge of oure people. And why? Whā God suffereth not synners long to folow theyr owne mynde, but shortlye punysheth them, * it is a token of hys greate

Pro.3.b. louynge kyndnesse. For thys grace C haue we of God more then other people, that he suffereth not vs longe to synne vnpunysshed, lyke other na-Yf we synne, he correcketh vs, but he neuer wythdraweth hys mercy from vs: and though he punyshe wyth aduersyte, yet doth he neuer forsake hys people. But let thys that we haue spokẽ now wyth fewe wordes, be for a warnyng, and exhortacyon of ye heythen. Nowe wyll we come to the declarynge of the matter. Eleazar one of the pryncypall scrybes, an aged man, and of a welfauoured countenaunce, was constrayned to gape wyth open mouth, * and to eate swynes flesshe. But he desyryng rather to dye gloriouslye then to lyue in shame, offered hymselfe willinglye to the martyrdom. Now whan he saw that he muste nedes go to it, he toke it paciently: for he was at a poynt with hymselfe, that he wolde consente to no vnlawfull thynge for onye pleasure of lyfe. They ye stode by beynge moued wt pyte (but not a ryght) for the old frend D shyppe of the man, toke hym asyde pryuelye, and prayed hym that he wolde let suche flesh be brought hym as were lawfull to eate, & then to make a countenaunce as though he had eate of the flesshe of the sacryfyce lyke as the kyng commaunded, for so he myghte be delyuered from death: and so for the olde frendeshyppe of the man, they shewed hym thys kyndnesse. But he beganne to consydre hys dyscrete and honorable age, hys noble and worshypfull stocke, and howe that from hys youth vp he hadde bene of an honeste, & good conuersacyon, yee and how constantly he had kept the ordinaunces, and lawes commaunded by God, wherfore he gaue them thys answere, and sayde:

For though I were nowe delyue-

When he hadde sayde these wordes, immediatly he was drawen to the tormente. Now they that led hym, and were mylde a lytle afore, began to take displeasure, because of ye wordes that he sayde: for they thoughte he had spoken them of an hygh mynde. But whã he was in hyghe martyrdom, he moured and sayde: Thou (o LORDE) which haste the holy knowlege, knowest openlye, that where as I myghte be delyuered from death, I suffre these sore paynes of my body: but in my mynde I am well contente to suffre them, because I feare the. Thus thys man dyed, leauynge the memoryall of hys death for an example, not only vnto yonge men, but vnto all the people, to be stedfaste and manlye.

The. vii. Chapter.

¶ The death of the seuen bretheren, and theyr mother. Howe constant they are to suffre, rather then to obeye the wycked kynge.

swynes flesshe, namely, wyth scourges and lethren whippes. And one of them which was the chefe, sayde: What sekeste thou, and what requyrest thou of vs? As for vs, we are readye rather to suffre death, then to offende the lawes of God and the fathers. Then was the kinge angry, & bad heate cauldrons and brasen pottes. Which whan they were made hote, immediatlye he commaunded the tunge of hym that spake fyrste, to be cut oute, to pull the skinne ouer hys heade, to payre of the typpes of hys handes and fete: yee and that in the syghte of his mother, and the other of hys brethren. Nowe whan he was cleane marred, he commaunded a fyre to be made, and so (whyle ther was ony breth in hym) to be fryed in ye cauldron. In the whiche whan he had bene longe payned, the other brethren wyth theyr mother exhorted hym to dye man

B So whan the fyrste was dead af= the skinne wyth the heer ouer his head and axed hym, yf he wolde eate swy= sayde, I wyll not do it. And so was he tormented lyke as the fyrste. And whã he was euen at the geuynge vp of the gooste,he sayde: Thou mooste vngra= cyous personne puttest vs nowe to death,but the kynge of the world shall rayse vs vp (whiche dye for hys law=

After hym,was the thyrde had in derysyon: and whan he was required, he putte oute hys tunge, & that ryghte kynge, and they whiche were wt hym, maruayled at the yonge mans bold= paynes.

C Nowe whan he was dead also, they vexed the fourth wyth tormentes in lyke maner. So whan he was now at hys death,he sayd: It is better that we beynge put to death of men, haue oure hope and truste in God, for he Iohã.5.c. shall rayse vs vp agayne.* As for the, thou shalte haue no resurreccyon to

And whan they had spoken to the fyfthe, they tormented hym. Then loked he vnto the kynge, and sayde: Thou hast power amõg men(for thou arte a mortall man also thy selfe)to do what thou wylte,but thynke not, that God hath forsaken oure generacyon.
Abyde the,tarye styl a whyle,and thou shalte se the greate power of god, how he wyll punysshe the, and thy sede.

After hym they broughte the sixte, whiche beynge at the poynte of death, sayde:Be not deceaued (o kynge) for thys we suffre for oure owne sakes,be cause we haue offended oure God,and therfor maruaylous thynges are shew ed vpon vs. But thynke not þu (which takest in hande to stryue agaynst god) that thou shalte escape vnpunysshed. D

This excellente mother(worthye to be well reported of,and hadde in re= membraunce) sawe hyr seuen sonnes dye in one daye,and suffred it pacyent

God: Yee she exhorted euerye one of them in especyal,and that boldlye,and them: I can not tell howe ye came in my wõbe,for I nother gaue you breth nor soule,no nor lyfe. It is not I that ioyned the membres of youre bodyes together,but the maker of the worlde, which fashioned the byrth of man,and began all thynges. Euen he also of hys owne mercye shall geue you breth,and lyfe agayne lyke as ye nowe regarde not youre owne selues for hys lawes

Nowe thoughte Antiochus that she hadde despysed hym,therfore he let her go wyth hyr reproues, and begãne to exhorte the yongeste sonne (whiche yet was lefte) not onely wyth wordes but swar: vnto hym wyth an oothe, that he shulde make hym a ryche and welthye man (yf he wolde forsake the lawes of hys fathers) yee and that he shulde geue hym, whatsoeuer were the yonge man wolde not be moued, for all these thynges,he called hys mo= her wyth manye wordes, she promy= sed him,that she shulde spake vnto hyr sonne. So she turned her vnto hym (laughynge the cruel tyraunt to scorn) and spake wyth a bolde voyce: O my thys hangman, but suffre death sted=

That I maye receaue the agayn in the same mercye wyth thy brethren.

Whyle she was yet speakyng the thou (O shamefull, and mooste abhothat haue suffered a lytle payne, are nowe vnder the conuenaunte of euerlastynge lyfe: but thorowe the iudgeryghte iustye for thy pryde.

As for me (lyke as my brethren haue done) I offre my soule, and my callynge vpon God, that he wyll soon

In me nowe and in my bretheren the kyndled in anger, was more cruell vp-

Thorowe these wordes the men toke good hartes vnto them, readye to dye for the lawe and the contrye. So he set vpon euerye company a captayn one of hys owne brethren: Simon, Joseph and Jonathas: geuynge echone .xv. hundreth men. He caused Esdras also to reade the holye boke vnto them, and to geue them a token of the helpe of God.

But whan the tyme came vpon them, they returned: for it was the Sabbath, and therfore they folowed nomore vpon them. So they toke theyr weapēs and spoyles, and kepte the Sabbath, geuynge thankes vnto the LORDE, which had delyuered them that daye, & shewed them his mercy. After the Sabbath Num.31.d

Of those also that were wyth Tymotheus and Bachides, which foughte agaynste them, they slew .xx. thousand, wanne hyghe and stronge holdes, and deuyded moo spoyles: euer geuyng an equall porcyon vnto the syke, to the fatherlesse, to wydowes, and to aged persons. And whan they had diligent- F lye gathered theyr weapens together, they layed them all in conueniente places, and the remnaunte of the spoyles brought they to Jerusalem. They slew Philarches that wycked persō, which was wt Tymotheus, & had vexed manye Jewes. And whan they helde the thankesgeuynge at Jerusalem for the victory, they brent those that hadde set fyre on the portes of the temple, namelye Calisthenes, whiche was fled in to an house: and so they gat a worthye rewarde for theyr wyckednesse. As for that mooste vngracious Nycanor, which had broughte a thousande marchauntes, to bye the Jewes, he was thorowe the helpe of the LORDE broughte downe, euen of them whom he regarded not: in so muche that he put of hys gloryous raymente, fled by see, and came alone to Antioche wyth greate shame, and dyshonoure, whiche he gat thorowe the destruccyon of hys hooste. Thus he that promysed the Romaynes to paye them theyre trybute, whan he toke Jerusalem: began nowe to saye planelye, that God was the defender of the Jewes, and therfore not possible to wounde them, because they folowed the lawes which God hadde made.

¶ Of Antiochus and hys pryde, and howe God punysshed hym.

A At the same tyme came An 1.Ma. 6.a tiochus agayne wyth dys honoure oute of Persia.
For whan he came to Per sepolis, and undertoke to robbe the temple and to subdue the cy= tye, the people ranne together, and de= fended them selues, in so much that he and his were fayn to flye wyth shame.
And so after that flyghte, it happened that Antiochus came agayne wyth dis honoure. But whan he came to Egba thana, he gat knowlege what was hap pened unto Nycanor, and Tymothe= us. Nowe as he was auaunsyng hym selfe in his wrath, he thoughte he was able to auenge the iniurye that was done to them, upon the Jewes: & ther= fore commaunded to make readye hys charret, haystynge on hys iourneye wi thoute ceassynge: the iudgemente of God prouokynge hym, because he had spoken so proudlie, that he wold come to Jerusalem, and make it a graue of the Jewes. But the LORDE God 2.Pa.16.b of Israell, * that seyth all thynges, smote hym wyth an inuisyble plage, whiche no man coulde heale.
B For as soon as he had spoken the se wordes, ther came upon hym an hor ryble payne of hys bowels, and a sore grefe of the entrayels. And that was but ryghte: for he had martyred other mens bowels wyth diuerse & straunge tormentes, howe be it he wolde in no wyse ceasse from hys malyce. Yee he was yet the prouder, and more malyci= ous agaynste the Jewes: But whyle he was commaundynge to make hayst in the matter, it happened that he fell downe vyolentlye from the charrette, so that it brused hys bodye, and dydde hym greate payne.
And so he that thoughte he myghte commaunde the floudes of the see (so proude was he beyonde the con= dicyon of man) and to weye hyghe mountaines in a payre of scales, was nowe broughte downe to the grounde, and caryed upon an horslytter, know= legynge the manifeste power of God upon hym: so that the wycked body of Actu.12.d. hys * was full of wormes, whiche in hys payne fell quycke oute of his flesh In so muche that hys hooste was gre= ued wyth the smell and stynke of him.
Thus he that lytle afore thoughte he myghte reache to the starres of hea= uen, hym myghte no man nowe a= byde, nor beare, for the vehemence of stynke.
Therfore he beynge broughte frō C hys greate pryde, beganne for to come to knowlege of hymselfe: for the puny shemente of God warned him, and his payne increased euer more and more.
And whan he hymselfe myghte not a= byde hys owne stynche, he sayde these wordes: It is reason to be obediente unto God, and that a man desyre not to be lyke unto hym. This wycked per sonne prayed also unto the LORDE of whome he shulde haue optayned no mercye. And as for the cytye that he came unto so hystely, to bryng it down to the grounde, and to make it a graue for dead men: nowe he desyred to dely= uer it fre. And as touchynge the Jew= es, whome he had iudged not worthye to be buryed, but wold haue cast them oute for to be deuoured of the foules, and wylde beastes, sayenge: That he wolde haue destroyed both olde and yonge: Nowe he promyseth to make them lyke the cytesyns of Athens. And where as he hadde spoyled the holye temple afore, nowe he maketh promy= se to garnyshe it wyth greate gyftes, to increase the holye ornamentes, and of hys own rentes to beare the coastes and charges belongynge to the offerin ges: yee and that he wolde also become a Jewe hymselfe, to go thorowe euery place of the worlde, and to preache the power of God.
But whan hys paynes wolde not D ceasse (for the ryghteous iudgement of God was come upon hym) out of a ve rye despayre he wrote unto the Jewes a lettre of intercessyon, conteynynge these wordes: The kynge, and prynce Antiochus wysshet unto the vertuous cytesyns of the Jewes muche health, and good prosperyte.
Yf ye and your chylderen fare wel, and yf al thynges go after your mynd: we geue greate thankes. In my syck= nesse also do I remembre you louyn= glye: for as I came oute of Persia, and was taken wt sore dysease, I thoughte it necessarye to care for the commune welthe. Nother despayre I in my self, but haue a good hope to escape thys syckenesse.

But consyderynge that my father led an hoost somtyme in yͤ hyer places, and shewed who shulde raygne after hym, that (yf ther happened ony contro uersy, or ony harde thynge were declared,) they in the lande myght knowe theyr chefe lorde, that ther shulde be no insurreccyon: Agayne, whan I pondre by my selfe, how that all the myghtye men, and neyghbours rounde aboute, are layenge wayte, and loke but for o-portunite to do harme: I haue ordened that my sonne Antiochus shall raygne after me, whom I ofte commended to many of you, when I was in the hyer kyngdomes, and haue wrytẽ vnto him as it foloweth hereafter. Therfore I praye you, and requyre you to remẽbre the benenefytes, that I haue done vnto you generally, and in especyall. For I hope that he shalbe of sober, & louynge behauour, and yf he folowe my deuice he shalbe indifferent vnto you.

Dan.8.c *Thus that murtherer, and blasphemer of God was sore smytten: and lyke as he had intreated other men, so he dyed a myserable death in a straũge contre vpon a mountayne. And his body dyd Philippe (that went with him) cary awaye: which fearynge the sonne of Antiochus, wente in to Egipte to Ptolome Philometor.

The .x. Chapter.

¶ Machabeus winneth the holy cytie agayne and clenseth it. Eupator foloweth his father Antiochus. Judas Machabeus ordreth hymselfe well.

A Machabeus now and his cõ-1.Mac.4.c. pany (thorowe the helpe of the LORDE) wanne the temple, and the cytie agayn destroyed the aulters, and chappels that the Heythẽ had buylded thorow the stretes: clensed the temple, Exo.20.d *made an other aulter of bricke stons, and after two yeares they offered sacrifices, set forth the incense, the lyghtes, and shewbread. Whan that was done, they fel downe flat vpõ yͤ groũd, and besought the LORDE, that they might come nomore in to such trouble: but yf they synned ony more agaynste hym, he hymselfe to chasten them with mercy, and not to come in the hãdes of those aleauntes and blasphemous mẽ.
Now vpon the same daye that the straungers poluted the temple, it happened that on yͤ very same daye it was clensed agayne, *namely, the .xxv. daye 1.Mac.4.f of yͤ moneth called Casleu. They kepte B viii. dayes in gladnes, lyke as in yͤ feast of the tabernacles: remembrynge that not longe afore, they helde the feast of tabernacles vpon the mountaines and in dennes lyke beastes. And to yͤ same tokẽ they bare grene bowes, braũches and palmes before hym that had geuen them good fortune to clense his place.
They agreed also together, and made a statute, that euery yeare those dayes shulde be solemply kepte of all the people of the Jewes.

How Antiochus then (that was called yͤ noble) dyed, it is suffieyẽtly tolde.
Now wyll we speake of Nicanor the sonne of that wycked Antiochus, how it happened with him: and so with few wordes to comprehende the aduersite that chaunced in the warres. Whan he had taken in yͤ kyngdome, he made one Lysias (which had ben captayne of the hoost in Phenices, and Syria) ruler ouer the matters of the realme. For Pto lome that was called Macron, beynge a ruler for the Jewes (and specyally, to syt in iudgemẽt for such wrõge as was done vnto thẽ) vndertoke to deale pea- C ceably with them. For the which cause he was accused of the frẽdes before Eu pator, and whan he was suspecte to be a traytour (because he had left Cipers, that Philometor had cõmytted vnto hym: and because he departed from no ble Antiochus, that he was come vnto) he poysoned hymselfe, and dyed.

Now whan Gorgias was gouer-noure of the same places, he toke strã gers, & vndertoke oftetymes to warre with the Jewes. Moreouer the Idu-means that helde the stronge holdes, re ceaued those that were dryuen from Je rusalem, and toke in hande to warre al so. *But they that were with Macha 1.mac.5.a. beus, besought & prayed vnto yͤ LOR DE, that he wolde be theyr helper: and so they fel in to the stronge holdes of yͤ Idumeans, and wanne many places by strength: Suche as came agaynst them they slewe, and kylled no lesse (of altogether) then twentye thousande. Ne-uerthelesse some (no lesse thẽ nyne thou sande) were fled in to two stronge tow res, hauynge all maner of ordynaunce to withstonde them.

Then Machabeus leauynge Sy- D mõ, Josephus, zacheus, and those that were with thẽ, (which were very many) wente to besege them, and to fyght where moost nede was. Now they that were with Simon beynge led with co= uetousnesse, were intreated for money, thorowe certayne of those that laye in the towers: toke.lxx M. drachmas, and let some of them escape. But when it was tolde Machabeus what had hap= pened, he called the captaynes of ŷ peo ple together, accusynge those persones, that they had solde the brethren for mo ney, and let theyr enemyes go. So he slewe those traytours, and immediatly wente in hande with the two towres.

And whan they had ordred them selues manly with theyr weapens, and han= des, they slewe in the two castels moo then twentye thousande.
1.mac.5.d. * Now Tymotheus ‡ whom the ‡1.ma.8.c Jewes had ouercome afore, gathered a multitude of straunge people, brought an hoost also of horsemen of the Asiãs, E to winne Jewry by strength. But whã he drewe nye, Machabeus and they ŷ 2.mac.11.b were with hym * fell to theyr prayer, sprenkled asshes vpon theyr heades, be= ynge gyrded with heery cloth aboute theyr loynes, fell downe before the aul= ter, and besought the LORDE, that he wolde be mercyfull to them, but an enemy vnto theyr enemyes, and to take Deut.28.a parte agaynst theyr aduersaries, * ac= cordynge as it is promised in the lawe.
So after the prayer, they wente on fur ther from the cytie: and whan they cam nye the enemyes, they prepared themsel ues agaynst them.
And by tymes in the mornynge at Jere.17.b the breake of the daye, both the hoostes 2.pa.32.b buckled together. * The one parte had the LORDE for theyr refuge, whiche is the geuer of prosperite, strength and victory. The other had a mãly stomack which is a captayne of warre.
The battayll now beynge great, 4.Reg.6. * ther appeared vnto the enemyes frõ 2.mac.3.d. heauen, fyue mẽ vpon horsebacke with and.11.b brydels of golde, leadynge the Jewes, and two of them hauynge Machabeus betwixte them, that kepte hym safe on euery syde with theyr weapẽs, but shot dartes, and lyghtenynges vpon the ene myes, where thorow they were confoũ ded with blyndnesse, & so sore afrayed that they fell downe. Ther were slayne twenty thousande, and. v. C. foote=

F theus himselfe, he fled vnto Gazar a ve ry stronge holde, wherin Cereas was captayne. But Machabeus and his cõ pany layed sege to it cherfully.iiii. day= es. Now they that were within tru= stynge to the strength of the place, cur= sed and banned exceadyngly, and made great crakynge with wicked wordes.
Neuerthelesse vpon the fyfth daye in ŷ mornynge.xx. yonge mẽ of Machabeus cõpany, beynge set on fyre in theyr myn des because of the blasphemy, came mã fully vnto the wall, and with bolde sto takyng to set fyre vpon the portes, and to burne those blasphemous persõnes Timotheus (that was crept into a cor= his brother in lyke maner with Appol= songe Psalmes, with prayses & than= kesgeuynges vnto the LORD, which had done so great thynges for Israell, and geuen them the victory.

The.xi.Chapter.

What Lisias purposeth. Judas wt standeth hym, God taketh his parte.
Lisias and Judas are at one.

NOt longe after this, Lisias A the kynges stewarde and a kynsman of his, (which had the gouernaunce of his mat ters,) toke sore displeasure for the thinges that had happened: and when he had gathered.lxxx. M. men on foote with al the hoost of the horsemẽ, he came agaynst the Jewes, thynkynge to wynne the cytie, to make it an habi= tacyon for the Heythen, * and the tem= ple wolde he haue to be an house of lu= Joh.2.b cre, lyke as the other goddes houses of the Heythen are, and to sell the prestes offyce euery yeare: Not consyderynge ŷ D power of God but was wylde in his mynde, * trustynge in the multitude of Esa.36.b foote men, in thousandes of horsemen, and in his.lxxx. Elephantes.
So he came in to Jewry and then B to Bethsura (a castell of defence lyinge in a narowe place. v. furlonges frõ Je= rusalem) and wanne it. Now whan Machabeus and his company knewe that the stronge holdes were taken, * they fell to theyr prayers & weppyng 2.Ma.1.c and teares before the LORDE, & all the people in lyke maner besought him that he wolde sende a good angell to delyuer Israel. Machabeus hymselfe was the fyrste that made hym ready to the battayll exortynge the other yͭ were with hym, to ieoparde themselues, and to helpe theyr brethren. And whan they were goynge forth of Ierusalem together with a ready and wyllyng mynde, *ther appeared before them vpō hors-2.Ma.3.d bache a man in whyte clothynge wyth

Then they praysed the LORDE alto gether, which had shewed them mercy and were conforted in theyr mindes: in so much that they were ready, not only to fyght with men, but with the moost euell beastes, yee and to runne thorowe walles of yron.
C Thus they wente on wyllyngly ha LORDE mercyfull vnto them. They fell myghtely vpon theyr enemyes lyke lyons, brought downe.xi.M. footemen syxten hūdreth horsmen, put all yͤ other to flyght, many of them beynge wounded, and some gat awaye naked. Yee Lisias hymself was fayn to flye shame fully, and so to escape. Neuerthelesse yͤ man was not without vnderstandyng but consydered by hymselfe that his po wer was mynyshed, and pondred how the Iewes beynge defended by yͤ helpe of almyghty God, were not able to be ouercome: wherfore he sent thē worde, and promysed that he wolde consent to all thynges which were reasonable, & to make the kynge theyr frende. To yͤ which prayer of Lisias Machabeus agreed, sekynge in all thynges the commune wealth: and what so euer Ma-chabeus wrote vnto Lysias cōcernyng the Iewes, the kynge graunted it. For ther were letters wrytten vnto the Ie-wes from Lysias conteynynge these wordes:

D Lisias sendeth gretynge to yͤ people of the Iewes. Ihon, and Absalon which were sent frō you, delyuered my wrytynges, and requyred me to fulfyll the thynges concernyng theyr earande.
Therfore loke what myght be graun-ted, I certifyed the kynge therof: and what so euer was cōuenient, I agreed therto. Yf ye now wyll be faythfull in the matters, I shal endeuer myself here after also to do you good. As concernynge other thynges by euery article therof, I haue committed them to your messaungers, and to those whō I sente vnto you, to comune with you of the same, fare ye well. In the hundreth and eyght and fortye yeare, the foure and twentye daye of the moneth Diosco-rinthius.
Now the kynges letter conteyned these wordes: Kyng Antiochus sēdeth gretynge vnto his brother Lisi-as. For so much as our father* is now 2.mac.9.b. dead, oure wyll is, that they which are in our realme, lyue without ony insurreccyon, and euery man to be diligente in his owne matters. We vnderstonde also, that the Iewes wolde not consēt to our father, for to be brought vnto yͤ costume of the Gentyles, but styfly to kepe theyr owne statutes: for yͤ whiche cause they requyre of vs also, to let thē remayne styll by theyr owne lawes.
Wherfore our mynde is, that this E people shalbe in rest: we haue cōcluded & determyned also, to restore thē theyr temple agayne: that they maye lyue accordynge to the vse & costume of theyr forefathers. Thou shalte do vs a pleasure therfore, yf thou sende vnto them, and agre with them: that whā they are certified of our mynde, they maye be of good cheare, and loke to theyr owne wealth.
And this was the letter, that the kynge wrote vnto the Iewes: Kynge Antiochus sendeth gretynge vnto the councell, and the other people of the Ie wes. Yf ye fare well, we haue oure de-syre: as for vs, we are in good health.
Menelaus came and tolde vs, howe yͭ your desire was to come down to your people, which are with vs.
Wherfore those that wyll come, F we geue thē fre lybertie, vnto the thyrtye daye of the moneth of Aprill, yͭ they maye vse the meates of the Iewes, and theyr own lawes, lyke as afore, & none of thē by ony maner of wayes to haue harme, for thynges done in ignorāūce.
Menelaus whom we haue sent vnto you, shal comun with you at large, fare ye well. In the hundreth and eyghte and fortye yeare, the.xv. daye of the mo neth of Aprill.
The Romaynes also sente a letter cōteynyng these wordes: Quintus Mē ninus, and Titus Manilius embassa-dours of the Romaines, sende gretyng vnto the people of the Iewes. Loke what Lisias the kynges kynsmā, hath graunted you, we graunt you the same also, But as concernynge the thynges which he referred vnto the kynge, sēde hyther some wyth spede: and pondre ÿ matter diligently amōge youreselues, that we maye cast the best to your profyte: for we must now departe vnto Antioche. And therfore wryte shortely agayne, that we maye knowe youre mynde. Fare well. In the .C.xlviii. yeare the .xv. daye of the moneth of Aprill.

The .xii. Chapter.

¶ Timotheus, Apollonius and other ymagine treason. Judas Machabeus punyssheth them, wynneth Caspin & other cyties.

A WHan these cōuenaūts were made, Lisias went vnto ÿ kynge, & the Jewes tylled theyr grounde. But Timotheus, Appollonius ÿ sōne of Gennei, Jerome, and Demophō the proude, Nicanor the captayn of Cipers and they ÿ laye in those places, wolde not let them lyue in rest & peace. They of Joppa also dyd euen such a shamefull dede. They prayed the Jewes that dwelt amonge them, to go wyth theyr wyues and chylderen into the shyppes which they had prepared, & dyd wyth them, as though they had ought them on euell wyl. For somuch than as ther was gone forth a general proclamaciō thorow the cytie because of peace, they cōsented thereto, & suspected nothyng: but whan they were gone forth into ÿ depe, they drowned no lesse then two hundreth of them.

Whan Judas knew of this crueltie shewed vnto hys people, he cōmaūded those that were with hym to make thē ready, exhortynge them to call vpon God the ryghteous iudge, went forth agaynst those murtherers of hys brethren, set fyre in the hauen by nyghte, brent vp the shyppes: and those that escaped from the fyre, he slew wyth ÿ
B swearde. And whan he had done thys, he departed, as though he wolde come agayne, and roote out al thē of Joppa. But whan he had gotten worde, that the Jāmites were mynded to do in lyke maner vnto the Jewes, which dwelte amonge them, he came vpon the Jamnites by nyght, and set fyre in the hauē wyth the shyppes: so that the lyght of the fyre was sene at Jerusalem, vpon atwo hundreth and forty furlonges.

Nowe whan they were gone from thence nyne furlonges in theyr iourny towarde Timotheus, fyue thousande men on foote, & fyue hundreth horsmē of the Arabians foughte wyth hym. So whan the battayll was earnest, & prospered wyth Judas thorowe the helpe of God: the resydue of the Arabians beyng ouercome, besought Judas to be at one wyth them, and promised to geue hym certayne pastures, and to do wyth hym good in other thynges. Judas thynkynge that they shulde in dede be profitable concernynge manye thynges, promysed thē peace: whereupon they shoke handes, & so they departed to theyr tentes. Judas wente also vnto a cytie, which was very fast kepte wyth brydges, fensed rounde aboute wyth walles & dyuerse kyndes of people dwellyng therī, called Caspi.

They that were within it, put such C truste in the strength of the walles, & in theyr stoare of vitaylles: that they were the slacker in theyr doynges, cursynge and reuylynge Judas wyth blasphemyes, and speakynge such wordes as it becōmeth not. But Machabeus callynge vpon the greate prince of the worlde (which without ony battayle rām-mes or ordinaunce of warre * dyd cast Josu. 6. downe the walles of Jericho, in the tyme of Josue) fell manfullye vpon the walles, toke the cytie, and (thorow the helpe of the LORDE) made an exceadynge great slaughter: Insomuch that a lake two furlonges brode, which lay thereby, semed to flowe wyth ÿ bloude of the slayne.

Than departed they from thence seuen hundreth and fyftye furlonges, and came to Caracha, vnto the Jewes that are called Tubianei. But as for Timotheus, they coulde not get hym there: for (not one matter dispatched) he was departed from thence, and had lefte certayne men in a verye stronge holde. But Dositheus and Sosipater which were captaynes wyth Machabeus, slew those that Timotheus had lefte in the house of defence, euen ten thousande men. And Machabeus prepared hym wyth the syxe thousande men that were aboute hym, set hym in order by companyes, and wente forth agaynste Timotheus, which had with hym C. and xx. Whā Timotheus had knowlege of Judas cōminge, he sent ÿ womē, chyldren, and the other baggage vnto a castell called Carnion. (For it coulde not be wonne, and was harde to come into the handes of Dositheus and So prayers, to let hym go with his lyfe: be cause he had many of ÿ Jewes fathers and brethren in preson, whiche (yf they put hym to death) myght be disapoinkepe them selues from such synne, for so much as they saw before theyr eyes, that these mẽ were slayne for the same well and ryght: for he had some consy-is after this tyme. For yf he had not thought that they which were slayne, dyd yet lyue, it had bene superfluous & vayne, to make eny vowe or sacrifice, for them that were dead. But for so muche as he sawe that they which dye in the fauoure and belefe of God, are in good rest and ioye, he thought it to be good and honorable for a reconcy-lynge to do the same for those which were slayne, that the offence myghte be

The.xiii.Chapter.

Antiochus and Lisias make them forth agaynst the Jewes, Judas ga-thereth the people, and byddeth thē cal vpon God, goeth on, and besyde Mo-din stryketh a great battayll.

A IN the.C.xlix.yeare gat Ju-1.mac. 6.d das knowlege, that Antiochus Eupator was commynge with a great power in to Jewry, and Lisias the steward and ruler of his matters with hym: hauynge an hūdreth and ten thou sand men on foote, fyue thousād horse men, two and twenty Elephantes, and thre hundreth charrettes. Menelaus also ioyned hymselfe with them (but wt great deceate) & spake fayre to ŷ kynge not for ony good of the contre, but because he thoughte to haue bene made some great man of auctorite. But the kynge of kynges moued Antiochus mynde agaynst this vngodly persone, 2.Ma 4.e & Lisias enfourmed the kynge, * that this Menelaus was ŷ cause of al myschefe: so that the kynge commaunded to take hym, and (as the maner of thē is) to put hym vnto death in the same place.

Ther was also in the same place a tower of.l.cubites hygh, heaped wt asshes: but aboue it was so made, ŷ men myght loke downe on euery syde.
Where in to the kynge commaunded that shamefull person to be cast amōge the asshes, as one that was cause of all B vngracyousnesse. And reason it was, ŷ ŷ vnthrifte shuld dye such a death, & not to be buried: for he had don much myschefe vnto the aulter of God (whose fyre and asshes were holy) therfore was it ryghte, that he hymselfe also shulde be destroyed with asshes.

But the kynge was wode in his mynde, and cam to shewe hymself more cruell vnto the Jewes, then his father was. Which whan Judas perceaued, 2.Ma.10.e *he commaunded the people to cal vppon the LORDE nyght and daye: ŷ he wolde now helpe them also, lyke as he had done alwaye: (For they were a-frayed to be put from theyr lawe, from the naturall contre and from the holy tēple:) & not to suffre ŷ people (which a lytle whyle afore begāne to recouer) to be subdued agayne of the blasphemous nacyons.

So whan they had done this toge- C ther, and besought the LORDE for mercy, with weppyng and fastynge thre dayes longe, flat vpon the grounde: Judas exorted them, to make themsel-ues ready. But he and the elders together deuysed to go forth fyrste wt theyr people, afore ŷ kyng brought his hoost in to Jewrye, and afore he beseged the cytie, and so to cōmytte the matter vnto God. Wherfore he ascribed the power of all thynges vnto God the maker of al the worlde, exhortyng his peo ple to fyght manfully, (yee euen vnto death) for the lawes, the temple, ŷ cytie theyr owne natiue contre, and to defēd the cytesyns: and set his hoost before Modin. He gaue them also that were wt hym, a token of the victory of God, wente by nyght in to the kynges pauylion, slewe of the hoost fourtene thousande men, * and the greatest Elephan 1.mac. 6.f tes, with those that sat vpon them.

Thus whan they had broughte a D great feare and romoure amonge ŷ ten tes of theyr enemyes, and all thynges wente prosperously with them, they de parted in the breake of the daye, God beynge theyr helper and defēder. Now whan the kynge perceaued the manly-nesse of the Jewes, he wente aboute to take the stronge places by crafte, and romoued his hoost vnto * Bethsura, 2.Ma.11 which was a well kept house of defēce of the Jewes: but they were chased awaye, hurte and discomfited. And Judas sent vnto thē that were in it, suche thynges as were necessarye. In the Je wes hoost also ther was one Rhodochus, which told the enemyes theyr secretes: but they sought hym out, & whā they had gotten hym, they put hym in preson. After this dyd the kynge co-mune with them that were in Bethsura, toke truce with them, departed and stroke a battayll with Judas, which ouercame hym.

But whan he vnderstode, ŷ Phi- E lippe (whom he had left to be ouerseer of his busynesses at Antioche) begāne to rebell agaynst hym, he was astonied in his mynde: so that he yelded himself to the Jewes, and made them an oth, to do what so euer they thought ryght Now whan he was reconcyled wt thē, he offered, made muche of the temple, gaue greate gyftes vnto it, embraced Machabeus, makynge hym captayne and gouernoure from Ptolomais vn-to the Gerenes.

Neuerthelesse whã he came to Ptolomais, the people of ye cytie were not contẽt wyth that bonde of frẽdshyppe: for theye were afrayed, that he wolde breake the conuenaunt. Than wente Lisias vp into the seate, and enformed the people, shewed thẽ the cause why, and pacifyed them. So he came agayn to Antioche. Thys is now the matter concernynge the kynges yourney and hys returne.

The .xiiii. Chapter.

¶ Of Demetrius the sonne of Seleucus. The traytorous dealynge of Alcimus. Nicanor breaketh falslye the bõde made wyth Judas Machabeus. Of the manlynesse of Razis.

A After thre yeares was Judas enfourmed, how that Demetrius the sõne of Seleucus was come vp wyth greate power & shyppes, thorowe the hauen of Tripolis, (to take certayne commodius places and contryes) agaynst Antiochus and hys captayn Lisias. Now Alcimus (which had ben hygh preste, and wylfully defyld hymself in the tyme of ye mixtyng) seynge that by no meanes he could be helped, nor haue ony more intraũce to the altare: he came to Demetrius in the hundreth and one & fyftyeth yeare, presẽtynge vnto hym a crown of gold, a palm and an olyue tre: (which as mẽ thoughte) belonged to the temple, and that daye he helde hys tunge.

But whã he had gotten oportunite for hys madnesse, Demetrius called hym to counsell, and axed hym what thynges or counsels the Jewes leaned vnto? He answered: The Jewes that be called Assidei, (whose captayne is Judas Machabeus) mayntayne warres make insurrection, and wyl not let the realme be in peace.

B For I beynge depryued of my fathers honour (I meane the hygh presthode) ame come hyther: partly because I was faythfull vnto the kynge, and partly because I sought the profyte of the cytesins. And why? all oure people (thorow the wyckednesse of them) are not a lytle troubled. Wherfore I beseke the (o kynge) cõsydre all these thynges diligently, & then make some prouision for the lande and the people, accordynge to the kyndnes that thou hast offred vnto them. For as longe as Judas hath the vpperhande, it is not possible that men can lyue in peace.

When he had spoken these wordes other frendes also hauynge euell wyll at Judas, set the kynge Demetrius on fyre agaynste hym. * Which immediatly sent Nicanor (ruler of the Elephãtes) a captayne into Jewry, commaundynge hym to take Judas alyue: but to slaye them that were with hym, and to make Alcimus hyghe preste of the temple. 1.Mac.7.a

C Then the Heythen which fled oute of Jewry from Judas, came to Nicanor by flockes thynkynge the harme & decaye of the Jewes to be theyr welfare. Now whan the Jewes herde of Nicanors cõmynge, & the getherynge together of the Heythen: they sprencled themselfes wyth earth, * and besought him, (which made thẽ hys people, and euer defended hys owne porcion wyth euydent tokens) yt he wolde preserue them styll. So at the cõmaundement of the captayne, they remoued from thence, & came to a towne called Dessasan. And Simon Judas brother fell in hande wyth Nicanor, but thorowe the sodayne cõmynge of the enemyes, he was afrayed. 2.mac.10.a

Neuerthelesse Nicanor hearynge the manlynes of thẽ yt were wt Judas, and ye bolde stomakes that they had to fyghte for theyr natural contry, durste not proue the matter wyth bloudshedynge. Wherfore he sent Possidonius Theodocius and Matthias before, to geue and to take peace. So whan they had takẽ longe aduisemẽt thervpon, & ye captayne shewed it to the multitude: they were agreed in one mynde to haue peace. And they appoited a daye to syt vpõ these matters quietly amõg thẽselues, ye stooles also were brought forth. Neuerthelesse Judas cõmaunded certayn mẽ of armes to wayt in cõuenient places, lest ther shuld sodẽly aryse ony euell thorow the enemyes. And so they communed reasonably together.

D Nicanor, whyle he abode at Jerusalẽ, ordered hymselfe not vnreasonably, but sent awaye the people yt were gathered together. He loued Judas euer wyth hys harte, and fauoured hym. He prayed hym also to take a wyfe, & to brynge forth chyldrẽ. So he maryed lyued in rest, and they led a commune lyf. But Alcimus perceauynge the loue that was betwixt them, and how they were agreed together, came to Demetrius and tolde hym that Nicanor had taken straunge matters in hande, and ordened Iuads (an enemye of the realme) to be the kynges successoure. Then the kinge was sore displeased, and thorow the wycked accusacyons, whiche Alcimus made of Nicanor, he was so prouoked, that he wrote vnto Nicanor sayenge: that he was very angry for ye frendshippe and agrement, whiche he had made with Machabeus. Neuerthelesse he commaunded hym in all the haist, that he shulde take Machabeus presoner, and sende hym to Antioche.

Which letters whan Nicanor had sene, he was at his wyttes ende, & sore greued, wherin they had agreed: specyally, seynge Machabeus was the man, that neuer dyd hym harme. But because he myght not withstande ye kyng he sought oportunite to fulfyll his cōmaundement. Notwithstandyng whē Machabeus sawe that Nicanor began to be churlysh vnto hym, & that he intreated hym more rughly then he was wonte, he perceaued that such vnkyndnes came not of good, & therfore he gathered a few of his mē, and withdrewe hymselfe from Nicanor. Which whā he knewe yt Machabeus had manfully preuented hym, he came in to the great and moost holy temple: and commaunded the prestes (whiche were doynge theyr vsuall offerynges) to delyuer hym the man. And whā they sware they coulde not tell, where the mā was whome he sought, he stretched out his

1.Mac.7.c. hande, *and made an oth, sayenge: Yf ye wyll not delyuer me Iudas captiue, I shall remoue this temple of God in to a playne felde, I shall breake downe the aulter, and consecrate this temple vnto Bacchus. After these wordes he departed.

Then the prestes lyft vp theyr handes toward heauen, and besought hym that was euer the defender of theyr people, sayeng: Thou O LORDE of al, which hast nede of nothynge woldest ye the temple of thy habitacyon shulde be amonge vs. Therfore now (O moost holy LORDE) kepe this house euer

1.Ma.4.e. vndefyled, *which lately was clensed.

2.Mac.10.a Nowe was ther accused vnto Nicanor one Razis, an Alderman of Ierusalem, a louer of the whole cytie, & a man of good reporte, whiche for the kynde hart that he bare vnto the people, was called a father of the Iewes. This mā ofttymes (whan the Iewes were mynded to kepe them selues vndefyled) defended and delyuered them, beyng content stedfastly to spende his body & his lyfe for his people.

So Nicanor wyllynge to declare the hate that he bare to the Iewes, sent fyue hundreth men to take hym: for he thought, yf he gat hym, he shuld bryng the Iewes in great decaye. Now whā the people beganne to rushe in at his house, to breake the dores, and to set fyre on it: he beynge now taken, wolde haue defended hymself wt his swearde: chosynge rather to dye manfully, then to yelde hymselfe to those wycked doers: and because of his noble stocke, he hadde rather haue bene put to extreme cruelte.

Notwithstandynge what tyme as he myssed of his stroke for haist, and ye multitude fell in violently betwixt the dores: he ranne boldly to the wall, and cast hymselfe downe manfully amōge the heape of them, whiche gaue soone place to his fall, so that he fell vpō his belly. Neuertheles whyle ther was yet breath within hym, he was kyndled in his mynde: and whyle his bloude gusshed out exceadyngly (for he was verye sore wounded) he ranne thorow ye myddest of the people, & gat hym to ye toppe of a rocke. So whan his bloude was now gone, he toke out his own bowels with both his handes, and threwe thē vpon the people: callyng vpon ye LORDE of lyfe and spirete, to reward hym this agayne, and so he dyed.

The xv. Chapter.

Of Nicanors wycked purpose. Iudas geueth his people godly cōsolaciō. Of his dreames and visions, and how Nicanor peryshed.

NOw * whā Nicanor knew that Iudas was in the cōtre of Samaria, he thought with al his power to strike a felde with hym vpon a Sabbath daye. Neuerthelesse the Iewes that were compelled to go wt him, sayd: O do not so cruelly & vnkyndly, but halowe the Sabbath daye, & wor- 1.Mac.7.

am myghtye vpon earth, to cōmaunde purpose.

B Nicanor had deuysed with great pryde to ouercome Judas, & to brynge awaye the victory. But Machabeus had euer a fast cōfidence and a perfecte hope in God, that he wolde helpe hym, & exhorted his people, not to be afray-ed at the commynge of the Heythē but alwaye to remembre the helpe that had bene shewed vnto them from heauen, yee & to be sure now also, that Almigh tye God wolde geue them the victory.
He spake vnto them out of the lawe & prophetes, puttynge them in remembraunce of the battayls, that they had stryken afore, and made them to be of a good corage.
So whan theyr hartes were pluct vp, he shewed them also the deceatful-nesse of the Heythen, and howe they wolde kepe no conuenaunt nor oth.
Thus he wapened them not with the armoure of shilde and speare, but with wholsome wordes and exortacyons.
He shewed them a dreame also, where thorowe he made them all glad, which was this: He thought that he saw Onias (which had ben hygh prest, a ver-tuous and louynge man, sad, and of ho nest conuersacyon, well spoken, & one that had ben exercised in godlynesse frō a chylde) holdynge vp his handes to-warde heauen, and prayeng for his peo C ple. After this ther appeared vnto him another man, which was aged, honorable, and glorious. And Onias sayd: This is a louer of the brethren, and of the people of Israel. This is he that prayeth much for the people, and for al the holy cytie: Jeremy the prophete of God. He thought also that Jeremy helde out his ryght hande, & gaue hym (namely vnto Judas) a swearde of golde, sayenge: Take this holy sweard a gyfte frō God, wherwith thou shalte smyte down the enemyes of the people of Israel.

And so they were well conforted thorowe the wordes of Judas, & toke corage vnto them, so that the yōge mē were determined in theyr myndes to fyght & to byde styfly at it, In so much that in the thynges which they toke in hande theyr boldnesse shewed the same because the holy cytie and the temple were in parell: for the which they toke more care, then for theyr wyues, chēldrē brethren, and kynsfolkes. Agayne, they that were in the cytie, were moost care full for those which were to fyght.
Now whan they were all in a hope ÿ the iudgemēt of ÿ matter was at hōde, and the enemyes drewe nye, the hoost beynge set in araye, the elephantes and horsemen euery one standynge in his

And so he made an ende of his wordes.
Then Nicanor and they that were ŵ hym, drewe nye with shawmes and sōprayer and callynge vpon God.

With theyr handes they smote, but with theyr hartes they prayed vnto the LORDE, and slewe no lesse then thorowe the present helpe of God they were gloriously comforted.

Now whan they lefte of, and were E

And Judas (which was euer ready to spende his bodye and lyfe for his cyte-syns) commaunded to smyte of Nicanors heade, with his arme and hande, and to be brought to Jerusalem. Whan he came there, he called all the people, and the prestes at the aulter with those that were in the castell, and shewed the[m] Nicanors heade, and his wycked hãde which he had presumptuously holden vp agaynst the temple of God. He caused the tunge also of that vngodly Nicanor to be cut in lytle peces, and to be cast to the foules, and the cruel mans hande to be hanged vp before the temple.

So euery man gaue thankes vnto the LORDE, sayeng: Blessed be he that hath kepte his place vndefyled.

Judi.14.a As for Nicanors heade, * he hanged it vp vpon the hyghe castell, for an euident and playne token of the helpe of God. And so they agreed all together, to kepe that daye holy: namely the.xiii.daye of the moneth Adar, which in the Syrians language is called the nexte daye before Mardocheus daye. Thus was Nicanor slayne, & from that tyme forth the Jewes hadde the cytie in possession: And here wyll I now make an ende.

[A] Ther was a man
[Gen.22.d] in the lãde of * Hus called Job: an innocẽt and vertuous man, such e one as feared God, and eschewed euell. This man had seuen sonnes, and thre doughters.
[Job.42.c] * His substaunce was seuen thousãde shepe, thre thousande camels, fyue hundreth yocke of oxen, fyue hundreth she asses, and a very great housholde: so y he was one of the moost principall mẽ amonge all them of the East contre. His sonnes now wente on euery man, and made bankettes: one daye in one house, another day in another, and sent for theyr thre systers to eate & drynke with them. So whan they had passed ouer the tyme of theyr bãkettyng rounde aboute, Job sent for them, and clensed them agayne, stode vp early, and offered for euery one a burntofferyng. For Job thoughte thus: peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, & haue ben vnthankfull to God in theyr hartes. And thus dyd Job euery daye.

[B] [Job.2.a] * Now vpon a tyme, whan y seruauntes of God came and stode before the LORDE, Sathan came also amonge them. And the LORDE sayde vnto Sathan: From whence commest thou? Sathan answered the LORDE, [1.Pet.5.b] and sayde: * I haue gone aboute the londe, and walked thorowe it.

Then sayd the LORDE vnto Sathan: hast thou not consydered my seruaunt Job, how y he is an innocent and vertuous man: such one as feareth God, and escheweth euell, and thus ther is none lyke hym in the lande? Sathan answered and sayde vnto the LORDE: Doth Job fear god for naught? hast thou not preserued him, his house and al hys substaunce on euerye syde? haste thou not blessed the workes of hys handes? Is not his possessyon encreased in the londe? But laye thyne hande vpon hym a lytle, touche once all that he hath, and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. And the LORDE sayde vnto Sathan: lo, all that he hath, be in thy power: onelye vppon hymselfe, se that thou laye not thyne hande. Then wente Sathan forth from the LORDES presence.

Now vpon a certaine daye, whan [C] hys sonnes and doughters were eatynge, and drynkynge wyne in theyre eldest brothers house, ther came a messaunger vnto Job, and sayde: Whyle the oxen were a plowynge, and the asses goynge in the pasture beside them: the Sabees came in violentelye, and toke them all awaye: yee they haue slayne the seruauntes with y swearde, and I onelye ranne my waye, to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakynge, ther came another, and sayd: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, it hath consumed, and burnte vp all the shepe and seruauntes: and I onelye ranne my waye, to tell the. In the meane season whyle he was yet speakynge, ther came another, and sayd: The Caldees made thre armyes, and fell in vpon the camels, which they haue caryed awaye yee and slayn the seruauntes wyth the [D] swearde: and I only am gotten away, to tell the. Whyle he was speakynge, ther came yet another, and sayde: Thy sonnes, and doughters were eatynge, and drynkynge wyne in theyre eldeste brothers house, and sodenly ther came a myghtye greate wynde oute of the South, and smote the.iiii. corners of the house: whiche fell vpon thy chyldren, so that they are dead: and I am gotten awaye alone, to tell the.

Then Job stode vp, and rent hys clothes, shaued hys head, fell down vpon the grounde, worshypped, & sayd:

¶ The prosperyte of Job, and howe God geueth Sathan power ouer hys bodie, and goodes, which he is content wythall.

Job.1.b IT * happened also vpon a tyme that whan the seruauntes of God came and stode before the LORDE. Sathan came also among them, and stode before hym. And the LORDE sayde vnto Sathan: 1.Pet.5.d. From whence commest thou? Sathan answered, and sayde: * I haue gone aboute the londe, and walked thorowe it.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Sathan: Haste thou not consydered my seruaunte Job, how that he is an innocente and vertuous man, such one as feareth God, and eschueth euel, and that ther is none lyke hym in the londe? But thou mouedeste me agaynst hym, to punyshe hym: yet is it in vayne: for he contynueth styll in hys godlynesse.

B Sathan answered the LORDE and sayde: Skynne for skynne: yee a man wyll geue al that euer he hath, for hys lyfe. But laye thyne hande vppon hym, touche hym once vpon the bone, and fleshe, and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. Then sayde the LORDE vnto Sathan: Lo, there haste thou hym in thy power, but spare hys lyfe.

So wente Sathan forth from ye LORDE, and smote Job with maruaylous sore byles, from the sole of the foote vnto hys crowne: so that he sat vpon the grounde in the asshes, and scraped of the etter of hys sores wyth a potsherde.

Then sayde hys wyfe vnto hym:
Tobi.2.d. * Dorste thou yet continue in thy perfectnesse? curse God, and dye. But Job sayde vnto her: Thou speakeste lyke a foolyshe woman. Seynge we haue receaued prosperyte at the hande of God, wherfore shulde we not be content wyth aduersyte also? * In all these thynges dydde not Job synne wyth hys lyppes. Job.1.d.

C Nowe whan Jobs frendes herde of all the trouble, that happened vnto hym, ther came thre of them, euerye one from hys owne place: namelye, Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Sophar the Naamathite.

For they were agreed together to come, to shewe theyr compassyon vpon hym, and to comforte hym. So whan they lifte vp theyre eyes afarre of, they knewe hym not.

Then cryed they, and wepte: then euerye one of them rente hys clothes, and sprenckled duste vpon theyre heades in the ayre. They sat them downe by hym also vpon the grounde seuen dayes, and seuen nyghtes. Nother was ther onye of them that spake one worde vnto hym, for they sawe that hys payne was verye greate.

The .iii. Chapter.

¶ The fleshe can not suffer: and here is descrybed the nature of the vnpacyente man, that grudgeth agaynste the iudgemente of God.

AFter thys opened Job hys mouth, and cursed his day and sayde: lost be that day wherein I was borne: and the nyghte, in the which it was sayde: ther is a manchylde conceaued. Jere.20.d. The same daye be turned to darknesse, & not regarded of god fro above nother be shyned vpo wt lyght: but be couered wt darknesse, & the shadowe of death. Let ye dimme cloude fal vpo it, & let it be lapped in wyth sorow. Let the darkstorme ouercome that nyghte, let it not be rekened amonge the dayes of the yeare, nor counted in the monethes Despysed be that nyghte and dyscommended: let them that curse the daye, geue it theyr curse also, euen those that be readye to rayse vp Leuiathan. Let ye starres be dimme thorow ye darknesse of it. Let it loke for lyghte, but let it se none, nother the rysynge vp of the fayre mornynge: because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me, nor hydde these sorowes fro myne eyes.

B *Alas, why dyed I not in ye byrthe? Job.10.d.
Why dyd I not perysshe, as soone as I cam out of my mothers wombe? Why set they me vpon theyr knees? Why gaue they me sucke with theyr brestes?
Then shulde I nowe haue lyen styll, I shulde haue slepte, and ben at reste:

And now commeth suche myserye vp=

Then stode ther one before me, ternesse.

Yf men will speake of strength, he is the strongest of al: yf mē will speake of righteousnesse, who darre be my recorder? yf I wyll iustifie my selfe, myne owne mouth shall condemne me: yf I wil put forth my self for a perfecte mā he shal proue me a wycked doer: For yͤ I shuld be an innocent, my conscience knoweth it not, yet I my self am wee-ry of my lyfe.

C This one thynge wyll I say: * He Eccle.9.a destroyeth both the righteous and vngodly. And though he slay sodēly wyth the scourge, yet laugheth he at yͤ punish mēt of the innocent. As for the worlde he geueth it ouer in to the power of the wicked, such as the rulers be, wherof al londes are full. Is it not so? where is ther ony, but he is suche one?

D * My dayes haue ben more swifte, Job.7.a then a runner: they are gone sodenley, and haue sene no good thing. They are passed awaye as the shippes that be good vnder sayle, & as the Aegle that hasteth to the praye. Whā I am pur-posed to forget my complaynynges to chaunge my countenaunce, and to cō-forte my selfe: then am I afrayed of al my workes, for I know, thou fauou-rest not an euel doer. Yf I be thē a wic ked one, why haue I laboured in vayne? Though I washed my selfe with snow water, & made myne handes neuer so cleane, yet shuldest thou dippe me in yͤ myre, & myne owne clothes shulde defyle me. For he yͭ I muste ge-ue answer vnto, & with whō I go to lawe is not a mā as I am: Nother is ther ony dayes mā to reproue both the partes, or to lay his hāde betwixte vs.
Let him take his rod away fro me, yet let hym make me no more afrayed of hym, and then shall I answere hym without ony feare. For as longe as I am in suche fearfulnesse, I can make no answere. And why? it greueth my soule to lyue.

The .x. Chapter.

¶ No man is without synne / nother may ony man escape the hande of God

A Neuerthelesse, nowe wyll I put forth my wordes: I will speake out of the very heuy nesse of my soule, and wyll saye vnto God: O do not condemne me, but shewe me the cause, wherfore thou iudgest me on this maner. Thynkest thou it well done to op-presse me, to cast me of (beyng a worke of thy handes) and to mayntayne yͤ coū sell of the vngodly? Hast thou fleshlye eyes then, or doest thou loke as man lo keth? Are thy dayes as the dayes of mā and thy yeares as mās yeares? yͭ thou makest such inquisicyō for my wycked nesse, and searchest out my synne: wher as (notwithstandynge) thou knowest that I am no wycked person, and that ther is no man able to delyuer me out of thyne hande. * Thy handes haue Gene.1.d. made me, and fashioned me altogether Psa.118.f rounde aboute, wylt thou then destroy me sodenly? O remembre (I beseke the) how that thou madest me of yͤ moulde of the earth, & shalt brynge me to earth agayne.

Hast yͧ not mylked me, as it were B mylke: and turned me to cruddes lyke chese? Thou hast couered me wͭ skinne & flesh, & ioyned me together with bones, and synowes. Thou hast grāūted me lyfe, and done me good: and the dili gent hede that thou tokest vpon me, hath preserued my spzete.

Though thou hydest these thynges in thyne harte, yet am I sure, that thou remembrest them all. Wherfore dyd-dest thou kepe me, whan I synned, and hast not clensed me fro myne offence?
Yf I do wyckedly, wo is me therfore: Yf I be ryghteous, yet dare I not lyft vp my heade: so full am I of confusion and se myne owne mysery.

Thou huntest me out (beynge in he C uynesse) as it were a Lyō, and troublest me out of measure. Thou bryngest freshe wytnesse agaynst me, thy wrath increasest thou vpō me, very many are the plages, that I am in. * Wherfore Job.3.b hast yͧ brought me out of my mothers Iere.20.d. wombe? O that I had perished, & that no eye had sene me. Yf they had caryed me to my graue, as soone as I was borne, then shuld I be now, as though I had neuer bene.

Shall not my shorte lyfe come soone to an ende? O holde the fro me, let me alone, that I may ease my selfe a lytle afore I go thyther, from whence I shall not turne agayne: Namely, to that lande of darknesse and shadowe of death: yee in to that darck clowdye lande and deadly shadowe, where as is no ordre, but terrible feare as in the darcknesse.

The.xi. Chapter.

Sophar reproueth Job of synne: & for so much as no man may withstōde God, he byddeth hym be pacyent.

A Then answered Sophar y Naamathite, and sayde:
Shulde not he y maketh many wordes, be answerede? Shulde he that babbleth much, be commended therin?
Shulde men geue eare vnto the only?
Thou wylt laugh other men to scorne and shall no body mocke the agayne?
Wylt thou say vnto God: The thyng that I take in hande, is perfecte, and I am clene in thy syght? O that God wolde speake, and open his lippes a-gaynst the, that he myght shew the (out of his secret wysedom) how manyfold his lawe is: then shuldest thou knowe, that God had forgotten the, because of thy synnes.

Wylt thou fynde out God with thy sekynge? wylt thou attayne to the perfectnesse of the Almyghtye? He is hyer then heauen, what wylt thou do?
Deper then hell, how wylt thou then knowe hym? His length exceadeth the length of the earth, and his bredth the bredth of the see. Though he turne al thynges vpsyde downe, close them in, or thrust thē together, who dare checke hym therfore?

B *For it is he, that knoweth the va thou haddest now a ryght harte & lyftedest vp thyne handes towarde hym: yf thou woldest put awaye the wycked nesse, which thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlynesse dwelt in thy house: Then myghtest thou lyfte vp thy face without shame, then shuldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.

Then shuldest thou forget thy my-sery, and thynke nomore vpon it, then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shulde thy lyfe be as cleare as y noone daye, & sprynge forth as the mornynge Then myghtest thou haue comforte, in the hope that thou hast: and slepe quiet ly, whan thou art buryed. Then shuldest thou take thy rest, and no man to make the afrayed: yee many one shulde set much by the. As for the eyes of the vngodly, they shalbe cōsumed, and not escape: theyr hope shalbe misery and so rowe of mynde.

The.xii. Chapter.

All thynges come of the myghty ordinaunce of God. The wycked haue ¶ Job speaketh as he thynketh, repro Wyll ye make answere for God with Wyll ye accepte the personne of God,

Thynke ye to begyle hym, as a man is youre remēbraunce shalbe lyke ÿ dust, my sayenges with your eares. Behold, though sentence were geuen vpon me, I am sure to be knowen for vngylty.

dest thou thy face, and holdest me for Thynkest thou it now well done to open thyne eyes vpon such one, and to brynge me before the in iudgement?

Who can make it cleane, that cōmeth of an vncleane thynge? No body. The

The.xv.Chapter.

No man is innocent before God.
The conuersacyon of the vngodly.

A Then answered Elyphas ÿ Themanyte, & sayd: shulde a wyse man geue suche an answere (as it were one ÿ spake in the wynde) and fyl his stomacke with anger? Thou repro uest with wordes that are nothynge worth: and speakest the thynge, which can do no good. As for shame, ÿ haste set it asyde, els woldest thou not make so many wordes before God: but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a crafty tunge.
Thyne owne mouth condemneth the,
and not I: yee thyne own lyppes shape the an answere. Art thou the fyrst mã, that euer was borne? Or wast thou made before the hylles: hast thou herde the secrete counsell of God, that al wys dom is to lytle for the? What knowest thou, that we know not? What vnder standest thou, but we can the same?
With vs ar old & aged mẽ, yee such as haue lyued longer thẽ thy forefathers.

Doest thou nomore regard the cõ A forte of God? but thy wycked wordes wyll not suffre the. Why doth thyne hart make the so proude? Why stõdest thou so greatly in thyne owne cõ ceate? Where vnto loke thyne eyes, ÿ thy mynde is so puft vp agaynst God, and lettest suche wordes go out of thy mouth? What is a man, that he shulde be cleane? What hath he (whiche is borne of a woman) wherby he myghte be knowen to be ryghteous? * Behold Job.4.d he hath founde vnfaythfulnesse amõge 2.Pet.2.a his owne sayntes: yee the very heauẽs are vncleane in his syght. How muche more then an abhominable & vyle man which drynketh wyckednesse lyke water? I wil tel the, heare me: I wyl shew the a thynge that I know: which wyse men haue tolde, and hath not bene hyd from theyr fathers: vnto whom only the lande was geuen, that no straunger shulde come amonge them.

* The vngodly despayreth all the C dayes of his lyfe, and the nombre of ÿ Gen.4.b tyrauntes yeares is vnknowen. A fear full sounde is euer in his eares, & whan it is peace, yet feareth he ÿ destruccyõ: He beleueth neuer to be delyuered out of darcknesse, the swearde is alway be fore his eyes. Whan he goeth forth to get his lyuynge, he thynketh playnly, ÿ the daye of darcknesse is at hande. So rowe and carefulnesse make hym afrai ed, and compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge with his hoost ready to the battayll. For he hath stret ched out his hande agaynste God, and armed hymselfe agaynst the Almygh-tye. He runneth proudly vpon hym: and with a styfe necke fyghteth he agaynst hym: where as he coureth his face & fatnesse, and maketh his body well lykynge. Therfore shall his dwellyng be in desolate cyties, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, but are become hea pes of stones.

He shall not be ryche, nother shall D his substaunce continue, nor increase vpon earth. He shall neuer come out of darcknesse the flame shall drye vp his braunches, with the blast of ÿ mouthe of God shall he be taken awaye. He wyll nother applye hymselfe to fayth-fulnesse nor trueth, so sore is he decea-yed with vanyte.

C He shall perysshe afore his tyme be worne out, and his hande shall not be grene. He shalbe pluckte of as an vnty mely grape from the vyne, and shall let his floure fall, as the olyue doth. For the congregacyon of ypocrites is vn-frutefull, and the fyre shal consume the houses of such as are gredy to receaue geth forth deceate.

The.xvi.Chapter.

The conuersacyon of the vngodly.

A IOb answered, and sayd: I haue oftymes herde suche thynges. Miserable geuers of comforte are ye all the sort of you. Shall not thy vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or hast thou yet ony more to say? I could speake as ye do also. But wolde God, that youre soule were in my soules steade: then shulde I heape vp wordes agaynst you, & shake my heade at you.
I shuld comforte you with my mouth, and release your payne with ye talkyng of my lyppes. But what shall I do?
For all my wordes, my sorow wyl not yet wyl it not departe fro me. And now that I am full of payne, and all that I haue destroyed, (wherof my wrynckles

God hath geuen me ouer to the vngod the wycked. I was somtime in wealth, but sodeynly hath he broughte me to nought. He hath taken me by ye necke, he hath rente me, and set me, as it were a marke for hym to shute at. He hath compassed me rounde aboute with his dartes, he hath wounded my loynes, & not spared. My bowels hath he pow-red vpon the grounde. He hath geuē me one wounde vpon another, & is fallen vpon me lyke a giaunt. I haue sowed a sackcloth vpō my skynne, & lye with my strength in the duste.

My face is swollē with wepyng, C and myne eyes are waxen dymme. How be it ther is no wyckednesse in my han des, and my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not my bloude, and let my cryeng fynde no rowme. For lo, my wytnesse is in heauen, and he that knoweth me is aboue in the heyght. My frendes laugh me to scorne, but myne eye pou-of my yeares are come, and I muste go

The.xvii.Chapter.

¶ Iob declareth his mysery.

MY breth fayleth, my dayes A ceaued no man, yet muste myne eye contynue in heuy who shall then be able to thrust my hā-theyr hartes from vnderstandyng, ther fore shall they not be set vp on hye. He promyseth his frēdes parte of his good but his owne chyldren spende it. He made me as it were a byworde of ye co mune people, I am his gestynge stocke my body are become lyke a shadowe.

Vertuous men therfore shall well consyder this, and the innocent shall take parte agaynst the ypocrite.
The ryghteous wyl kepe his way, B and he that hathe cleane handes, wyl euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence, for I can not se one wise mā amonge you.
My dayes are past, my thoughtes are myne harte, chaungynge the nyghte in Though I tarye neuer so much, yet ye graue is my house, & I must make my mother and my syster. What helpeth then my longe taryenge? Or who wyll that I haue, shal go downe in to ye pyt, and lye with me in the dust.

The.xviii.Chapter.

Baldad reproueth Job as vngodly, & sheweth ye punyshment of the wycked.

A Then answered Baldad the Suhite, & sayde: Whan wyll ye make an ende of youre wordes? Mark wel & cōsydre, we wyl speake also. Wherfore are we couted as beastes, and reputed so vyle in youre syght? Why destroyeste thou theselfe wyth anger? Shall the earth be forsaken, or the stones remoued oute of theyr place because of the? Shall not the lyght of the vngodly be put out? yee the flame of hys fyre shall not burne. The lyghte shall be darke in hys dwellynge, & hys candle shal be put out wyth hym. Hys presumptuous goynges shall be kepte in, and hys owne coūsell shall cast hym down. For hys fete shall be taken in ye net, and he shall walke in the snare. Hys foote shalbe holden in the trappe, and the thyrstye shall catch hym. The snare is layed for hym in the grounde, and a pytfall in the waye.

B Fearfulnesse shall make hym afrayed on euery syde, ye he shall not knowe where to get out. Honger shall be hys substaunce, and myssfortune shall hang vpō hym He shall eate hys own skyn, yee hys owne armes shall he deuoure, beynge a fyrstborne of death. All hys conforte and hope shalbe routed out of hys dwellynge, very fearfulnesse shall brynge hym to the kynge. Other men shall dwell in hys house (which nowe is none of hys,) and brymstone shalbe scatterd vpon hys habitaciō. Hys rootes shalbe dryed vp beneth, and aboue shall hys haruest be cut downe. Hys remēbraūce shall perysh from the earth, and hys name shall not be praysed in the stretes. He shalbe dryuen from the lyght into darknesse, and cast clene out of the worlde. He shall nother haue chylderen nor kynsfolkes amonge hys people, no nor ony posterite in hys contry: yonge and olde shalbe astonyed at hys death. Such are nowe the dwellynges of the wycked, and thys is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

The.xix.Chapter.

Job sheweth hys myserable estate and reproueth hys frēdes, in that they increase hys payne.

The.xix.Chapter.

Job answered, and sayde: How longe wyl ye vexe my soule, and trouble me with wordes? Lo, ten tymes haue ye reproued me: are ye not ashamed, for to laugh me so to scorne? yf I go wronge, I go wrōge to my selfe. But yf ye wyll enhaunce your selues agaynst me, and accuse me to be a wycked personne, because of the same that is come vpō me: know this then, that it is God which hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me aboute with his scourges. *Beholde, though I crye, yet violence is done vnto me. I can not be herd: Though I complayne ther is none to geue sentence with me. He hath hedged vp my path, I can not get away, he hath set darcknesse in my gate.

B *He hath spoyled me of myne honoure, and taken the crowne away fro my head. He hath destroyed me on euery syde, and I am vndone: My hope hath he taken away fro me, as it were a tre plucte vp by the rote. His wrath is kyndled agaynst me, he taketh me, as though I were his enemye.

His men of warre came together, which made theyr waye ouer me, & beseged my dwellynge rounde aboute. *He hath put my brethren farre away fro me, and suche as were of myne acquayntaunce are become straungers vnto me. Myne owne kynsfolkes haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembraunce. The seruauntes and maydens of myne owne house take me for a straunger, and I am become as an aleaunt in theyr syght.

C When I call vpon my seruaunt, he geueth me no answere: no thoughe I praye hym w my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my breth. I am fayne to speake fayre vnto the chyldre of myne owne body. Yee the very desperte fooles despyse me, and whē I am gone from them, they speake euel vpon me. All such as were my moost famylyars, abhorre me: and they whom I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, & the flesh is awaye, only ther is left me ye skynne aboute my teth. Haue pyte vpon me, haue pyte vpon (o ye my frendes) for ye hande of the LORDE hath touched me. Seynge God persecuteth me, wyll ye vexe me also? Haue ye not yet ynough of the trouble of my fleshe Punishment of the proude, vngod-ly and ypocrites.

a Than answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde:
For the same cause do my thoughtes compel me to an swer. And why? my mynde is tossed here and there: I haue suffici ently herde the checkynge and reprofe, therfore ame I purposed to make answer after myn vnderstãdynge. Know este thou not thys, namely: that from the begynnynge (euer sence the creaciõ of man vpon earth) the prayse of the vngodly hath ben shorte, and that the ioye of ypocrites cõtynued but ye twink lynge of an eye? Though he be mag-nifyed vp to heauen, so that hys heade reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet he perysheth at ye last lyke donge. Insomuch that they which haue sene hym saye: Where is he? He vanisheth as a dreame, so that he can nomore be foũd: and passeth awaye as a vision in the nyght. So that the eye whiche sawe hym before, getteth nowe no syghte of hym, and hys place knoweth hym no-more. Hys chylderen go abeggynge, theyr handes brynge them to sorowe and heuynesse.
b From hys youth vp are hys bones full of vyce, which shal lye down with hym in the earth. Whan wyckednesse is swete in hys mouth, he hydeth it vnder hys tunge. That he fauoureth, that wyll he not forsake, but kepeth it close in hys throte. The meate that he eateth, shalbe turned to the poyson of serpentes wythin hys body. The ryches that he deuoureth, shal he perbreake agayne, for God shall drawe them out of his bely. The serpentes heade shall sucke hym, and the adders tunge shall slaye hym: so that he shall nomore se ye ryuers and brokes of hony and butter: But laboure shall he, and yet haue no-thynge to eate. Great trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shal not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped thẽ: houses hath he spoyled, and not buylded them. His bely could neuer be fylled, therfore shal he perysshe in his couetousnesse. He de- c uoured so gredily, that he lefte nothyng behynde, therfore his goodes shall not prospere. * Though he had plenteous- Eccle.5.b nesse of euery thyng, yet was he poore, and therfore he is but a wretche on e-uery syde.
For though the wycked haue neuer so much to fyll his bely, yet God shall sende his wrath vpon hym, and cause his battayl to raygne ouer hym: so that yf he flye the yron weapens, he shall be shot with the stele bowe. The arowe shalbe takẽ forth, & go out at his backe and a glysterynge swearde thorow his gall: feare shall come vpon hym.
Ther shal no darcknes be able to hyde hym. An vnkyndled fyre shall consume hym, and loke what remayneth in his house, it shalbe destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wyckednesse, and the earth shall take parte agaynst hym.
The substaũce ye he hath in his house shalbe taken awaye and perysshe in the daye of the LORDES wrath. Job.27.d ked shall haue of God, and the heretage that he may loke for of ye LORD

The.xxi.Chapter.

Wycked mẽ haue prosperite in this worlde. God punysheth accordynge to A Nd Job answered, & sayd: a O heare my wordes and a-

Which yf it were so, shulde not my

The.xxiii. Chapter.

C Job defendeth hys innocencye.

A Job answered and sayde: My sayenge is yet thys daye in bitternesse, and my hande heuye amonge my gronynges. O that I myghte se hym and fynde hym: O that I mighte come before hys seate, to pleate my cau se before hym, and to fyll my mouthe wyth argumentes. That I myghte knowe, what answer he wolde geue me: and that I myghte vnderstonde, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyll he pleate agaynste me wyth hys power and strenghte? or wyll he leane hym selfe vtterlye vpon me? Oh no, let him not do so wyth me: But let hym geue me lyke power to go to lawe, then am I sure to wynne my matter. For though I go before, I fynde hym not: yf I come behynd, I can get no know lege of hym. Yf I go on the leftsyde to pondre hys workes, I can not attayne vnto them. Agayne, yf I go on the ryghtsyde, he hydeth hymself, that I can not se hym. But as for my waye, he knoweth it, * and tryeth me as the Sap.3.a. golde in the fyre. 1.Pet.1.b B Neuerthelesse my fete kepe hys path, hys hyghe strete haue I holden, and not gone oute of it. I haue not for saken the commaundementes of hys lyppes, but loke what he charged me wyth hys mouthe, that haue I shutte vp in my hart. It is he hymselfe alone, who wyll turne hym backe? He dothe as hym lysteth, and bryngeth to passe what he wyll. He rewardeth me in to my bosome, and manye other thynges mo doth he, as he maye by hys power.
Thys is the cause, that I shrenke at hys presence, so that whan I consydre hym, I ame afrayed of hym. For in so muche as he is God, he maketh my harte soft: and seynge that he is Al-myghtye, he putteth me in feare.
Thus can not I get oute of darcke-Tushe, ther shall no man se me, and so he dysgyseth hys face. In the nyghte hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but wyll not knowe the lyghte. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the sha-and they go in horrible darknesse. The vngodlye is verye swyfte: O that hys suffereth not the shypman to beholde

O that they (for ye wyckednesse which make them that they can not beare, and vnto widdowes they do no good. They plucke downe the myghtye with theyr power, and whan they them selues are gotten vp, they are neuer wythoute feare, as long as they lyue. And though they myghte be safe, yet they wyll not receaue it, for theyre eyes loke vpon theyr owne wayes. They are exalted for a lytle, but shortelye are they gone, broughte to extreme pouerte, and take oute of the waye: yee and vtterly pluckt of as the eares of corne. Is it not so?

Who wyll then reproue me as a lyar, and saye that my wordes are nothyng

The prosperyte that Job was in afore hys innocencye and good dedes.

A SO Job proceded, and wente as I was in the monethes that are paste, and in the dayes whan God preserued me: whan hys light shyned vpon my heade: whan I wente after the same lyghte and shyne, euen thorowe the darknesse.

As it stode with me, whan I was wel folkes stode aboute me, whan my wa-yes ranne ouer with butter, and whan the stonye rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: whan I wente thorowe the cytye vnto the gate, and whan they set me a chayre in the strete: whan the yonge men (as soone as they sawe me) hydde themselues, and whan the aged arose and stode vp before me: whan the prin ces lefte of theyre talkynge, and layed B theyr hande to theyr mouthe: whan the myghtye kepte styll theyr voyce, and whan theyre tunges cleued to the rofe of theyr mouthes. Whan all they that herde me, called me happye: and whan al they that saw me, wyshed me good.

For I delyuered the poore whan he cryed, and the fatherlesse that wanted helpe. He that shulde haue bene loste, gaue me a good word, and the wydow es harte prayse me. And why? I put vpon me ryghteousnesse, whiche coue-red me as a garment, & equite was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blynde and a foot to the lame. I was a father vnto the poore, and whan I knew not

Therfore I thoughte verely, that C I shulde haue dyed in my neste: and that my dayes shulde haue bene as ma nye as the sonde of the see. For my rote was spred oute by the watersyde, and the dewe laye vpon my corne.
Myne honoure encreased more and more, & my bow was euer the stronger in my hande. Unto me men gaue eare, me they regarded, and wyth sylence they taryed for my counsell. Yf I had spoken, they wolde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well taken amonge them. They waited for me, as the earthe doth for the rayne: and gaped vpon me, as the grounde doth to receaue the latter shower. Whan I laughed, they knewe well it was not earneste: & thys testimonye of my coun

Whan I regarded vnto theyre waye, I was the chefe, and sat as a kynge

Here do ende the wordes of Job.

The.xxxii. Chapter.

Jobs frendes are angrye, and forsake hym.

SO these thre men wolde A stryue nomore wyth Job, because he helde hymselfe a ryghteous man. But E-liu the sonne of Barachell the * Bussite of the kynred of Ram, Gen.22.d was verye sore displeased at Job, that he called hymselfe iuste before God.
And wyth Jobs thre frendes he was angrye also, because they hadde found no reasonable answere to ouercome hym. Nowe taryed Eliu tyll they had ended theyr communicacion with Job.
For why? they were elder than he. So whan Eliu the sonne of Barachel the Bussite saw, that these thre men were not able to make Job an answere, he was myscontente: so that he gaue an swere hymselfe, and sayde: *Consyde rynge that I am yonge, and ye be men of age, I was afrayed, and durste not B shewe forth my mynde, for I thoughte thus wythin my self: It becommeth ther doth euerye aged man vnderstond wyll I speake also (so farre as I may be herde) and wyll shewe you myne opinion. For whan I hadde wayted tyl ye made an ende of youre talkyng, and herde youre wysdome, what argumen tes ye made in youre communicacyon: yee whan I hadde dyligentlye pondred what ye sayde, I found not one of you that made onye good argumente a-make answere vnto hys wordes: leste ye shulde prayse youre selues, to haue founde oute wysdome: because it is God that hath caste hym oute, and no C man. Neuerthelesse, seyng he hath not spoken vnto me, therfore wyll I not answere hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answere nor speake one worde) but in so muche as ye wyll not speake stondynge styll lyke domme men, and makynge no answere: I haue a good hope for my parte to shape hym an an-

For I am full of wordes, and y sprete that is wythyn me, compelleth me. Be holde, I am as the newe wyne whiche hath no vente, and bursteth the newe vessels in sunder. Therfore wyll I speake, that I maye haue vente: I wil open my lyppes, and make answere. I wyll regard no maner of personne: no, Gala.1.b. no man wyll I spare. * For yf I wold go aboute to please men, I knowe not howe soone my maker wolde take me

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

God punysheth for synne, yet hea-A reth he a meke prayer.

Wherfore, heare my wordes speake oute of my chawes. My harte shall ordre my wordes a ryghte, & my lyppes shall talke of pure wysedome.

The sprete of God hath made me, and Gene.2.b * the breth of the Almyghtye hath geuen me my lyfe. Yf thou canste, then answere me: prepare thyselfe to stonde before me face to face. Beholde, before God am I euen as thou, for I am fashioned and made euen of the same moulde. Therfore thou nedeste not be afrayed of me, nother nedes thou to feare, that my authoryte shall be to he-uye for the. Nowe haste thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herde the voyce of thy wordes: * I ame clene Job.16.c wythoute onye faulte, I ame inno-cente, and ther is no wyckednesse in me. But lo, he hath pyked a quarell a-gaynste me, and taketh me for hys enemye * he hath put my foote in the sto- Job.13.c kes, and loked narowlye vnto all my pathes. Beholde, vnto these vnreasonable wordes of thyne wyll I make an swere.
Shulde God be reproued of man? B Why doeste thou then striue agaynste hym, because he geueth the no accom-ptes of all hys doynges? For whan God dothe once commaunde a thynge, ther shuld no man be curious, to search whether it be ryghte. * In dreames Gene.20.a and vysyons of the nyght season (whan 28.c.31.b slombrynge commeth vpon men, that Dan.2.a he rowneth them in the eares, he infourmeth them, and sheweth them pla nely, that it is he, which wythdraweth pryde, kepeth hys soule from destruccy on, and hys lyfe from the swearde, he chasteneth hym wyth syknesse, & bryn-geth hym to hys bedde: he layeth sore punyshemente vpon his bones, so that hys lyfe maye awaye wyth no bread, and hys soule abhorreth to eate onye deyntye meate: In so muche, that hys bodye is clene consumed awaye, & hys C bones appeare nomore. Hys soule draweth on to destruccyon, and his lyfe to death. Nowe yf ther be an angell (one amonge a thousande) sente for to speake vnto man, and to shewe hym the ryghte waye: then is God mercyfull vnto hym, and sayeth: He shall be delyuered, that he fall not downe to de struccyon, for I am sufficyentlye recon cyled. Than hys fleshe (whiche hath bene in myserye and trouble) shalbe, as it was in hys youth. For yf he submitte hymselfe vnto God he is gracyous, and sheweth hym hys countenaun ce ioyfullye, and rewardeth man for hys ryghteousnesse. Suche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therfore let a man confesse, and saye: I offended, but he hath chastened and refourmed me : I dydde unryghteouslye , neuerthelesse he hath not recompensed me therafter Yet he hath delyuered my soule from destruccyon , and my lyfe, that it seyth the lyghte. Lo , thus worketh God al-waye wyth man , that he kepeth hys soule from peryshinge, and letteth him enioye the lyght of the lyuyng. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the styll, untyll I haue spoke. But yf thou haste ony thyng to saye, then answere me & speake : for thy answere pleaseth me. Yf thou haste nothynge, then hear me , and holde thy tunge , so shall I teache the wysedome.

pretendest to be: ther is a great crye and complaynt made by thē ẏ are oppressed with violence, yee euery man complayneth vpon the cruel army of tyraū B tes. For such one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? & that shyneth vpon vs, that we myght prayse hym in ẏ nyght? which geueth vs more vnderstandynge then he doth the beastes of ẏ earth, and teacheth vs more then ẏ fou les of heauen.

Yf ony such cōplaine, no mā geueth answere, & that because of ẏ wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But yf a mā call vpon God, doth not he heare him?
Doth not ẏ almyghty accepte his crye?
Whan thou speakest then, shulde not he pardon the, yf thou open thy selfe be fore hym, and put thy trust in hym?
Then vseth he no violēce in his wrath, nother hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisicyons. Therfore hath Job opened his mouth but in vayne, and fo lyshly hath he made so many wordes.

The.xxxvi. Chapter.

¶ An argumēt that god punysheth no man excepte he haue deserued it.

A Eliu proceded forth in his talkynge, and sayd: holde ẏ styll a lytle, & I shal shewe the: what I haue yet to spe ake on Gods behalfe. I wyll open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstandynge, and proue my maker righteous. Trewe are my wordes, and no lye: and the knowlege wherwithall I argue agaynst the, is perfecte. Be-holde God casteth not awaye the mygh tye, for he hymselfe is myghty in power and wysedome.

As for the vngodly, he preserueth them not, but helpeth ẏ poore to theyr ryght. * He turneth not his eyes away Psal.31.b. from the ryghteous: ‡ He setteth vp ‡ 2.Re.7.c kynges in theyr trone, and confirmeth 4.Re.10.c them, so that they alwaye syt therin. 2 Pa.33.c But yf they be layed in preson & chay-nes, or bounde with the bondes of pouerte: then sheweth he them theyr wor-kes and dedes, and ẏ synnes wherwith they haue vsed cruell violence.

He with punishyng and nurturyng B of thē, rowneth thē in ẏ eares, warneth thē to leaue of frō theyr wickednesse, & to amende. * Yf they nowe wyll take Esay.1.c. hede and be obedient, they shall weare out theyr dayes in prosperite, and their yeares in pleasure and ioy. But yf they wyll not obeye, they shall go thorowe ẏ swearde, and perysshe or euer they be aware. As for suche as be fayned dissem blers & ypocrites, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon hym, though they be his presoners.
Thus theyr soule perysheth in foolysh nes, and theyr lyfe with ẏ condemned.
The poore delyuereth he out of his straytnesse, and cōforteth such as be in necessite and trouble. Euen so shall he kepe the (yf thou wylt be content) from the botomlesse pitte that is beneth: and yf thou wylte holde the quyet, he shall fyll thy table with plenteousnes.

Neuerthelesse thou hast condempned the iudgement of the vngodly, yee euen such a iudgement & sentence shalt thou suffre. For thē shall not thy cause be styled with crueltye, nor pacyfyed with many gyftes. Hath God ordeyned them, that the glorious lyfe of the, & all such myghty men shulde not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyll ther come a nyghte for the, to set other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not asyde to wyckednesse and synne, whiche hetherto thou hast chosen more then mekenesse. Be-holde, God is of a myghty hye power?
Wher is ther such a gyde & law geuer as he? who wyll reproue hym of his wayes? who wyl say vnto hym: Thou hast done wronge.

O consyder how great and excellēt his workes be, whom all men cōmende and prayse: yet they wondre at hym, & yet they se hym but afarre of. Beholde so great is god, ẏ he passeth our know lege, nother are we able to come to the Deut.11.c and.28.b experience of his yeares. * He turneth the water to small droppes, he dryueth his cloudes together for to rayne, so ẏ they poure down, and droppe vpō me.

He can sprede out the cloudes (a coue-rynge of his tabernacle) and cause his lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the botom of the see. By these thynges gouerneth he his people, and geueth them abūdaunce of meate, in the turnynge of a hande he hydeth the lyghte, and at his commaundement it cometh againe. The rysyng vp therof sheweth hereto his frendes and to the cattell.

The.xxxvii. Chapter.

¶ The power of God is here descry-bed. Job is reproued.

A At this my harte is aston-nyed, and moued out of his place. Heare then the sou̅de of his voyce, and the noyse ẏ goeth out at his mouth.
He gouerneth euery thyng vnder ẏ hea uen, & his lyght reacheth vnto ẏ ende of ẏ world. A roaryng voyce foloweth hym: for his glorious maiestye geueth such a thondre clap, that (though a mā heare it) yet maye he not perceaue it afterwarde. It geueth an horrible sou̅de whan God sēdeth out his voyce: great thynges doth he, which we can not cō-Psal.148.b. prehende. * Whan he commaundeth ẏ snow, it falleth vpon ẏ earth: As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, imme-diatly the shoures haue theyr strength and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpō euery mā, that they myght know theyr owne workes. The beastes crepe in to theyr dennes, and take theyr rest. Oute of the south commeth the tempest, and colde out of the north.
At the breth of God, the frost com B meth, and the waters are shed abrode.
The cloudes do theyr laboure in ge-uynge moystnesse, the cloudes poure downe theyr rayne. He distributeth also on euery syde, accordynge as it plea-seth hym to deale out his workes, that they maye do what so euer he commau̅ deth them, thorowe the whole worlde: whether it be to punysshe ony londe, or to do good vnto them that seke hym.
Herken vnto this (O Job) stonde styll, and consyder the wōderous wor-kes of God. Art thou of counsell with God, whan he doth these thynges?
Whā he causeth ẏ lyght to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsel whan he spredeth out the cloudes?
Hast thou the perfect knowlege of his wonders? & how ẏ cloudes are warme whan the lande is styll thorow ẏ south winde? Hast thou helped hym to spred out the heauen, which is to loke vpon as it were cast of cleare metall? Teach vs, what shall we saye vnto hym, for C we are vnmete because of darknesse.
Shall it be tolde hym what I saye?
Shulde a man speake, or shuld he kepe it backe? For euery man seyth not the lyght, that he kepeth cleare in the cloudes, which he clenseth whā he maketh the wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of the north, but the prayse and ho-noure of Gods feare cōmeth frō God hymselfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghty: for in power, equite and ryghteousnesse he is hygher then can be expressed. Seynge then that eue-ry body feareth hym? Why shulde not all wyse men also stonde in feare of hym?

The.xxxviii. Chapter.

¶ The forknowlege and wysedome of God.

Then spake the LORDE A vnto Job out of ẏ storme, and said: What is he, that shideth his mynde with foo lysshe wordes? * Gyrde vp Job.40.a thy loynes lyke a man, for I wyl question with the, se thou geue me a directe answer. Where wast thou whan I

Who hath measured it, knowest thou?
Or who hath spred the lyne vpon it?
* Where vpon stande the pilers of it? Psa.23.a Or who layed the corner stone? where wast thou whan the mornynge starres

B Hast thou geuen the mornynge his charge (as soone as thou wast borne) and shewed the dayspryng his place yt it might take holde of the corners of the earth, and that the vngodly myght be shaken out? Theyr tokens and weapens haste thou turned lyke clay, and set them vp agayne as the chaungynge of a garmet.
Yee thou hast spoyled the vngodlye of theyr lyght, and broken the arme of the proude. Camest thou euer in to the groud of the see? Or hast thou walked in the lowe corners of the depe? Haue the gates of death ben opened vnto ye, or hast thou sene ye dore of euerlastyng how brode the earth is? Now yf thou haste knowlege of all, then shewe me where lyght dwelleth, and where dark to theyr quarters, yf thou canst tell the waye to theyr houses. Knewest thou (whan thou wast borne) how old thou

The.xxxix.Chapter.

The forknowlege and wysdome of God.

Knowest thou ye tyme whã A the wylde goates brynge forth theyr yonge amonge the stony rockes? Or layest thou wayte whan the hyn-des vse to fawne? Rekenest thou the moneths after they engedre, that thou knowest ye tyme of theyr bearyng? Or whan they lye downe, whan they caste theyr yongeones, and whan they are delyuered of theyr trauayle and payne?
How theyr yongeones growe vp and waxe great thorow good fedyng? how they go forth and come agayne? Who letteth the wylde asse go free? Or who lowseth the bondes of the Mule? Unto whom I haue geuẽ the wyldernesse to be theyr house, and the vntylled lãde to be theyr dwellynge place, that they may geue no force for the multitude of people in the cyties, nother to regarde the cryenge of the dryuer: but to seke theyr pasture aboute the mountaynes, and to folowe vpon the grene grasse. B Wyll the vnicorne be so tame as to do seruice, or to abyde styll by the crybbe?
Canst thou bynde the yock about hym in thy forowes, to make hym plowe af ter the in ye valleys? Mayste thou trust hym (because he is stronge) or commyt thy laboure vnto hym? mayst thou beleue hym, that he wyll brynge home thy corne, or to carye ony thynge vnto thy barne? The Estrich (whose fethers are fayrer then the wynges of the sparowhauke) whan he hath layed his eg-ges vpon the grounde, he bredeth them in the dust, and forgetteth them: so that they myght be troden with fete, or broken with some wylde beast.
So harde is he vnto his yongones as though they were not his, & laboureth in vayne without ony feare. And that because God hath taken wysdom from hym, and hath not geuen hym vnderstãdynge. Whã his tyme is, he fly eth vp on hye, & careth nother for horse nor man.

C Hast ẏ geuẽ the horse his strength, or learned him to bow down his necke with feare, that he letteth hymselfe be dryuen forth lyke a greshopper, where as the stoute neyeng that he maketh is fearfull? He breaketh the groũde with the hoffes of his fete chrarfully in his strength, and rũneth to mete the har nest men. He layeth asyde all feare, his stomacke is not abated, nother starteth he abacke for ony swearde. Though ẏ quyuers ratle vpon hym, though the swearde and shylde glyster: yet rusheth he in fearsly, & beateth vpon ẏ groũde.
He feareth not the noyse of the trõpettes, but as soone as he heareth ẏ shawmes blowe, tushe (sayeth he) for he smel leth the battayll afarre of, the noyse of the captaynes and the shoutynge.
Commeth thorow thy wysedome, D that the goshawke flyeth towarde the south? Doth the Egle mounte vp and make his nest on hye at thy commaun-dement? He abydeth in the stony roc-kes, and vpon the hye toppes of harde mountaynes, where no man can come.
From thence may he beholde his pray, and loke farre aboute with his eyes.
His yongeones are fedde with bloude, Mat.24.c *and where ony dead body lyeth there Moreouer God spake vnto Iob, and sayd: Can he that stryueth with ẏ almyghtye, be at rest? Shulde not he which disputeth with God, geue hym an answere? Iob answered the LOR DE, sayenge: Beholde, I am to vyle a personne, to answere the, therfore wyll I laye my hande vpon my mouth.

Once or twyse haue I spoken, but I wyll saye nomore.

The.xl.Chapter.

C The forknowlege and wysdome of God.

A Then spake the LORDE vnto Iob out of the storme, Iob.38.a. and sayde: *Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man, and tell me the thynge that I wyll aske the. Wylt thou disanull my iudge ment? Or wylt thou cõdemne me, that thou thy selfe mayest be made ryghte-ous? Is thyne arme then lyke ẏ arme of God? Maketh thy voyce suche a sounde as his doth? Then arme theselfe with thyne owne power, vp, decke the in thy holy araye, poure out the indignacyon of thy wrath: se that thou caste downe al the proude, loke well ẏ thou make al such as be stubburne, to obeye: treade all the vngodlye vnder thy fete, cast them down in the myre, and couer theyr faces with darknesse: Then wyll I confesse also, that thyne owne ryghe hande hath saued the.
Beholde the cruell beaste (whom I B made with the) whiche eateth haye as an oxe: lo, how stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the na uell of his body. He spredeth out his tayle lyke a Cedre tre, all his vaynes are styffe. His shynnes are lyke pypes of brasse, his rygge bones are lyke staues of yron. Fyrst whan God made hym, he ordeyned the wyldernesse for hym, that the mountaynes shulde geue hym grasse, where all the beastes of the felde take theyr pastyme. He lyeth amonge the redes in the mosses, the fennes hyde hym with theyr shadowe, and the wyllowes of the broke couer hym rounde aboute. Lo, without ony laboure myght he drynke out the whole floude, & sup of Iordane without ony trauayle. Who darre laye hande vpon hym openly, & vndertake to catch him?
Or who dare put an hoke thorow his nose, and laye a snare for hym?
Darrest thou draw out *Leuia- C than with an angle, or bynde his tunge Esa.27.a. with a snare? Canst thou put a rynge Psa.73.b in the nose of hym, or bore his chawes thorow with an auler? Wyll he make many fayre wordes with the (thynkest thou) or flatter the? Wyll he make a co uenaunt with the? Or arte thou able for to compel hym to do the contynual seruice? Wylt thou take thy pastyme with hym as with a byrde, or geue him vnto thy maydẽs, that thy companyõs may hew hym in peces, to be parted amonge the marchaũt men? Canst thou fyl the net with his skynne, or ẏ fyshpannyer with his heade? Darrest ẏ laye hãde vpon him? It is better for ẏ to cõsider what harme myghte happẽ ẏ therthorrow, & not to touch hym. For whan ẏ thynkest to haue hold vpõ hym, he shal begyle ẏ. Euery man also ẏ seyth hym, shall go backe. And why? ther darre none be so bolde, as to rayse hym vp.

God.

A Who is able to stāde before …ar.54.b me? Or who hath geuē me …am.11.b ony thynge afore hande, ỹ I am boūd to reward him agayne? All thynges vnder heauē are myn. I feare hym not, whether he threate, or speake fayre. Who lyfteth hī vp, & strypeth hym out of his clothes: or who taketh hym by ỹ byt of hys brydle? Who openeth the dore of his face? for he hath horrible teth roūd aboute. Hys body is couered wt scales as it were with shyldes, lokte in, kept, well cōpact together. One is so ioyned to another, ỹ no ayer can come in: yee one hangeth so vpō another, & stycke so together, ỹ they can not be sundred.
Hys nesynge is lyke a glysterynge fyre and hys eyes lyke the mornynge shyne.
Oute of hys mouth go torches & fyre-B brandes, out of hys nosetrelles ther go eth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote se-thynge pot. Hys breth maketh ẏ coles burne, ỹ flame goeth out of hys mouth In hys neck remayneth streagth, and befor hys face sorow is turned to glad nesse. The mēbers of hys body are ioy ned so straygthe one to another, and cleue so faste together, that they can not be moued.

Hys harte is as harde as a stone, & as fast as the stythye, ỹ the hāmerman smyteth vpō. Whan he goeth, ẏ mygh-tyeste of all are afrayed, & the waues heuy: yf he draw out ẏ swearde, ther may nother spear nor brestplate abyde C hym. He setteth as much by a straw as by yron, and as much by a rotten stock as by metal. He starteth not away frō hym ỹ bēdeth the bow, & as for slynge-stones, he careth as much for stubble as for thē. He coūteth ẏ hāmer no better thē a straw: he laugheth hī to scorn ỹ shaketh the spear. He treadeth ẏ gold in the myre, lyke ẏ sharpe potsheardes.
He maketh ẏ depe to seeth & boyle lyke a pot, & steareth ẏ see together lyke an oyntmēt: the way is lyght after hym, ẏ depe is hys walkīg place. Vpō earth is ther no power lyke vnto hys, for he is so made, ỹ he feareth not. Yf a man wyl cōsydre al hye thīges, this same is a kynge ouer all the chyldren of pryde.

D Why art thou gone so farre of o LORDE? wylte thou hyde thy self in tyme of trouble?

Whyle the vngodlye hath the ouerhande, the poore must suffre persecucyon.

O that they were taken in ȳ ymaginacyons which they go aboute.

For the vngodlye maketh boaste of hys owne hartes desyre, the couetous blesseth hymselfe, and blasphemeth the LORDE.

The vngodlye is so proude, and full of indignacion, that he careth not: nother is God before hys eyes.

Hys wayes are alway fylthy, thy iudgemētes are farre out of his syght, he defyeth all hys enemyes.

For he sayeth in hys hart: Tush, I shall neuer be caste downe, ther shal no harme happen vnto me.

E Hys mouthe is full of cursynge, fraude and deceate: vnder hys tung is trauayle, and sorowe.

*He sytteth lurkynge in the gardens, that he may pryuely murthur the innocent, hys eyes are set vpō ȳ poore.

He lyeth waytynge secretelye, as it were a lyon in hys denne.

He lurketh that he maye rauysshe the poore: yee to rauysh the poore whā he hath gotten hym in to hys net.

Then smyteth he, then oppresseth he, and casteth downe the poore wyth hys authoryte.

For he sayeth in hys harte: Tush God hathe forgotten, he hathe turned awaye hys face, so that he wyll neuer se it.

Aryse o LORDE God, lyfte vp thyn hande, and forget not ȳ poore. F

Wherfore shulde the wicked blaspheme God, & saye in hys hart: Tush, he careth not for it?

Thys thou seyste, for thou consydreste the myserye and sorowe.

The poore geueth hymselfe ouer in to thy hande, and committeth hym vnto the, for thou art the helper of the frendelesse.

Breake thou the arme of the vngodlye, and malicyous, searche out the wyckednesse which he hath done, that he maye perysshe.

The LORDE is kynge for euer, ye Heythen shall perysshe oute of hys londe.

Consydre, and heare me, o LORDE my God: lyghten myne eyes, that I slepe not in death.

They come in no mysfortune lyke

And this is the cause that they are so pufte vp in pryde, and ouerwhelmed with cruelty and vnryghteousnesse.

B Theyr eyes swel for fatnesse, they do euen what they lyst.

Corrupte are they, and speake blasphemyes malycyously: proude and presumptuous are theyr wordes.

They stretch forth theyr mouthe vnto the heauẽ, and theyr tunge goeth thorowe the worlde.

Therfore fall ỹ people vnto thẽ, & therout suck they no smal auaũtage.

These are the Prouerbes of Salomon the sonne of Dauid king of Israell: to learne wisdom, nurtour, vnderstondynge, prudence, ryghteousnesse, iudgemente and equyte. That the verye babes myghte haue wyt, & that yonge men myght haue knowlege and vnderstondynge. By hearynge the wyse, man shal come to more wysedome: & by experyence he shall be more apte to vnderstonde a parable, and the interpretacyon therof, the wordes of the wyse, and the darcke speches of the same.

✱ The feare of the LORDE is the begynnynge of wysedome. But fooles despise wysdome and nurtour. Job. 28.d Pro. 9.b Psa. 110.b Eccli. 1.c

The fyrst Chapter.

The wysedome of God calleth vs by the mouth of Salomon, exhorteth vs and geueth vs warnynge to eschue the wycked: whose vngodlye conuersacyon in worde and worke and punyshment also of the same is here descrybed.

a My sonne, heare thy fathers doctryne, & forsake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shall bringe grace vnto thy heade, and shal be a cheine about thy Pro. 3.a necke. ✱ My sonne, consente not vnto synners, yf they entyse the, and saye: come wyth vs, let vs Esay. 59.a laye wayte for bloude, and lurke preuely for the innocente wythoute a cause: let vs swalowe them vp lyke the hell, ✱ let vs deuoure them quycke & whole, as those that go downe in to the pyt. Psa. 113.a So shall we fynde all maner of costlye ryches, and fyll oure houses wyth spoyles. Cast in thy lot among vs, we shall haue all one purse.

My sonne, walke not thou wyth them, refrayne thy foote from theyr wayes. ✱ For theyr fete runne to euel, and are hastye to shed bloude. But in Esay. 59.a Pro. 6.b. Psa. 13.a b vayne is the net layed forth before the blyndes eyes. Yee they them selues laye wayte one for anothers bloude, and one of them wolde slaye another. These are the wayes of all suche as be couetous, that one wolde rauysshe anothers lyfe.

Pro.8.a. * Wysedome cryeth wythoute, and putteth forth hyr voyce in the stretes. She calleth before the congregacyon in the open gates, and sheweth hyr wordes thorowe the cytye, sayenge: O ye chylderen, howe longe wyll the scorners delyte in scornynge, and the vnwyse be enemyes vnto knowlege? O turne you vnto my correccyon: lo, I wyll expresse my mynde vnto you, and

Esa.65.b Iere.7.b. * Seynge then that I haue called, and ye refuse it: I haue stretched oute my hande, and no man regarded it, but all my counsels haue ye despysed, and set my correccyon at naughte: Therfore shall I also laugh in youre destruccion and mocke you, whan the thynge that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen whan the thynge that ye be afrayed of, falleth in sodenlye like a storme, and your myserye lyke a tempeste: yee whan trouble and heuynesse commeth vpon you. Then shall they call vpon me, but I wyll not heare: they shall seke me earlye, but they shall not fynde me. And that because they hated knowlege, and receaued not the feare of the LORDE, but abhorred my counsell, and despysed my correccyon Therfore shall they eate the frutes of theyre owne waye, and be fylled wyth theyre owne counsels: for the turnynge awaye of the vnwyse shal slaye them, and the prosperyte of fooles shall be theyre

The.ii.Chapter.

¶ Howe wysedome maye be gotten, and what profyte commeth of it.

A My sonne, yf thou wilt receaue my wordes, & kepe my commaundementes by the, y thyne eare maye herken vnto wysedome, applye thyne harte then to vnderstondynge. For yf thou cryeste after wysdome, and callest for knowlege: yf thou sekeste after her as after moneye, and dyggeste for her as for treasure: Then shalte thou vnderstonde the feare of the LORDE, and fynde the knowlege of god. * For it is the LORDE that geueth wysedome, oute of hys mouthe commeth knowlege and vnderstondinge. He preserueth the welfare of the ryghteous, and defendeth them that walke innocentlye: he kepeth them in the ryghte pathe, and preserueth the waye of hys sayntes. Then shalte thou vnderstond ryghteousnesse, iudgement and equyte yee and euerye good path. Yf wysdom entre in to thyne harte, and thy soule delyte in knowlege: then shall counsell preserue the, and vnderstondynge shal kepe the. That thou mayest be delyuered from the euell waye, and from the man that speaketh frowarde thinges. From suche as leaue the hyghe strete, and walke in the waye of darknesse: which reioyce in doynge euell, and delyte in wycked thynges: whose wayes are croked, and theyre pathes slaunderous.

The.iii.Chapter.

¶ He exhorteth vs to the feare of God and to pacyence, he commendeth wysdome, and requyreth vs to cleue vnto the same.

A fatherlye exhortacyon vnto wysedome wyth the profyte therof, & howe we oughte to refrayne the membres of oure bodye from euell.

Psa.1.a and 26.a *Come not in the path of the vngodlye and walke not in the waye of the wycked.

Eschue it, and go not therein: departe asyde, and passe ouer by it. For they can not slepe, excepte they haue fyrste done some myschefe: nother take they onye reste, excepte they haue fyrst done some harme. For they eate the bread of wyckednesse, and drynke the wyne of robberye. The path of the ryghteous shyneth as the lyghte, & is euer bryghter and bryghter vnto the perfecte daye. But the waye of the vngodlye is as the darcknesse, wherein men fall, or they beware.

C My sonne, marke my wordes, and enclyne thyne eare vnto my sayenges. Num.15.d Deut.11.c. * Let them not departe from thyne eyes, kepe them euen in the myddeste thy harte. My sonne, why wylt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace the bosome of another woman? *For euerye mans wayes are open in Job.31.a and 34.b the syghte of the LORDE, and he pondereth all theyr goynges. The wickednesse of the vngodlye shall catche hymselfe, and wyth the snares of of hys owne synnes shall he be trapped. Because he wolde not be refourmed he shall dye: and for hys greate foolyshenesse he shall be destroyed.

The poore is hated euē of his neyghbours, but the ryche hath many frēdes

Who so despyseth his neyghbour doth amysse: *but blessed is he ŷ hath Psa.40.a pytie on the poore, (he that beleueth on the LORDE, loueth mercy.)

They that ymagyn wyckednesse, shall be disapoynted: but they ŷ muse vpō good thynges, vnto such shal happen mercy and faythfulnesse.

An wholsome tunge is a tre of lyfe, but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde.

A foole despiseth his fathers correccon, but he that taketh hede whan he is reproued shall haue the more vnderstondynge.

In the house of the ryghteous are great ryches, but in the increase of the vngodly ther is mysordre.

[W]yse mouth poureth out knowledge, but the harte of the foolysh doth not so.

The hell wyth hir payne is knowē vnto the LORDE: how muche more than the hartes of men?

Psa.36.b. 1.Tim.6 b * Better is a lytell with the feare of the LORDE than great treasure: for they are not without sorowe.

C Better is a meace of potage with loue, thā a fatte oxe with euel wyll.

Pro.15.a. * An angry man stereth vp stryfe, but he that is pacient stylleth discorde.

The way of the slothfull is ful of thornes, but the strete of ŷ ryghteous is well clensed.

Pro.10.a. * A wyse sōne maketh a glad father but an vndiscrete body shameth his mother.

A foole reioyceth in foolyshe thynges, but a wyse man loketh well to his owne goynges.

Vnaduysed thoughtes shall come to naught, but where as are men that can geue cōusell, there is stedfastnesse.

O how ioyfull a thynge is it, a mā to geue a conuenient answere?

O how pleasaūt is a worde spokē in due season?

Some rede: to ma... be wyse. The way of lyfe leadeth ☞ vnto heauen, that a mā shulde beware of hell beneth.

Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyceth ŷ harte, so doth a good name fede the bones.

The eare ŷ herkeneth vnto wholsome warnynge, and enclyneth therto, shall dwell amonge the wyse.

He that refuseth to be refourmed, despyseth his owne soule: but he ŷ submytteth hymselfe to correccyō, is wyse.

The.xvi.Chapter.

The feare of the LORDE is the ryght scyence of wysdome, and lowlynes goeth before honoure. A

A man maye well purpose a thynge in his harte, but the answere of ŷ tunge cōmeth of ŷ LORD

* A man thynketh all his wayes to be cleane, ‡ but it is the LORDE that fashyoneth the myndes. Pro.21.a ‡psal.32.b

* Commyt thy workes vnto the LORDE, and loke what thou deuysest, it shall prospere. Psal.36.a

The LORDE doth all thynges for his owne sake: yee & whā he kepeth the vngodly for ŷ daye of wrath.

The LORDE abhorreth all presumptuous & proude hartes, ther may nother strength nor power escape.

With louynge mercy and faythfulnesse synnes are forgeuē, & who so feareth the LORDE eschueth euell.

Whan a mans wayes please the LORD, he maketh his very enemyes to be his frendes.

Better is it to haue a lytle thynge with ryghteousnesse, then great rentes wrongeously gotten. B

* A man deuyseth a waye in his harte, but it is the LORDE that ordreth his goynges. Pro.19.c

When the prophecye is in the lyppes of the kynge, his mouth shall not go wronge in iudgement.

* A true measure and a true balaūce are the LORDES, he maketh all weyghtes.

It is a great abhominacyon whā kynges are wycked: for a kynges seate shulde be holden vp wt ryghteousnesse.

Ryghteous lyppes are pleasaunt vnto kynges, and they loue hym that speaketh the trueth.

The kynges displeasure is a messaunger of death, but a wyse mā wyll pacyfye hym.

The cherefull countenaunce of yͤ kynge is lyfe, and his louynge fauour is as the euenynge dewe.

C ✱ To haue wysedome in possessiō is better then golde, and to get vnder-Prou.8.a. standynge, is more worth then syluer.

The path of the ryghteous eschueth euell, and who so loketh well to his wayes kepeth his owne soule.

Presumptuousnesse goeth before destruction, and after a proud stomack ther foloweth a fall.

Better it is to be of hūble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde the spoyles with the proude.

He that handleth a mater wysely, opteyneth good: & ✱ blessed is he, that Psa.2.b putteth his trust in the LORDE.

Who so hath a wyse vnderstandynge, is called to counsell: but he that can speake fayre, getteth more ryches.

Vnderstandynge is a well of lyfe vnto hym that hath it: as for the chastenynge of fooles, it is but foolyshnesse.

The hart of the wyse enfourmeth his mouth, and amendeth the doctrine in his lyppes.

Fayre wordes are an hony combe, a refreshynge of the mynde, and health of the bones.

D ✱ Ther is a waye that men thynke Deut.12.a to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeth Pro 14.b vnto death.
Esa.55. A troublous soule disquieteth hir selfe: for hir owne mouth hath brought her [illegible].

A[n vngo]dly person stereth vp euell, & i[n his] lyppes he is as an whote burnynge fyre.

A frowarde body causeth stryfe, & he that is a blabbe of his tūge, maketh diuision amonge prynces.

A wycked m[an] begyleth his neyghboure, and lede[th hy]m the waye that is not good.

He that wynketh with his eyes, ymagyneth myschefe: & he that byteth his lyppes, wyll do some harme.

✱ Age is a crowne of worshippe, [y]f it be founde in the waye of ryghteousnesse.

A pacyent man is better then one yͭ is stronge: and he that can rule hym selfe, is more worth then he that wynneth a cytie.

The lottes are cast in to the lappe, but their fal stondeth in the LORD.

The.xvii. Chapter.

Better is ✱ a drye morsell wt Eccle.30 quyetnes, then a ful house, A & many fat cattell wt stryfe.

A discrete seruaūt shall haue more rule then yͤ sonnes that haue no wysedome, and shall haue lyke heretage wt the brethren.

✱ Lyke as syluer is tryed in the Sap.3.a fyre, and golde in the fornace: euen so 1.Pet.1.b doth the LORDE proue the hartes.

A wycked body holdeth much of false lyppes, and a dissemblinge person geueth eare to a deceatfull tunge.

✱ Who so laugheth the poore to Pro.14.d. scorne, blasphemeth his maker: ‡ & he ‡ Job.31.
that is glad of another mās hurte, shal not be vnpunysshed.

✱ Chylders chyldren are a worship Pro.14.c vnto the elders, and the fathers are the honoure of the chyldren.

An eloquent speche becommeth not a foole, a dissemblynge mouth also besemeth not a prynce.

Liberalite is a precyous stone vn- B to hym that hath it: for where so euer he becommeth, he prospereth.

Who so couereth another mans offence, seketh loue: but he that discloseth yͤ faute, setteth frēdes at variaūce.

One reprofe onely doth more good to hym that hath vnderstandynge, then an hundreth strepes vnto a foole.

A sedicyous personne seketh myschefe, but a cruel messaūger shalbe sent agaynst hym.

It were better to come agaynst a sheBere robbed of hir whelpes, then agaynst a foole in his foolyshnesse.

✱ Who so rewardeth euell for 1.Re.24.c good, the plage shall not departe from and.26.b his house. 2.Re.12.c

He that soweth discord and stryfe, is lyke one that diggeth vp a waterbroke: but an open enemye is lyke the water that breaketh out and runneth abrode.

The LORDE hateth as wel hym C that iustifieth the vngodly, as hym that condempneth the innocent.

What helpeth it to geue a foole mo ney in hys hande, where as he hath no mynde to bye wysedome.

He is a frende that alway loueth: and in aduersyte a man shall knowe who is hys brother.

Pro. 6.a. *Who so promiseth by the hande and is suerty for another, he is a foole.

He that loueth stryfe, delyteth in synne: and who so setteth hys dore to hyghe, seketh after a fall.

Who so hathe a frowarde harte, opteyneth no good: and he that hathe an ouerthwarte tunge, shall fall in to myschefe.

D An vnwyse bodye bryngeth hymselfe in to sorowe, and the father of a foole can haue no ioye.

Pro. 12.d. *A merye harte maketh a lustye age, but a sorowfull mynde dryeth vp the bones.

*The vngodly taketh gyftes out of the bosome, to wraiste the wayes of iudgemente.

Eccle. 2.a *Wysdome shyneth in the face of hym that hath vnderstondyng, but the eyes of the fooles wandre thorow out all londes.

Pro. 19.b *An vndyscrete sonne is a grefe vnto hys father, and heuynesse vnto hys mother that bare hym.

To punyshe the innocent, and to smyte the prynces that geue true iudgemente, are both euell.

Iaco. 1.b. *He is wyse and dyscrete, that tempereth hys wordes: and he is a mã of vnderstondynge, that maketh much of hys spyrete.

Iob 13.a. *Yee a verye foole (whan he holdeth hys tunge) is counted wyse: and to haue vnderstondynge, whan he shutteth hys lyppes.

The.xviii.Chapter.

A Who so hath pleasure to sow dyscorde, pycketh a quarell in euery thynge.

A foole hath no delyte in vnderstondyng, but only in those thynges wherein hys hart reioyceth.

Where vngodlynesse is, there is also dyspayne: & so ther foloweth shame, and dyshonoure.

The wordes of a mans mouth are lyke depe waters, and the well of wysedome is lyke a full streame.

Pro. 24.c. *It is not good to regarde the person of the vngodly, or to put backe the ryghteous in iudgement.

A fooles lyppes are euer brawlynge, and hys mouth prouoketh vnto battayll.

A fooles mouthe is hys owne destruccyon, and his lyppes are the snare for hys owne soule.

The wordes of a slaunderer are verye woundes, and go thorowe vnto the ynmooste partes of the body.

Who so is slouthfull and slacke in hys laboure, is the brother of hym that is a waster.

The name of the LORDE is a stronge castell, the ryghteous flyeth vnto it, and shall be saued. B

But the ryche mans goodes are hys stronge holde, yee he taketh them for an hyghe wall rounde aboute hym.

After pryde commeth destruccyon, and honoure after lowlynesse.

*He that geueth sentence in a matter before he heare it, is a foole, & worthy to be confounded. Eccli. 11.a

A good stomacke dryueth awaye a mans disease: but whan the spyrete is vexed, who maye abyde it?

A wyse harte laboureth for knowlege, and a prudent eare seketh vnderstondynge.

Lyberalyte bryngeth a man to honoure and worshyppe, and setteth him amonge greate men.

The ryghteous accuseth hymselfe fyrste of all, yf hys neghboure come, he shall fynde hym.

The lot pacyfyeth variaunce, and parteth the myghtye asunder. C

The vnite of brethren is stronger then a castell, and they that holde together, are lyke the barre of a palace.

A mans bellye shall be satysfyed wt the frute of hys own mouth, and with the increase of hys lyppes shall he be fylled.

Death and lyfe stonde in the power of the tunge, he that loueth it, shall enioye the frute therof.

*Who so fyndeth a wyfe fyndeth a good thynge, and receaueth an wholsome benefyte of the LORDE. Pro 19.b. and. 31.b

The poore maketh supplicacyon and prayeth mekelye, but the ryche geueth a roughe answere.

A frende that delyteth in loue, doth a man more frendeshyppe, and sticketh faster vnto hym then a brother.

The.xix.Chapter.

A Pro. 28.a Better * is the poore that lyueth godly, then the blasphemer that is but a foole.

Where no dyscrecyon is, there the soul is not wel and who so is swyfte on foote, stombleth haystelye.

Foolyshnesse maketh a man to go oute of hys waye: and then is his hart vnpacyente agaynste the LORDE.

Ryches make manye frendes, but the poore is forsaken of hys owne frendes.

Deu. 19.d *A false wytnesse shal not remayn vnpunyshed, and he that speaketh lyes shall not escape.

The multytude hangeth vpō great men, and euery man fauoureth hym ỷ geueth rewardes.

As for the poore, he is hated amōg all hys brethren: yee hys owne frendes forsake hym. And he that geueth credence vnto wordes getteth nothynge.

B He that is wyse, loueth hys owne soule: and who so hath vnderstonding shall prospere.

A false wytnesse shal not remayn vnpunyshed, and he that speaketh lyes shall perysshe.

Delycate ease becommeth not a foole, much mor vnsemely is it, a bond man to haue the rule of prynces.

A wyse man putteth of dyspleasure: and it is honoure to let some fautes passe.

Pro. 28.c. *The kynges dissfauoure is like the roarynge of a Lyon, but hys frendeshyppe is lyke the * dewe vpon the grasse. Psa. 132.a

C Slouthfulnesse bryngeth slepe, and an ydell soule shall suffer honger.

Who so kepeth the commaundementes, kepeth hys owne soule: but he that regardeth not his waye, shal dye.

He that hath pytye vpon ỷ poore, lendeth vnto the LORDE: & loke what he layeth oute, it shall be payed hym agayne.

Chasten thy sonne whyle ther is hope, but let not thy soule be moued to slaye hym.

For greate wrath bryngeth harme, therfore let him go, and so maiest thou teache hym more nurtoure.

O geue eare vnto good counsell, and be contente to be refourmed, that thou mayest be wyse hereafter.

* Ther are manye deuyces in a mans harte: neuerthelesse the counsell of the LORDE shall stonde. Pro. 16.b

It is a mans worshyp to do good, and better is it to be a poore man, then a dyssembler.

The feare of the LORDE preserueth the life, yee it geueth plenteousnesse, wythoute the vysytacyon of ony plage. D

* A slouthfull body shutteth hys hande in to hys bosome, so that he can not put it to hys mouth. Pro. 26.b

* Yf thou smytest a scornefull personne, the ignoraunte shall take better hede: and yf thou reprouest one that hath vnderstondynge, he wyll be the wyser. Pro. 21.b

He that hurteth his father, or shutteth oute hys mother, is a shamefull & vnworthye sonne.

My sonne, heare nomore the doctryne that leadeth the awaye from the wordes of vnderstondynge.

A false wytnesse laugheth iudgemente to scorne, and the mouth of the vngodlye eateth vp wyckednesse.

Punyshementes are ordened for the scornefull, and strypes for fooles backes.

The.xx. Chapter.

It a mans honoure to kepe hymselfe from stryfe, but they that haue pleasure in brawlyng, are fooles euerye one.

A slouthfull bodye wyll not go to plowe for colde, therfore shall he go a beggynge in Sommer, and haue nothynge.

Wyse counsell in the harte of mā is lyke a water in the depe of ỷ earthe: but he that hath vnderstondynge, bryn-

B A kynge that sytteth in iudgement and loketh well aboute hym, dryueth awaye all euell.

* Who can saye: my harte is cleane, I am innocent from synne? 3.Job.1.b

To vse two maner of weyghtes, or two maner of measures, both these are abhominable vnto the LORDE

A chyld is knowne by hys conuersacyon, whether hys workes be pure and ryghte.

As for the hearynge of the eare & the syghte of the eye, the LORDE hath made them both.

Delyte not thou in slepe, lest thou come vnto pouerte: but open thyn eyes and thou shalt haue bread ynough.

It is naught, It is naught (saye men) whan they haue it: but whan it is gone, they geue it a good worde.

A mouth of vnderstondyng is more worth thā gold, many precyous stones and costlye Jewels.

* Take hys garmente that is suertye for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowne mans sake. Pro.6.a and.27.b.

The.xxi.Chapter.

The * kynges harte is in the hande of the LORDE, lyke as are þ ryuers of water: he maye turne it whyther so euer he wyl. A 4 Reg.1.f

Euerye man thynketh hys owne waye to be ryght, but the LORDE iudgeth the hartes.

* To do ryghteousnesse and iudgement is more acceptable to þ LORDE then sacryfyce. Mich.6.b

A presumptuous loke, a proud stomacke, and the lanterne of the vngodlye is synne.

The deuyces of one that is dylygente, brynge plenteousnesse: but he that is vnaduysed, commeth vnto pouerte.

Who so hoordeth vp ryches wyth the deceatfulnesse of hys tunge, he is a foole, & lyke vnto them that seke theyr owne deathe.

O Lamuell geue kinges no wyne, geue kinges and prynces no stronge drynke: lest they beynge dronke forget the lawe & regarde not the cause of the poore, & of al suche as be in aduersite. D Strength and honoure is hir clo-

Ecclesiastes.

The fyrst Chapter.

All thynges (yf a mā consyder them well) are but vanyte. Neuerthelesse amonge them al, ther is nothynge weaker and more vnstedfast, then man him selfe.

A All is but vanite (sayeth ẏ Preacher) * all is but playne vanite. For what els hath a man of al the laboure that he taketh vnder the Sonne? One generacyon passeth awaye, another cōmeth, but the earth abydeth styll. The Sōne aryseth, the Sonne goeth downe, & returneth to his place, that he maye there ryse vp agayne. The wynde goeth towarde the South, and fetcheth his cōpasse about vnto the North, and so turneth in to hymselfe agayne. * All floudes runne in to the See, & yet the See is not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne thence they come agayne. Al thynges are so harde, that no man can expresse them. * The eye is not satisfyed with syght, ẏ eare is not fylled with hearynge. ‡ The thynge ẏ hath ben commeth to passe againe: and the thynge that hath ben done, is done agayne, ther is no new thynge vnder ẏ Sonne. Is ther ony thynge whereof it maye be sayd: lo, this is newe? For it was longe ago in the tymes that haue ben before vs. The thynge that is past, is out of remembraunce: Euen so the thynges that are for to come, shall no more be thought vpon amonge them ẏ come after. I my selfe the Preacher, beynge kynge of Israel and Ierusalem, applyed my mynde to seke out & search for the knowlege of al thynges that are done vnder heauen. Suche trauayle & laboure hath God geuen vnto the chyldren of men, to exercyse them selues therin.

man hath, the more is his care.

The. ii. Chapter.

¶ In this chapter (and in the other also) he maketh ofttymes mencyon of the wordes and cōuersacyon of the vn godly: that by thys meanes he maye ẏ better cause me to despise al creatures in respecte of ẏ onely euerlastyng God.

THe sayd I thus in my hart B Now go to, I wyll take myne ease and haue good dayes. But lo, that was vanyte also: in somuche ẏ I sayde vnto laughter: thou arte mad, and to myrthe: what doest thou?

So I thought in my hart, to withdraw my flesh fro wyne, to apply my minde vnto wysdome, and to cōprehēde foolyshnes, vntyl ẏ tyme ẏ (amōge all ẏ thynges which ar vnder ẏ Sōne) I myght se what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauē.

* I made gorgious fayre workes.
3.Re.3.4 5.6.7. I buylded me houses, and planted vyn yardes: I made me ortchardes & gardens of pleasure and planted trees in thē of al maner frutes. I made poles of water, to water the grene and frute full trees withall. * I bought seruaū-3.Re.4.9 tes & maydens, and had a great house holde. As for cattel and sheps, I had more substaunce of them, then all they that were before me in Jerusalem. I gathered siluer & golde togethey, euen a treasure of kynges and landes.

B I prouided me syngers and womē which coulde playe on instrumētes, to make men myrth and pastyme. I gat me drynkynge cuppes also & glasses.
(Finally) I was greater and in more worshippe, then all my predecessours in Jerusalem. For wysedome remayned with me: and loke what so euer myne eyes desyred, I let them haue it: and wherin so euer myne harte delyted or had ony pleasure, I witheld it not from it. Thus my harte reioyced in all that I dyd, and this I toke for the por cyon of all my trauayle. But whan I consydered all the workes that my hādes had wrought, and all the laboures that I had taken therin: lo, al was but vanite and vexacyon of mynde, and no thynge of ony value vnder the Sonne.
Then turned I me to consyder wyse-dom, errour and foolyshnesse (for what is he amonge men, that myght be compared to me ẏ kynge in such workes?) and I sawe that wysedome excelleth foolyshnesse, as farre as lyght doth dar kenesse. For a wyse man beareth his eyes aboute in his heade, but the foole goeth in the darcknesse. I perceaued al so that they both had one ende.

Then thought I in my mynde: yf it happen vnto the foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to laboure ony more for wysedome? So I confessed within my hart, that this also was C but vanite. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the foolyshe, & al ẏ dayes for to come shalbe forgottē yee the wyseman dyeth as well as the foole. Thus beganne I to be wery of my lyfe, in so much that I coulde away with nothynge that is done vnder the Sonne, for al was but vanyte and vex acyon of mynde: yee I was wery of al my laboure, which I had taken vnder the Sonne because I shulde be fayne to leaue them vnto another man, that commeth after me: for who knoweth, whether he shalbe a wyse mā or a fole?
And yet shall he be lorde of all my labours, whiche I with such wysedome haue taken vnder the Sonne. Is not this a vayne thynge?

So I turned me to refrayne my D mynde frō all such trauayle, as I toke vnder the Sōne: for so much as a man shuld wery hymselfe with wysedome, with vnderstandyng and opportunite, and yet be fayne to leaue his labours vnto another, that neuer swet for them This is also a vayne thynge & a great mysery. For what getteth a man of al the labour and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the Sōne, but heuynesse, sorow and disquietnesse all the dayes of his lyfe? In so much that his harte can not rest in the nyght. Is not this also a vayne thynge? Is it not better then for a man to eate & drynke, & his soule to be mery in his laboure?

Yee I sawe that this also was a gyfte i. Tim.4.a of God. * For who may eat, & drynke, or brynge ony thynge to passe without hym? And why? he geueth vnto man, what it pleaseth hym: whether it be wysedome, vnderstandynge, or gladnesse.
But vnto the synner he geueth weerynesse and sorowe, that he may ga G ther and heape together the thynge, yͭ afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto hym whom it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thynge, yee a very disquietnesse and vexacyon of mynde.

The.iii.Chapter.

¶ Euery thynge hath a tyme. Ther is nothyng, but God hath put tediousnesse and trauayle in it, to exercyse men withal. What so euer a man enioyeth of his laboure, the same is a gyfte of God, geuen to the intent that mē shuld feare hym.

A Euery thynge hath a tyme, yee al that is vnder the hea uen, hath his cōuenient sea Job.14.a. son. * Ther is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.
Ther is a tyme to plāte, and a tyme to plucke vp the thynge, that is planted: A tyme to slay, & a tyme to make whole A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp: a tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh: A tyme to mourne and a tyme to daunse: A tyme to cast away stones, and a tyme to gather stones together: A tyme to enbrace, & a tyme to refraine from enbracynge: A tyme to wynne, & a tyme to lese: A tyme to spare & a tyme to spende: A tyme to cut in peces: and a Eccli.20.a tyme to sowe together: * A tyme to kepe sylence, and a tyme to speake: A tyme to loue, & a tyme to hate: A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace.
B What hath a man els (that doth ony thynge) but weerynesse & laboure?
For as touchynge the trauayle & carefulnesse whiche God hath geuen vnto men, I se that he hath geuen it them, to be exercysed in it. All this hath he ordey ned marueolus goodly, to euery thyng his due tyme. He hath planted ignoraunce also in the hartes of men, that they shulde not fynde out the grounde of his workes which he doth from the begynnynge to the ende. So I perceaued yͭ in these thynges ther is nothynge better for a man, then to be mery and do well so longe as he lyueth. For all yͭ a mā eateth and drynketh, yee what so euer a man enioyeth of all his labour, the same is a gyfte of God. I consydered also that what so euer God doth, it contynueth for euer, & that nothynge can be put vnto it nor taken from it: & that God doth it to the intent, that mē shulde feare hym. * The thynge yͭ hath Eccle.1.b ben, is now: and the thynge that is for to come, hath ben afore tyme: for God restoreth agayne yͭ thynge yͭ was past.
Moreouer, I sawe vnder the Sonne, C vngodlynesse in the steade of iudgemēt & iniquite in steade of ryghteousnesse.
Then thought I in my mynde: God shall separate the ryghteous frō the vngodly, and then shalbe the tyme & iudgement of al counsels & workes.
I cōmuned wt myne owne harte also cōcernynge yͤ chylder of men: how God hath chosen them, and yet letteth them appeare, as though they were beastes for it happeneth vnto mē as it doth vn to beastes: and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yee they haue bothe one ma ner of breth, so that (in this) a mā hath no preeminēce aboue a beast but al are subdued vnto vanite. They go all vn to one place, for as they be all of dust, so shal they al turne vnto dust agayne.
* Who knoweth the spirete of mā Eccle.12.b that goeth vpwarde, and the breth of yͤ Sap.2.a beast that goeth down in to the earth?
Wherfore I perceaue, that ther is nothynge better for a man, then to be ioy full in his laboure: for that is his porcy on. But who wyll brynge him to se the thynge that shall come after hym?

The.iiii.Chapter.

¶ A cōsyderacyon of dyuerse thinges. Ther is nothynge so excellent and hye, but yf it do not the dewtye and offyce where vnto it is ordeyned, it shalbe brought lowe.

So I turned me, and consy A dered all yͤ * violent wrōge Abac.1.a and beholde, the teares of such as wer oppressed, and ther was no man to comforte them, or that wolde delyuer and defende them from the violēce of theyr oppressours.

Wherfore I iudged those yͭ are dead to be more happy thē such as be alyue: yee hym yͭ is yet vnborne to be better at ease thē they both, because he seyth not yͤ myserable workes that are done vnder the Sonne. Agayne, I sawe y al trauayle and dilige̅ce of labour was hated of euery man. This is also a vayne thynge, & a vexacyon of mynde.

The foole foldeth his handes together and eateth vp his owne fleshe. One handfull (sayeth he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labour Eccls.1.a B and trauayle. Moreouer, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanite vnder the Sonne. Ther is one man, nomore but hymselfe alone, hauynge nother C chylde nor brother: yet is ther no ende of his carefull trauayle, his eyes can not be satisfyed with ryches, yet doth he not remembre hymselfe, (and saye:) For whom do I take such trauayle?
For whose pleasure do I thus consume away my lyfe? This is also a vayn and myserable thynge. Therfore two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyte of theyr laboure. Yf one of the fall, his companion helpeth hym vp agayne: But wo is hym that is alone, for yf he fall, he hath not ano-C ther to helpe hym vp. Agayne, whan two slepe together, they ar warme: but how can a body be warme alone? One maye be ouercome, but two may make resistaunce. A threfolde cable is not for the people that haue ben before him and that come after hym, they are innumerable: yet is not theyr ioye the grea-

The .v. Chapter.

Agaynst foolyshe and temerarious vowes. Let no man maruayle that so muche euell is done: for the wycked are many. Agaynst the ryche and agaynst ryches.

Be not haisty w thy mouth, A there men may heare fooles. * Yf thou Deut.23.d of the law is wrasted in the lande: mar-one great man kepeth touch with another, and the myghtye helpe them sel-ues together. The whole lande also w the feldes and all y is therin, is in subieccyon and bondage vnto the kynge.

He that loueth money wyll neuer be satisfyed with money: and who so B delyteth in ryches, shall haue no profyt therof. Is not this also a vayn thyng?
Where as many ryches are: ther ar ma ny also y spende the̅ awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth them, sauynge that he maye loke vpon them with his eyes? A labourynge ma̅ slepeth swetely, whether it be lytle or muche that he eateth, * but the abun- Job.20.c daunce of the rych wyll not suffre hym to slepe.
Yet is ther a sore plage, which I haue sene vnder the Sonne (namely) ryches kept to the hurt of hym that hath them in possession.
* For oft tymes they perysshe with Job.1.c his great misery and trouble: and yf he haue a chylde, it getteth nothyng. Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thyther agayn, and caryeth nothynge awaye with hym of all his laboure. This is a myserable C plage, that he shall go awaye euen as he came, What helpeth it hym thē, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe also must he eate in yͤ darcke, with great carefulnesse, sycknesse and sorowes.

Eccle.2.d * Therfore me thynketh it a better and a fayrer thynge a man to eate & drynke, and to be refreshed of al his la boure, that he taketh vnder the Sōne all the dayes of his lyfe which God ge ueth hym: for this is his porcyon. For vnto whō so euer God geueth ryches, goodes and power, he geueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his porcyon, and to be refreshed of his laboure: this is now the gyft of God. For he thynketh not muche how longe he shall lyue, for so much as God fylleth his harte with gladnesse.

The.vi.Chapter.

Agaynst those ryche men that darre not enioye theyr ryches: how madde & foolysh they be.

A THer is yet a plage vnder yͤ Sonne, and it is a general thynge emonge men: whan God geueth a man ryches, goodes and honoure, so yͭ he wanteth nothynge of all yͭ his harte can desyre: and yet God geueth hym no leue to enioy the same, but another mā spendeth them. This is a vayne thynge and a myserable plage. Yf a man beget an hundreth chyldren & lyue many yea res, so that his dayes are many in nom bre, and yet can not enioye his good, no ther be buryed: as for hym I saye that an vntymely byrth is better then he.
For he commeth to nought, and goeth his way into darcknesse, and his name is forgotten. Moreouer, he seyth not yͤ Sonne, and knoweth of no rest nother here nor there. Yee though he lyued B two thousande yeares, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place?
All the laboure that a man taketh, is for hymselfe, and yet his desyre is neuer fylled after his mynde. For what hath the wyse more then the foole?
What helpeth it the poore, that he kno weth to walke before the lyuyng? The syght of the eyes is better, then that yͤ soule shulde so departe awaye. How be it this is also a vayne thynge and a disquietnesse of mynde. What is more excellent then man? yet can he not in yͤ lawe get the victory of hym yͭ is mygh tyer thē he. A vayne thynge is it to cast out many wordes: but what hath a mā els?

The.vii.Chapter.

No man knoweth what is to come.
How worthy a thynge it is to haue a good name. The profyte of wysedome

FOr who knoweth what is A good for man lyuynge, in yͤ dayes of his vayne lyfe, which is but a shadowe?
Or, who wyll tell a man, what shall happen after hym vnder the Sonne. * A good name is more worth Pro.22.a then a precyous oyntment, and yͤ daye Cant.1.a of death is better then yͤ daye of byrth.
It is better to go into an house of mournynge, then in to a banket house.
For there is the ende of al men, and he that is lyuynge, taketh it to harte. It is better to be sorye then to laughe, for whan the coūtenaunce is heuy, yͤ harte is ioyfull. The harte of the wyse is in the mournynge house, but the harte of the foolysh is in the house of myrth.
* It is better to geue eare to the chaste Pro.17.a nynge of a wyse man, then to heare the songe of fooles. For the laughynge of fooles is lyke the crakynge of thornes burnynge vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thynge.
Who so doth wronge, maketh a B wyse man to go out of his wytte, & de-stroyeth a gentle harte. The ende of a thynge is better then the begynnynge.
The pacient of spryte is better thē yͤ hye mynded. Be not hastely angrye in thy mynde: for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Saye not thou: What is the cause that the dayes of the olde tyme were better, then they that be now? for that were no wyse question. Wysdom is better then ryches, yee muche more worth then the eye syght. For wysdom defendeth as well as money, and the ex cellent knowlege and wysdome geueth Consydre the worke of God, how that no man can make the thynge straught, which he maketh croked. Use well the tyme of prosperite, and remembre the

These two thynges also haue I C consydered in the tyme of vanite: that the iust man peryssheth for his ryghteousnes sake and the vngodly lyueth in his wyckednesse, * Therfore be thou Rom.

nother to ryghteous nor ouerwyse, that thou perysh not: be nother to vnryghteous also nor to foolyshe, leste thou dye before the tyme. It is good for the to take holde of thys, and not to let that go oute of thy hande. For he that feareth God, shal escape the al.
*Wysedome geueth more corage vnto the wyse, then ten myghtye men of the cytye: * for ther is not one iuste vpon earth, that dothe good and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euerye worde that is spoken, leste thou heare thy seruaunte curse the: for thyne own harte knoweth, that thou thy self also hast of tymes spoken euell by other men. All these thynges haue I proued because of wysedome: * for I thought to be wyse, but she wente farther fro me then she was before: yee and so depe that I myghte not reache vnto her. I applyed my mynd also vnto knowlege and to seke oute scyence, wysedome, & vnderstondynge: to knowe the foolyshnesse of the vngodlye, and the erroure of dotynge fooles. * And I found, that a woman is bitterer then death: for she is a verye angle, hyr harte is a net, and hyr handes are cheynes. Who so pleaseth God shall escape from her, but the synner wyll be taken wyth her.
Beholde (saieth the preacher) this haue I diligentlye searched oute and proued, that I myghte come by knowlege: whiche as yet I seke and fynde it not. Amonge a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman amõg all. Lo, thys onelye haue I founde that God made man iuste and right but they seke dyuerse suttiltyes, where as no man hathe wysedome and vnderstondynge, to geue answere there vnto.

Of the obedyence whiche men owe vnto God and to theyre heades. The longe sufferaunce of God is not to be despysed. It is not possyble for onye man, to comprehende the workes that be in the worlde.

Wysedom * maketh a mans face to shyne, but malyce putteth it oute of fauour. Kepe the kinges commaundemente (I warne the) and the oth that thou haste made to God. Be not hastye to go oute of his syght, and se thou continue in no euel thyng: for whatsoeuer it pleaseth hym, that doeth he. Lyke as whan a kyng geueth a charge, hys commaundemente is myghtye: Euen so * who maye saye vnto hym: what doeste thou? ‡ Who so kepeth the commaundemente, shall fele no harme: but a wyse mans harte dyscerneth tyme and maner: For euery thynge wyll haue oportunyte, and iudgemente, and thys is the thynge that maketh men ful of carefulnesse and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come. For who wyl tell it hym? Nother is ther onye man that hathe power ouer the sprete, to kepe styll the sprete, nor to haue ony power in the tyme of death: It is not he also that can make an ende of the battayll, nother maye vngodlynesse deliuer him that medleth wythall.
All these thynges haue I consydered, and applyed my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the Son: how one man hathe lordeshyppe vpon another to hys owne harme. For * I haue oft sene the vngodlye broughte to their graues, and fallen downe from the hyghe and glorious place: in so muche that they were forgotten in the cytye, where they were hadde in so hyghe and greate reputacyon. Thys is also a vayne thynge. Because nowe that euell workes are not haystelye punysshed, the harte of man geueth hymselfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though an euell personne offende an hundreth tymes, and haue a longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall go well wyth them that feare God, because they haue him before theyre eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodlye, it shal not be well wyth him nother shall he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shall he be that feareth not God.
Yet is ther a vanyte vpon earthe: Ther be iust men, vnto whome it happeneth, as though they hadde the workes of the vngoddelye: Agayne ther be vngoddelye, wyth whome it goeth as though they hadde the workes of the ryghteous. Thys me thynke also a vayne thynge. Therfore I commende gladnesse, because a man hath no better thynge vnder the Sonne, then to eate and drynke, and to be merye: for that shall he haue of hys labour all the dayes of hys lyfe, whiche God geueth hym vnder the Sonne. Whan I applyed my mynde to learne wysdome pleasaunt then wyne, and the smell of thy oyntmentes passeth all spyces.

Thy lyppes (O my spouse) droppe as Thou arte a well of gardens, a wel of wyll drynke my wyne and my mylke:

As I was aslepe, and my harte wa whã he knocked. Open to me (sayd he) O my syster, my loue, my doue, my dearlynge: for my heade is full of dewe and the lockes of my heere are ful of ỹ nyghtdroppes.

I haue put of my cote, how can I B do it on agayne? I haue washed my fete, howe shall I fyle them agayne?
But whan my loue put in his hande at the hole, my harte was moued toward hym: so that I stode vp to opẽ vnto my beloued. My hãdes dropped & Mirre, and ỹ Myrre rãne downe my fyngers vpon the locke Neuertheles whan I had opened to my beloued, he was departed, and gone his waye.

Now lyke as afore tyme whan he spake, my hart could not lõger refraine Euẽ so now I sought him, but I could not fynde hym. I cryed vpon hym, ne-uerthelesse he gaue me no answere. So C th: watchmen that wente aboute the cytie, founde me, smote me, and wounded me: Yee they that kept the walles, toke awaye my garmente fro my. I charge you therfore (O ye doughters of Jerusalem) yf ye fynde my beloued, that ye tell hym, how that I am syche for loue.

Who is thy loue aboue other lo-uers, O thou fayrest amonge wemen?
Or what can thy loue do, more then other louers, that thou chargest vs so straytly?

As for my loue, he is whyte & read coloured, a syngular personne amonge many thousandes: his heade is ỹ moost fyne golde, the lockes of his heere are bushed, browne as the euenynge: His eyes are as the eyes of doues by ỹ water brokes, washen with mylke and re-maynynge in a plenteous place: His D chekes are lyke a garden bedde, wherin the Apotecaryes plante all maner of Marbell, set vpon sokettes of golde: His face is as Libanus, & as ẏ bewty of the Ceder trees: His throte is swete yee he is altogether louely. Suche one is my loue (O ye doughters of Jerusalem) suche one is my loue.

Whether is thy loue gone then (O thou fayrest amonge wemen) whether is thy loue departed, that we may seke hym with the?

The vi. Chapiter.

A My loue is gone downe in to his garden, vnto the swete smellynge beddes, that he may refresh himselfe in the gardē, and gather floures. My loue is myne, & I am his, whiche fedeth amonge the lylyes.

Thou arte pleasaunt (O my loue) euen as louelynesse it selfe, thou arte fayre as Jerusalem, glorious as an arof Galaad. Thy tethe are lyke a flocke of shepe that be clypped, whiche go out of the washyng place: where euery one beareth two twyns, & not one vnfrut-

B bre. But one is my doue, my derlynge.
She is ẏ onely beloued of hyr mother, the doughters sawe her, they sayde she was blessed. Yee the quenes and cōcubynes prayseth her. What is she thys that pepeth out as the mornynge? fayre as the Moone, excellent as the Sonne, glorious as an armye of men with theyr banners.

I wente downe in to the nutgarden, to se what grewe by the brokes, to loke if the vynyarde florished, and if the pōgranates were shot forthe. Thē the charrettes of the prynce of my people made me sodenly afrayed. Turne agayne, turne agayne (O thou Sulamite) turne agayne, turne agayne, that we may loke vpon the.

The vii. Chapter.

What pleasure haue ye more A in the Sulamite, then whē she daunseth amonge the men of warre? O howe pleasaūt ar thy treadinges with thy shues, thou prices doughter? Thy thees are lyke a fayre iewell, whiche is wrought by a connynge workemayster: Thy nauell is lyke a rounde goblet, which is neuer without drinke: Thy wōbe is lyke an heape of wheat, set about with lylies: Thy two brestes ar lyke two twyns of yonge roes: Thy necke is as it were a tower of yuery: Thyne eyes are like the water poles in Hesebon, besyde ẏ porte of Bathrabbim: Thy nose is lyke the tower of Libanus, which loketh towarde Damascus: That heade that stōdeth vpō the, is lyke Carmel: The heere of thy heade is lyke the kynges purple folden vp in pleates.

O howe fayre and louely arte thou B (my derling) in pleasures? Thy stature is lyke a date tre, and thy brestes lyke the grapes. I sayde: I wyll clemme vp in to the date tre, and take holde of his braunches. Thy brestes also shalbe as the vyne grapes, ẏ smel of thy nostrels lyke the smell of apples, and thy throte lyke the best wyne.

This shalbe pure & cleare for my loue, his lyppes & teth shall haue theyr pleasure. There wyll I turne me vnto my loue, & he shall turne hym vnto me. O come on my loue, let vs go forthe in to the felde, and take our lodgynge in the villages. In the mornynge wyll we ryse by tymes, and go se the vynyardes: yf it be spronge forthe, yf the grapes be growne, and yf the pōgranates be shot out. There wyll I geue the my brestes: There shall ẏ Mādragoras geue theyr smell besyde our dores: There (O my loue) haue I kepte vnto the all maner of frutes, bothe newe and olde.

The viii. Chapter.

O That I myght fynde the without & kysse the, whom I loue as my brother whiche suckt my mothers brestes: and that thou woldest not be offēded, yf I toke the & brought the in to my mothers house: that thou myghtest teache me, and that I myght geue the drynke of spyced wyne and of the swete sappe of my pomgranates.
* His lefte hāde lieth vnder my heade, Canti. 2.a. and hys ryghthande enbraceth me.

I charge you (O ye doughters of Jerusalem) that ye wake not vp my loue nor touche her, till she be content herselfe. What is she thys, that commeth vp from the wyldernesse, and leaneth vpon hyr loue? I am ý same that waked the vp amonge the apple trees, where thy mother bare the, where thy mother brought the in to the worlde.

O set me as a seale vpon thyne harte, and as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is myghtye as the death, and gelousye as the hell. Hyr coales are of fyre, and a verye flamme of the LORDE: so that manye waters are not able to quenche loue, nother maye the streames drowne it. Yee yf a man wolde geue all the good of hys house for loue, he shulde counte it nothynge.

When oure loue is tolde oure yõger syster, whose brestes are not yet growne, what shall we do vnto her? Yf she be a wal, we shall buylde a syluer bolworcke therevpon: Yf she be a tower, we shall fasten her wyth bordes of Cedertre.

Yf I be a wall, and my brestes lyke towres then am I as one that hath founde fauoure in hys syghte.

Salomon hadde a vyneyarde at Baall Hamon, thys vyneyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the frute therof shulde geue hym a thousande peces of syluer. But my vyneyarde (O Salomon) geueth the a thousande, and two hundrethe to the kepers of the frute.

Thou that dwellest in the gardens, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companyons maye herken to ý same. O get the awaye (my loue) as a roo or a yonge herte vnto the swete smellynge mountaynes.

dearer then fyne gold, and a man to be so is founde alone, shalbe shot thorow:

And who so gather, shalbe destroied wt be destroyed, euen as God *destroyed Sodom and Gomorra. It shall neuer be more inhabited, nother shall ther be eny more dwellynge there, from generacyon to generacyon.

The Arabians shall make no mo tentes there, nother shal the shepherdes make theyr foldes there eny more: but wylde beastes shall lye there, and ye houses shalbe full of great Oules. Estriches shall dwell there, and Apes shall daunce there: The lytle Oules shall crye in the palaces, one after another and Dragons shalbe in the pleasaunt parlers. ¶ God wyl haue mercy on his people. He threateneth Palestina.

B But the LORDE wyll be mercyfull vnto Jacob, and wyl take vp Israel agayn, and set them in theyr owne lande. Straungers shall cleue vnto them, and get them to the house of Jacob. *They shall take the people, and carye them home to them. And the house of Israel shall haue them in possession for seruauntes and maydens in the lande of the LORDE. They shal take those presoners, whose captaynes they had ben afore: and rule those that had oppressed them. Whan the LORDE now shall brynge the to rest, from the trauayle, feare, and hard bondage that thou wast laden withal: then shalt thou vse this mockage vpon the kynge of Babilon, and saye: Howe happened it that ye oppressour leaueth of? Ys thy golden trybute come to an ende? doutlesse the LORDE hath broke the staffe of the vngodly, and the cepter of the lordly. Which whan he is wroth smytteth the people with durable strokes, and in his wonders he persecuteth the and rameth them contynually. And therfore the whole worlde is now at reste and quyetnesse, and men synge for ioye.

B Yee euen the fyrre trees and ceder of Lybanus reioyce at thy fall, sayeng: Now that thou art layed downe, ther come nomore vp to destroye vs. Hell also trembleth at thy commynge. Al myghty men and prynces of the earth, steppe forth before the. Thy pompe and thy pryde is gone downe to hell: Mothes shalbe layed vnder the, & wormes shalbe thy coueryng.

*How art thou fallen from heauen (o Lucyfer) thou fayre mornyng chylde? hast ye gotten a fal euen to the grounde, thou that (notwithstandynge) dyddest subdue ye people? And yet thou thoughtest in thyne harte: I wyll clymme vp in to heauen, and make my seate aboue the starres of God. I wyll syt vpon ye glorious mount towarde the North, I wyll clymme vp aboue the cloudes, & wyll be lyke the hyghest of al. Yet dare I saye ye thou shalte be brought down to the depe of *hell. They that se the, shall narowly loke vpon the, & thynke in them selues, sayenge: Js this the man, that brought al londes in feare, & made ye kingdomes afrayed? Js this he that made the worlde in a maner waist and layd the cyties to grounde, whiche let not his presoners go home?

How happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye, euery one at home in his owne palace, with worshippe: & thou arte caste out of thy graue lyke a wylde braunche: lyke as deadmens rayment ye are shot thorow wt the swearde: as they that go downe to the stones of ye depe: as a dead coarse that is troden vnder fete: and arte not buryed with them? Euen because that thou haste waisted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. For the generacyon of the wycked shalbe without honoure for euer. Ther shal a waye be sought to destroye theyr chyldren, for theyr fathers wyckednesse: they shall not come vp agayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the worlde full of castels and townes.

D I wyll stonde vp agaynst them (sayeth the LORDE of hoostes) & roote out the name and generacyon of Babilon (sayeth the LORDE) and wyll geue it to the Otters, and wyll make waterpouddels of it. And I wyl swepe them out with the besome of destruccyon, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes. The LORD of hoostes hath sworne an oth, sayenge: It shall come to passe as I haue determined: and shalbe fulfylled as I haue deuysed. *The Assyrians shalbe destroied in my lande, & vpon my mountaines wyl I treade the vnder foote: Where thorow his yocke shalbe takẽ from your shulders. This deuyse hath god takẽ thorow ye whole worlde, and thus is his hãde stretched out ouer all people. For yf the LORDE

The.xv.Chapter.

C The plage of Moab.

This is ye heuy burthen vpõ Iere.48.a * Moab: Ar of Moab Eze.7.c. was destroyed (as me thou-Eze.25.b ght) in ye night season: The Soph.2.b walles of Moab perished in ye night, and vanished awaye: They wente to Baith and Dybon in the hye places for to wepe. Moab dyd mourne from Nebo to Medba: * Al their hea-Iere.48.b des were balde, & all their beerdes sha-uen. In their stretes were they gyrded aboute with sackloth. In all the top-pes of their houses & stretes was ther nothyng, but mournyng and wepynge.
Hesebon and Eleale cried, that theyr voyce was herde vnto Iahaz. The B worthies also of Moab blared & cried for verý sorowe of theyr myndes: Wo is my hart for Moabs sake. They fled vnto the citie of zoar, whiche is lyke a fayre frutefull bullocke, they wente vp to Luhith, wepynge. The way toward Horonaim was ful of lamentacion for ye hurte. The waters of Nimrim were dryed vp, the grasse was wethered, the herbes destroyed, and what necessarye C grene thynge ther was besyde. In lyke maner the thynge that was lefte them of theyr substaũce, they caryed it by water to Araby. The crie wente ouer the whole londe of Moab: from Eglaim vnto Beer, was there nothynge but C mournynge. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude: for the enemie had sent thyther a bonde of men, which as a lyon, layde wayte for the remnaũt of the lõde, & for them that were escaped.

The.xvi.Chapter.

C The vexacyon and feare of Moab.

Then sent the lordes of the B londe a man of warre, from the rocke that lyeth toward the deserte, vnto the hyll of the doughter Sion (For as for the doughters of Moab, they were as it had bene a trembling byrde, that is put out of hir nest, by the fery of Ar-non) whiche messaunger sayde: gather your councel * come together: couer vs Esa.24 with your shadowe in the myddaye, as the nyght dothe: hyde the chased, and bewraye not them that are fled, let the persecuted Moabites dwell amonge you, be our open refuge agaynst the destroyer: for the aduersary oppresseth vs the robber vndoeth vs, and the tyraũt dryueth vs out of our londe. But the trone of your kyngdome is full of grace therfore he that sytteth vpon it with faythfulnesse and treuthe in the house of Dauid, knowe the thynge, and do his diligẽce to helpe shortly accordyng B to equite and ryghtuousnesse. * As for Iere.48.d Moabs pryde it is well knowen. And Eze.25.b althoughe they be excellent, proude, arrogant, and hye mynded: yet is theyr strengthe nothyng lyke. And therfore Moab cõplayneth vnto Moab, wher thorowe they come all to mourne: and nowe that they be smytten, they take theyr deuice beneth by the brykwal, and make theyr complaynte.

The suburbes also of Hesebon were made wayste, & the prynces of ye Gentiles hewed downe the vynyardes of Sibma, whiche were planted with noble grapes, and spred vnto Iazer, & wente vnto ye ende of ye deserte, whose braunches stretched them selues forth beyõde ye see. Therfore I mourned for Iazer, and for ye vynyardes of Sibma with greate sorowe. I poured my tea-res vpon Hesebon and Eleale: for all theyr sõges were layde downe, in theyr haruest and gathering of their grapes: Myrthe and chere was gon out of the felde and vynyardes, in so muche, that C no mã was glad nor sange. Ther were no treader in to the wyne presse, theyr mery chere was layde downe. Wherfore my bely rombled (as it had bene a lute) for Moabs sake, & myne inward membres, for the bryck walles sake.

For it happened thus also: when Moab sawe that she was turned vpsyde downe, she went vp on hye in to hir sãctuary, to make hir prayer there * but Deu.32.e she myght not be helped. Thys is the deuyce whiche the LORDE toke in honde at that tyme agaynste Moab.
But nowe the LORD sayeth thus:
In thre yeare shal the power of Moab with theyr pompe (whiche is great) be minished, lyke as the burthen of an hy-red seruaunt: And as for the remnaunt of them, they shalbe lesse then a fewe, and not rekened muche worthe.

The.xvii. Chapter.

Punyshment of Damascus & Siria.

A THis is the heuy burthen v-Jer.49.d pon * Damascus: Beholde Amos.1.a Damascus shalbe nomore a citie, but an heape of broken stones. The cytyes of Aroer shalbe waist. The cattel shal lye there, & noman shall fray them awaye.
Ephraim shall nomore be stronge, and Damascus shall nomore be a kynge-dome. And as for the glory of the remnaunt of the Sirians, it shalbe as the glory of the chyldren of Israell, sayeth the LORD of hoostes. At that tyme B also shal ỹ glory of Jacob be very pore, and his fatnes leane. It shal happen to them, as when one sheareth in haruest, whiche cutteth hys handfull with the sickle: and when one gathereth ỹ sheaues together in ỹ valley of Rephaim, ỹ ther remayneth yet some eares ouer.
Esa.24.b * Or as whẽ one shaketh an olyue tre, whiche fyndeth but two or thre olyue beries aboue in the toppe, and foure or fyue in the braũches. Thus the LOR-DE God of Israel hathe spoken.

Then shal man conuerte agayne to hys maker, and tourne hys eyes to the holy one of Israel. And shall not turne to the aulters that are the worke of his awne handes, neyther shal he loke vpõ groues & ymages, whiche his fyngers C haue wrought. At the same tyme shall theyr stronge cities be desolate, lyke as were once the forsaken plowes & corne 4.Re.7.b * whiche they forsoke, for feare of the chyldren of Israell.

Thus shalt thou (o Damascus) be desolate, because thou haste forgotten God thy sauiour, and haste not called to remẽbraũce the rocke of thy strẽgth * Wherfore thou hast also set a fayre plante, and grafted a straunge braũch. 4.Re.16.b In the daye when thou dyddest plante it, it was great, & gaue soone the frute of thy sede: But in the daye of haruest, thou shalte reape an heape of sorowes and myseryes.

Wo be to ỹ multitude of much peo- D ple, that rush in lyke the see, and to the heape of folke, that renne ouer all lyke greate waters * For though so many Esa.37.f people increase as ỹ flowynge waters, and though they be armed: yet they flye farre of, and vanishe awaye lyke the dust with the wynde vppon an hyll, & as ỹ whyrle wynde thorowe a storme.
Though they be fearfull at nyght, yet in the mornynge it is gone wyth them.
This is theyr porcion, ỹ do vs harme, and ỹ heretage of them that robbe vs.

The.xviii. Chapter.

The calling of the Heithen.

WO be to the londe of wyng- A shyppes, whiche is of thys syde ỹ floude of Ethiopia: whiche sendeth hir message ouer the see in shyppes of redes vpon the water, and sayeth: Go sone, & do your message vnto a straũge and harde folke: to a fearfull people, & to a people that is further then this: to a desperate & pylled folke, whose lõde is deuided from vs with ryuers of water. Yee all ye that syt in the compasse of the worlde, and dwel vpõ the earth: when the token shalbe geuen vpon the mountaynes, then loke vp: and when the horne bloweth, then herken to: for thus hathe the LORDE sayde vnto me I layde me downe, and põdred the B matter in my house, at the noone daye whẽ it was hote: and ther fel a mesling shower, like a dewe, as it happeneth in haruest. But the frutes were not yet rype to cutte of, & the grapes were but yonge & grene. Then one smote of the grapes wt an hoke, yee he hewed downe also the bowes and the braunches, and dyd caste them awaye. And thus they were layde wayst, for the foules of the moũtaines, & for the beastes of ỹ earth together. So ỹ the foules sat ther vpõ, & the beastes of ỹ earth wintred therõ.

Then shall ther be a present broughte vnto the LORDE of hoostes: euen that harde folke, that fearfull folke, & that further is then this: that desperat and pylled folke (whose lande is deuyded frō vs with floudes of water) vn-Deut.12.a to the * place of the name of the LOR-DE of hoostes: euen vnto the hyll of Sion.

The.xix.Chapter.

¶ Plages vpon Egipte & Ethiopia.

A This is the heuy burthē vp Iere.46.a pon * Egipte: Beholde Eze.29.a † the LORDE wyl ryde ‡ Luc.21.d vpon a swyft cloude, and come in to Egipt. And the goddes of Egipte shall tremble at his commynge, & the harte of Egipte shall quake within her For thus sayeth the Mat,13.a LORDE: * I wyll steare vp the E-gipcyans one agaynste another amōge them selues, so that one shalbe euer a-gaynst his brother and neyghbour: yee one cytie agaynst another, & one kyngdome agaynst another. And Egipte shalbe choked in hir selfe. Whan they are councell at theyr goddes, at theyr prophetes, at theyr sothsayers & wyt-ches: then wyll I brynge theyr coūsell to naught.

B I wyll delyuer Egipte also in to the handes of greuous rulers, & a cruel kynge shall haue the rule of them. The water of the see shalbe drawen out, Nilus shall synke away and be dronke vp.
The ryuers also shalbe drawen out, yͤ welles shall decrease and drye awaye.
Rede and rush shall fayle, the grasse by the waters syde or vpō yͤ ryuers bācke yee and what so euer is sowen by the waters, shalbe wythered, destroyed, & brought to nought. The fyshers shall mourne, all such as cast angles in yͤ water, shall complayne: and they that sprede theyr nettes in the water, shalbe faynt harted. Suche as laboure vpon flaxe and sylke, shall come to pouertie, & they also that weeue fyne workes. All the pondes of Egipte, all the polyey of theyr moates and dytches shal come to naught.

C Yee the vndiscrete prynces of zoā, 2 Re.17.d the * counsell of the wyse Senatours Esay.8.c of Pharao shall turne to foolyshnesse: Those that dare boast and say of Pha-raos behalfe: I am come of wyse people, I am come of the olde regall proge-ny. But where are now thy wyse mē?
Let them tel yͤ and shewe thé, what the LORDE of hoostes hath taken in hande agaynste Egipte. Fooles are those princes of zoan, and proude are yͤ prynces of Noph: yee they deceaue E-gipte with the nobilite of theyr stocke.
* For the LORD hath made Egipte 3.Re.11.d dronken with the spirete of erroure, and they shall vse it in all matters: euē lyke as a dronken man goeth spewynge a-boute. For Egipte shall lacke good coū-sell, so that they shal not knowe what to do, nother begynnynge nor ende, nother vpon the lande nor water. Then shall the Egipcyans be lyke vnto women afrayed and astonnyed, at the lyftynge vp of the hande, which yͤ LOR-DE of hoostes shal lyfte vp ouer them D

The lande of Iuda also shal make the Egipcyans afrayed: who so dothe but speake vpon it, shal put thē in fear: And that because of the counsell, which the LORDE of hoostes hath deuysed agaynst them. Then shall the fyue cy-ties of Egipte speake with the Cananites tūge, and * sweare by the LOR- Deu.10.d DE of hoostes, and Heliopolis shalbe one of them. At the same tyme shall the LORDE of hoostes haue an aulter in the myddest of the lande of Egipte, with this tytle therby: Unto the LOR-DE. This shalbe a token or testimony vnto the LORDE of hoostes in the lande of Egipte, when they shall crye vnto hym, because of those yͤ oppresse them: that he shall sende thē a captayne and a Saueour to delyuer them.

Moreouer Egipte shalbe bought E vnto the LORDE, and the Egipcy-ans also shall knowe the LORDE at the same tyme: they shall do hym reue-rence with peaceofferynges, and with meatofferinges: they shal promyse hym offerynges, yee and paye hym also.
Thus the LORDE shall smyte E-gipte, and heale it agayne: and so shall they turne to yͤ LORDE, and he also shall haue mercye vpon them, and saue them. Then shal ther be a comune way out of Egipt in to Assyria The Assirians shall come in to Egipte, and the E-gipcyans in to Assiria. The Egipcyās also and the Assirians shall both haue one Gods seruyce. Then shall Israel with honoure be the thyrde to Egipte and Assur. And the LORDE of hoo stes shall blesse them, sayenge: Blessed is my people of the Egipcyans, Assur is the worke of my handes, but Israel is myne enheritaunce.

The.xx.Chapter.

¶ By goynge barefoote doth Esaye sygnifye the captiuite of Egipte and Ethiopia.

A The same yeare that Harthā came to Asdod, where Sargen ẏ kyng of the Assirians sent hym, what tyme as he also beseged Asdod, & wāne it the same season: Thē spake ẏ LORDE vnto Esaye the sonne of Amos, sayeng: Go and lowse of ẏ sackeclothe from thy loynes, and put of the shues from thy fete. And so he dyd, goynge naked and bare foote. Then sayd the LORDE: where as my seruaunt Esay goeth naked and barefoote, it is a token and signifyenge of the thynge, ẏ after thre yeare shall come vpon Egipt and Ethiopia. For euen thus shall the B kinge of the Assiriās dryue both yonge and olde, as presoners naked and bare foote, out of Egipte and Ethiopia. And shall discouer the shame of Egipt They shalbe also at theyr wyttes ende, and ashamed one of another: the Egipcyans of the Morians, and the Morians of the Egipcyans, at the syghte of theyr glorye.

Morcouer they that dwell in ẏ Isles, shal saye euē the same daye: behold, this is oure hope, to whom we fled to seke helpe, that we myght be delyuered from the kynge of the Assirians. How wyll we escape?

The.xxi.Chapter.

¶ The punyshment of Babylon, Duma and Arabia.

A This is the heuy burthen of the waylt see: A greuous vysion was shewed vnto me, lyke as whā a storme of winde & raine rusheth in from the wyldernesse, that terrible lande. Who so maye deceaue, (sayd the voyce) let hym deceaue: Who so maye destroye, let hym destroye. Up Elam, besege it o Madai, for I wil stil all theyr groninges. With this, the raines of my backe were full of payne:
M.13.a Panges came vpon me * as vpō a wo Jer.13.a man in hir trauayle. When I herde it, I was abashed: and whan I loked vp I was afrayed. Myne harte paunted, I trembled for feare. The darcknesse made me fearfull in my mynde.
B Yee soone make redy ẏ table (sayde this voyce) kepe ẏ watch, eat & drinke: Up ye captaynes, take you to youre shylde, for thus the LORDE hath charged me: go thy waye, & set a watch man, that he maye tell what he seyeth. And whan he had wayted dilygētly, he sawe two horsemen: the one rydyng vpon an asse, the other vpon a Camel. And the lyon cryed: LORDE, I haue stōde waiting al the whole day, & haue kepte my watch all the nyght. With ẏ came there one rydyng vpon a charret, which answered, and sayd: * Babilon Jere 51.b is fallen, she is turned vpsyde downe, Apo.14.b and all the ymages of hir goddes are and.18.a smytten to the grounde. This (o my felowe throshers and fanners) haue I herde of the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell, to shewe it vnto you.

The heuy burthen of Duma.

* One of Seir cried vnto me: watch Jere.49.b man what hast thou espyed by nyght? Watchman, what hast thou espyed by nyght? The watchmā answered: The day breaketh on, and the nyght is com minge: Yf your request be earnest, then axe, and come agayne.

The heuy burthen vpon Arabia.

At euen ye shal abyde in the wood C in the way toward Dedanim. * Mete Esay.16.a the thyrstye with water, (o ye cytesyns of Heman) mete those with bread that are fled. For they shall runne away frō the weapen, from the drawen swearde from the bent bowe, and from ẏ great batayll. For thus hath the LORDE spoken vnto me, * ouer a yeare shal all Jere.19.c the power of Cedar be gone, lyke as whan the office of an hyred seruaūt goeth out: And the remnaunt of the good archers of Cedar, shalbe very fewe: For the LORD God of Israell hath spoken it.

The.xxii.Chapter.

¶ The punyshment of Jerusalem by Sennacherib. Sobna is put downe. Eliachim commeth in his steade.

The heuy burthen vpon the valley of Vysions.

What hast thou there to do, A that thou clymmest vp into the house toppe, o thou citie of mirakles, sedicious & wylful? seynge, thy slayn men are nother kylled ẘ swearde, nor dead in battayl? For all thy captaynes gat them to theyr horses from the ordynaunce: yee they are all together rydde awaye, and fled farre of. When I per-in he wyll plage, treade downe, & wede out the valley of Vysions, and breake downe the walles with suche a cracke, ẏ it shal geue a soūde in ẏ moūtaynes.

B The Elamites toke the quiuers to carte and horse, & the walles were bare from harnesse. Thy goodly valleys were full of charrettes, ẏ horsemē made them soone to besege the gates. Then was the coueryng of Iuda put from the twayne walles of the water of the that toke it in hande and made it. And at the same tyme shal the LORDE of hoostes call mē to weppyng, mourning,

C Thus sayeth the LORDE God Esa.36.a of hoostes: Go in to the treasury vnto to hym: What hast thou here to do? & from whence commest thou? that thou hast made ẏ a graue here? (For he had caused a costly tōbe of stone to be made for hymselfe, and a place to lye in to be hewē out of a rocke.) Behold, ẏ LOR

After this wyll I call my seruaunt Eliakim, the sonne of Helkia, & araye hym with thy coate, and gyrde hym w in to his hande. He shalbe a father of ẏ cytesyns of Ierusalem, and of the kyn red of Iuda * I wyll also laye ẏ keye Iob.12.b yf he open, no man shall shut: and yf he do shut, no man shall open. I wyll fasten hym to * a nayle in the place of the Zacha.10.a moost hye faythfulnesse, and he shalbe vpon the glorious trone of his fathers house. They shall hange vpon hym all the glory of his fathers house, of ẏ chyl dren and chylders chyldren, all apparel smal and great, al instrumentes of mea sure and musyke. This shall come to passe (sayeth the LORD of hoostes) when ẏ nayle, that is fastned to ẏ place of ẏ hyghest faythfulnes, shalbe pluckt of, and when the weyght that hangeth vpon it, shall fall, be broken, and hewē in peces. For the LORDE hymselfe hath sayde it.

The.xxiii. Chapter.

The punyshment of Tyre, of all the cyties by the see coast, & of the Iles.

AN heuy burthen vpō * Ty A rus. Mourne ye shyppes of Iere.47 Tharsis for she is throwen Eze.26.27 downe to the grounde, and conquered of them, that are come from Cithim. The indwellers of the Ilondes, the marchauntes of Sidō and they that occupyed the see (of whō thou wast ful somtyme) are at a poynt.
For by see were theyr frutes brought vnto the, & al maner of corne by water.
Thou wast the comune marcket of all people. Sidon is sory for it, yee and all the power of the see complayneth, and sayeth: O that I had neuer trauayled with chylde, that I hadde neuer borne ony, that I had nother noryshed boye, nor brought vp doughter. As soone as Egipte perceaueth it, she wylbe as sory as Tyrus it selfe. Go ouer the see, mourne ye that dwell in the Iles. Is not that the glorious cytie, which hath ben of longe antiquite? whose natyues dwellynge farre of, commende her so greatly. Who hath deuysed such thyn-ges vpon Tirus the crowne of all cy-ties, whose marchauntes and captaynes were the hyghest and principal of the worlde? Euen ẏ LORD of hoostes B hath deuysed it, that he may put down al pompe, & mynysh all the glory of the worlde. Go thorowe thy londe (o thou doughter of the see) as mē go ouer the moueth the kyngdomes, and hathe ta-oute hys hande ouer the see, and sayd: From hence forth shalte thou make no

For the earthe is corrupte of hyr in-made the euerlastynge testamente of deuoure the earth: for they that dwell theron, haue synned . Wherfore they

The earthe shal geue a great crack it shall haue a sore ruyne and take an horrible fal. The earth shal stacker lyke a droncken man, and be taken away lyke a tente. Hyr mysdedes shall lye so heupe vpon her, that she muste fal, and neuer ryse vp agayne. At the same tyme shall the LORDE mustre to gether the hyghe hooste aboue, and the kynges of the worlde vpon the earthe. the LORDE. * Whome shall I Psal.50.d thus sayeth the LORDE: beholde, I wil

What vnfaythfulnesse founde not in theyre hartes: Where haue we out drynkofferynges vnto strau̅ge god des, to prouoke me vnto wrath: How be it they hurte not me (sayeth ye LOR DE) but rather confounde and shame them selues.

And therfore thus sayeth ye LOR-DES God: beholde, my wrathe & myne indignacyon shalbe poured out vppon this place, vpon men and cattell, vpon the trees in the felde, and all frute of ye lande: and it shall burne so, that no ma̅ C maye quench it.

Esa.1.a Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoo stes, the God of Israel: * Ye heap vp Osee.10.a your burntofferynges & your sacrifices & eate ye flesh. * But when I brought youre fathers out of Egypte, I spake Esa.43.d no worde vnto them of burntofferinges and sacrifices: but this I co̅maunded them, sayenge: * Herken & obeye my Exo.19.b voyce, and I shall be youre God, and ye shall be my people: so that ye walke in all the wayes, whiche I haue commaunded you, that ye may prospere.
* But they were not obedient, they in Zacha.7.b clined not theire eares there vnto, but went after their owne ymaginacions & after the mocions of their owne wic ked hart, & so turned the̅selues awaye and conuerted not vnto me. And thys haue they done, from the tyme ye your fathers came out of Egipt vnto this daye * Neuertheles, I sent vnto the̅ Jere.25.a my seruauntes all ye prophetes: I rose 29.c.44.a vp early and sent the̅ worde, yet wolde they not herke̅, nor offre me their eares but were obstinate, and worse then their fathers.

And thou shalt now speake all these wordes vnto them, but they shall not heare the: thou shalt crie vpon the̅, but they shall not answere the. Therfore D shalt thou saye vnto them: this is the people, that nother heareth ye voyce of the LORD theyr God, nor receaueth Jere.5.a his correction. * Faythfulnes & trueth is clene rooted out of theyr mouthe.
* Wherfore cut of thine heere, & cast Ezec.5.a it awaye, take vp a complaynte in the whole londe: for the LORDE shall cast awaye, and scattre the people, that he is displeased withall.

For ye chyldren of Juda haue done euell in my syght, sayeth ye LORDE.
* They haue set vp theyr abhomina- Jere.32.d haue defyled it. They haue also buylthat they might burne their so̅nes and Psa.105.c

And therfore beholde, the dayes shall come (sayeth the LORDE) ye it shall of the chyldren of Ennon, but ye valley be buried, because they shall els haue no rowme * Yee the dead bodyes of Jere.8.b this people shall be eate̅ vp of ye foules 9.c

* And as for ye voyce of myrth & glad Jere.16.b

The.viii.Chapter.

The wrathe of God, and the cause therof. Plages & mysery for to come.

A AT the same tyme, sayeth ÿ LORDE, the bones of the kynges of Juda, the bones of his prynces, the bones of the prestes and prophetes, yee and the bones of the citesēs of Jerusalē, shalbe brought out of theyr Deu.4.c graues and layed agaynst the * Sonne, 4.Re.23.a the Moone and all the heauēly hoost: whom they loued, whome they serued, whome they ranne after, whome they sought and worshipped. They shall nother be gathered together, nor buryed, but shall lye vppon the earth, to theyr shame and despysynge. And all they that remayne of this wycked generacy-Luce.23.c on * shall desyre rather to dye then to lyue: where so euer they remayne, and where as I scattre thē, sayeth ÿ LOR-DE of hoostes.

This shalte thou saye vnto them also: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Do men fall so, that they aryse not vp a-gayne? And turne they so farre awaye, that they neuer conuerte? Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalē gone so farre backe, that they turne not a-gayn? They are euer the longer ÿ more obstinate, and wyll not be conuerted.
Ezec.20.f For I haue loked, and cōsydered: * but ther is no mā, ÿ speaketh a good word: ther is no man, that taketh repentaūce for his synne, that wyl so much as say: B wherfore haue I done this? But euery mā (as soone as he is turned backe) rūneth forth styll, lyke a wylde horse in a of theyr trauayle: * but my people wyl not knowe the tyme of the punyshmēt of the LORDE. How darre ye saye then: we are wyse, we haue the lawe of the LORDE amonge vs?

Beholde the deceatfull penne of ÿ scrybes setteth forth lyes: therfore Deu.4.a shall ÿ wyse be confounded, they shalbe Psa.18.a afraied & take: for lo, * they haue caste out the worde of the LORDE. What wysedome can then be amonge them?
Wherfore, I wyll geue theyr wyues vnto alcaunters, and theyr feldes to destroyers. * For from the lowest vnto Eze.6.b the hyest, they folowe all shamefull lucre: and frō the prophet vnto the prest, they deale all with lyes. * Neuerthe- Esa.56.c with swete wordes, sayenge: Peace, Eze.13.b peace, where ther is no peace at all. Fye for shame, howe abhominable thynges do they? and yet they be not ashamed: yee they knowe of no shame. * Wher- Jere.7.a fore in the tyme of theyr visitacyō, they shall fall amonge the dead bodyes, sayeth the LORDE.

Moreouer I wyll gather them in C (sayeth the LORDE) so that ther shal not be one grape vpon the vyne, nother one fygge vpon the fyggetree, and the leaues shalbe plucte of. Then wyll I cause them to departe, and saye: Why prolonge we the tyme? Let vs gather our selues together, & go in to ÿ strōge cytie, there shall we be in rest: For the LORDE our God hath put vs to sy-lence, and geuen vs water myxte with gall to drynke, because we haue synned agaynst hym. * We loked for peace, & Jere.26.b we fare not the better: we wayted for the tyme of health, and lo, here is no-thynge but trouble. Then shall ÿ noyse of his horses be herde from Dan, the whole lande shalbe afrayed at the neyenge of his stronge horses: for they shal go in and deuoure the lande, with all that is in it: the cyties, and those that dwell therin * Moreouer, I wyl sende Leui.26.b Cockatrices and serpentes amōge you (whiche wyll not be charmed) and they shall byte you sayeth the LORDE.

Sorowe is come vpon me, and he-uynes vexeth my hart: for lo, the voyce of the cryenge of my people is herde frō a farre contry: Is not the LORDE in Siō? Is not he kynge in her? Wherfore then haue they greued me (shall ÿ LORDE say) with theyr ymages and foolysh straunge fashions? The haruest is gone, the Sommer hath an ende, and we are not helped. I am sore vexed because of the hurt of my people: I am heuy & abashed, for ther is nomore tria-cle at Galaad and ther is no phisician, that can heale the hurte of my people.

The.ix.Chapter.

The prophete mourneth and complayneth vpon the synnes of ÿ people.

B O* Who wyl geue my heade (margin: ...y.22.d) water ynoughe, and a well of teares for myne eyes: ỹ I may wepe nyght & daye, for the slaughter of my peo ple? Wolde God that I had a cotage somewhere farre frõ folke, ỹ I myght leaue my people, and go from them: for they be all aduoutrers and a shrenking sorte. They bende theyr tunges lyke bo wes, to shoute out lyes: As for ỹ truth they maye not awaye with, in all the worlde. For they go from one wyckednesse to another, and holde nothynge, of me sayeth the LORDE.

Yee one muste kepe hymselfe from Mich.7.a another * no man maye safely trust his chefe. They haue set theyr stoole in the myddest of deceat, and (for very dissem sayeth the LORDE.

Therfore thus sayeth the LORD of hoostes, beholde, I wyll melte them and trye them: for what shuld I els do Psal.27.a to my people? * Theyr tunges are lyke Psal.18.a sharpe arowes, to speake deceate.
With theyr mouth they speake peacea Jere.5.b they laye wayte for hym. * Shulde I not punysh them for these thynges, say B eth the LORDE? Or, shulde I not be auenged of ony such people, as this?

Upon the mountaynes wyl I take vp a lamentacyon and a sorowfull crye, & a mournynge vpon the fayre playnes of the wyldernesse: Namely how they are so brent vp, that no mã goeth there ony more: Yee a man shal not heare one beast crye there.

Byrdes and cattell are al gone frõ Psa.78.a thence. * I wyll make Jerusalem also Mich.3.c an heape of stones, and a denne of veni mous wormes. And I wyll make the cyties of Juda so waist, ỹ no man shal dwell therin. What man is so wyse, as to understand this? Or to whom hath the LORDE spoken by mouth, that he maye shewe this, and saye: O thou lande, why peryshest thou so? Wher fore art thou so brent vp, & lyke a wyl dernesse, that no man goeth thorowe?
Yee the LORDE hymselfe tolde the cause vnto them, that forsoke his lawe, and kepte not the thynge that he gaue them in commaundement, nother lyued therafter: * But folowed the wyckednesse Deu.29.d of theyr owne hartes, and serued Josu.24.c ght them.

Therfore, thus sayeth the LORD of hoostes, the God of Israel: * Be Jere.23.c

* I wyll scattre them also amonge the Deut.32.c Heythen, whom nother they nor theyr Jere.23.c fathers haue knowen: * ‡ I wyl sende ‡ deu.28.c

Moreouer, thus sayeth ỹ LORD of ues, & sende for wyse women: that they come shortly, & synge a mournyng sõge of you: that the teares may fall out of our eyes, and that our eye lyddes maye gushe out of water.

For ther is a lamẽtable noyse herde of Sion: O how are we so sore destroy ed? O how are we so petrously cõfoun dede? We must forsake our owne natu owne lodgynges. Yet heare the worde of the LORDE (o ye women) and let youre eares regarde the wordes of his mouth: that ye may learne your dough teach hir neyghbouresse, to make lamẽ tacyõ. Namely thus: Death is clymmẽ vp in at our wyndowes, he is come in to our houses, to destroy the chylde be

But tell ỹ planely, thus sayeth the D LORDE: * The dead bodyes of mẽ Jere.7.d shal lye vpõ ỹ groũde, as ỹ doũge vpõ and.8.b the felde, & as the hay after ỹ mower, & ther shalbe no mã to take them vp.
Moreouer, thus sayeth the LORD: Let not the wyse mã reioyce in his wys nother ỹ rych mã in his ryches: * But Esay.65.c who so wyll reioyce, let hym reioyce in 1.Cor.1.d

¶ He geueth them warninge, y they folowe not the vses and costumes of y Heithen, & sheweth the. How vayne a thynge it is to worshippe ymages, and to forget the true lyuynge God.

B For among all the wysemen of the Gentyles, and in all theyr kyngdomes ther is none, that maye be lykened vnto the. They are altogether vnlearned and vnwyse. All their connynge is but vanite: namely, wood, syluer, which is brought out of Tharsis, and beaten to Naum.1.a God, and an euerlastynge kynge. * Yf he be wroth, the earthe shaketh: all the Gētyles maye not abyde hys indignacion.

As for theyr goddes, it maye wel be sayd of them: they are goddes, y made nother heauen nor earth: therfore shall they perysh from the earth, and frō all thynges vnder heauen. But as for our Gene.1.a God he * made y earth wt hys power, and with hys wysdome hath he fynyshed the whole compasse of the worlde, with hys discrecion hath he spred out vp the cloudes from the vttermoost partes of the earth: he turneth lyghtenyng to rayne, and bryngeth forth the wyndes out of theyr treasuries: His wysdome maketh all men fooles. And confounded be all casters of ymages, for that they cast, is but a vayne thynge, y hath no lyfe. * The vayne craftesmen Esa.1.b vanyte haue made, shall perysshe one wt Jere.51

Put awaye thy vnclennesse out of the lande, thou that arte in the stronge cyties. For thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, I wyll now thrust out the inhabitours of this lande a great waye of, and trouble them of such a fashion, that they shall nomore be founde.

Alas, how am I hurte? Alas, how D paynefull are my scourges vnto me? For I consydre this sorow by my self, and I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my coardes are broken. My chyldren are gone fro me, and can no where be founde. Now haue I none to sprede oute my tente, or to set vp my hangynges. For the herdmen haue done foolishly, that they haue not sought the LORDE. Therfore haue they dealte vnwysely with theyr cattel and all are scattred abrode. Beholde, the noyse is harde at honde, and great sedicyon oute of the North: to make the cyties of Juda a wyldernesse, and a dwellynge place for Draggons.
* Now I knowe (O LORDE) that Pro.16 it is not in mans power to order his owne wayes, or to rule his owne steppes and goynges. Therfore chasten thou vs (o LORDE) but with fauoure and not in thy wrath, brynge vs not vtterly to nought. * Poure out thy in- Esa.64 of all the wordes of this conuenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe, which they

And the LORDE sayde vnto me, It is founde out, that whole Israel and to the blasphemies of theyr forefathers which had no lust to heare my worde Euen lykewyse haue these also folo-

Esa.19.c * Myne heretage is become vnto me, as a lyon in the wood. It cryed out vp pon me, therfore haue I forsaken it. Myne heretage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of dyuerse coloures vpon it. Go hence, and gather all ye beastes of the felde together, that they may come and eate vp:

¶ The plage vpon Jerusalem and Tophet.

MOreouer, thus sayde the A LORDE vnto Jeremy:
Go thy waye, and bye the an earthe pytcher, & bryng forth the Senatours and chefe prestes in to the valley of the chyl deren of Ennon, which lyeth before ye porte that is made of brycke, and shew them there the wordes, that I shal tell the, and saye thus vnto them: Heare ye worde of the LORDE, ye kynges of Juda, and ye cytesyns of Jerusalem:
Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoo-stes the God of Israell: * Beholde, I 4.Re.21.b wyll brynge suche a plage vpon thys Jere.6.d place, that the eares of al that heare it, shal glow. And that because they haue forsake me, and vnhalowed this place, and haue offered in it vnto straunge goddes: whome nother they, theyre fathers, nor the kynges of Juda haue knowne. They haue fylled thys place also wyth the bloude of innocentes, * for they haue set vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne theyre chylderen for a burntofferynge vnto Baal, whiche J nother commaunded, nor charged the, nether thoughte once therevpon.

B Beholde therfore * the tyme commeth (sayeth the LORDE) that thys place shall nomore be called Tophet, nor the valleye of the chylderen of Ennon, but the valleye of slaughter. For in thys place wyll J slaye the Senatours of Juda, and Jerusalem, & kyll them downe wyth the swearde in the syghte of theyre enemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues. And theyr dead carcasses wyll J geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre and beastes of the felde. And J wyll make thys cytie so desolate, & despysed: * that who so goeth therby, shall be abashed, and yeast vpon her, because of all hyr plages.

* J wyll fede them also wyth the fleshe of theyr sonnes and theyr doughters: Yee euery one shall eate vp another in the besegynge and straytnesse, wherwyth theyre enemyes (that seke theyre lyues) shall kepe them in. And the pytcher shal thou breake in the sight of the men, that shall be wyth the, and

C saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: * Euen so wyll J destroye this people and citie: as a potter breaketh a vessel, that can not be made whole agayne.

* In Tophet shall they be buryed, for they shal haue none other place. Thus wyll J do vnto thys place also, sayeth the LORDE, and to them that dwell therin: yee J wyl do to this cytie, as vnto Tophet (For the houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kynges of Juda are defiled, lyke as Tophet) because of al the houses, in whose parlers they dyde sacryfyce vnto all the hooste of heauen, and poured oute drynkeofferynges vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremy came fro Tophet, where the LORDE had sente him to propheсye, and stode in the courte of the house of the LORDE, & spake to all the people: Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Jsrael: Beholde, J wyll brynge vppon thys cytye and vppon euerye towne aboute it, all the plages that J haue deuysed agaynste them: * for they haue bene obstinate, and wolde not obeye my warnynges.

Pashur the chefe preste smyteth Jeremy the prophet, and putteth hym in preson, which sheweth him hys plage for to come.

The.xxii.Chapter.

The exorteth the kynge and al ẏ people to godlynes, and telleth what shall come of Sellum (otherwyse called Joas) the sonne of Josias: and what shall happen to Jechonias ẏ sonne of Joachim.

A Thus sayth ẏ LORDE also: Go down in to ẏ house of ẏ kyng of Juda, & speake there these wordes, & say: Heare the worde of the LORDE, thou kynge of Juda that syttest in the kyngly seate of Dauid: thou and thy seruauntes and the people, that go in and out at this gate. Thus the LORDE commaundeth:
Esa.1.c Iere.21.c Zach.7.b * kepe equite and ryghteousnesse, delyuer the oppressed from the power of ẏ violent: do not greue nor oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse nor the wydow, and shed no innocent bloude in this place.

And yf ye kepe these thynges faythfully, then shall ther come in at ẏ dore of this house, kynges, to syt vpon Dauids seat: they shalbe caryed in charrettes, and ryde vpon horses, both they & theyr seruauntes, and theyr people. But yf ye wyll not be obedient vnto Ese.45.c Iere.51.c Heb.6.b those commaundementes, * I sweare by myne owne selfe (sayeth the LORDE) this house shalbe waist. For thus hath the LORDE spoken vpon the kynges of Juda: Thou art the heade,

And all the people that go by this cytie, shall speake one to another: Deu.29.b 3.Reg.9.b * Wherfor hath ẏ LORDE done thus vnto this noble cytie? Then shall it be answered: because they haue broken ẏ couenaunt of the LORDE theyr God and haue worshipped & serued straūge goddes. * Mourne not ouer ẏ dead, & be not wo for thē, but be sory for him ẏ departeth awaye: for he cōmeth not agayn, & seyeth his natiue cōtre nomore. 4.Re.23.b
For thus sayeth the LORDE, as touchynge * Sellū ẏ sōne of Josias kinge of Juda, whiche reygned after his father, and is caried out of this place: 1.Par.3.b

He shal neuer come hyther agayne, for he shall dye in the place, where vnto he is led captiue, and shall se this lande nomore. * Wo worth hym, that buyldeth his house wt vnryghteousnes, and his parlers wt the good ẏ he hath gottē by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neghbours labour, nor payeth him his hyre. Dyd not thy father eate & drynke, & prosper well as longe as he dealte wt equite and ryghteousnesse? Yee when he helped ẏ oppressed & poore to theyr ryght, then prospered he well.

From whence came this, but only because he had me before his eyes? sayeth the LORDE. Neuerthelesse, as for thyne eyes and thyn harte, they loke vpon couetousnesse, to shed innocente bloude, to do wronge and violence.
4.Re.23.c and 24.a Iere.36.d * And therfore thus sayeth the LORDE agaynst Joachim, the sōne of Josias kynge of Juda: They shall not mourne for him (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas syster: Nother shal they saye vnto hym: Alas syr, alas for that noble prynce. But as an asse shall he be buried, corrupte and be cast without ẏ gates of Jerusalem.

D Clymme vp the hyll of Lybanus (o thou doughter Siō) lyft vp thy voyce vpon Basan, crye from all partes: for all thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warnyng, whyle thou wast yet in prosperite. But thou saydest: I wyll not heare. And this maner haste thou vsed from thy youth, that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. I wyll sende the, and the mother that

But as for the lande that ye wyll debe lyke an ymage robbed and torne in

O thou earth, earth, earth: hear the 1.Pet.4.b stondeth my worde, let hym shewe it faythfully.

For what hath chaf, and wheat to do together? sayeth the LORDE.
Is not my worde lyke a fyre (sayeth the LORDE,) and lyke an hammer ÿ breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: be-holde, I wyll vpõ the prophetes, that steale my worde preuely frõ euery mã.
Beholde, here am I (sayeth the LOR-DE) agaist ÿ prophets, that take vpõ their tunges to speake: The LORD hath sayde it. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the LORDE) agaynst those prophetes, that darre prophecye lyes, and deceaue my people with theyr vanities and myracles, whom I neuer sent, nor commaunded them. They shal do this people grat harme, sayeth the LORD. F Yf this people, other ony prophete or prest aske the, and saye: What is the burthen of the LORD? Thou shalte saye vnto them: What? burthẽ? Therfore wyll I cast you fro me (sayeth the LORDE) because ye your selues are a burthen. And ÿ prophete, prest, or people that vseth this terme (the burthen of the LORDE) hym wyll I vyset, & his house also.
But thus shal ye saye, euery one to another: What answere hath ÿ LOR-DE geuen? or, what is ÿ LORDES commaundement? And as for the burthen of the LORDE, ye shall speake nomore of it: for euery mãs own word is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of ÿ lyuynge God ÿ LOR-DE of hoostes, our God.
Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes: what answer hath ÿ LOR-DE geuen the? Or what sayeth the LORDE? And not once to name the burthen of the LORDE. Therfore thus sayeth the LORD: For so muche as ye haue vsed this terme (the burthẽ of the LORDE) where as I notwith standynge sent vnto you, and forbadde you to speak of ÿ LORDES burthẽ.
Beholde therfore, I wyll repute you as a burthen, and wyl cast you out of my presence: yee and the cytie also, that I gaue you and your fathers: and wyll brynge you to an euerlastynge cõfusion, and in to suche a shame, as shal neuer be forgotten.

The.xxiiii. Chapter.

¶ The vysion of the fygge maundes.

The LORDE shewed me A a vysion. Beholde, ther stode two maundes of fyg-ges before the temple of ÿ LORD, after that * Na- 4.Re.24.d buchodonosor kynge of Babilon had led awaye captiue Jechonias the sõne of Joachim kynge of Juda, the myghstye men also of Juda, with the workemasters and connynge men of Jerusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one maũde were verye good fygges, euen lyke as those that be fyrst rype. In the other maunde were verye naughtye fygges whiche myghte not be eaten, they were so euell.

Then sayd the LORDE vnto me: Osee.9.b what seyst thou Jeremye? I sayd: * fyg ges, wherof some be very good, & some so euel, that man maye eate them.
B Then came the worde of y LOR-DE vnto me, after this maner: Thus sayeth the LORDE, the God of Isra el: lyke as thou knowest the good fyg-ges, so shal I knowe the men led away out of Juda, whom I haue sent out of this place in to the lande of y Caldees, for theyr profyte: and I wyll set myne eyes vpon them for the best: for I wyll brynge them agayne in to this lande: I wyll buyld them vp, and not breake the Deu.29.a downe: I wyll plante them, & not rote Jere.30.d them out. * And I wyll geue them an 31.f.32.e harte, to knowe me, how that I am the LORDE. They shalbe my people, & I wyll be theyr God, for they shall re-Jere.29.c turne vnto me with theyr whole harte.
* And lyke as thou knowest the naughtye fygges, which may not be ea ten, they are so euell: Euen so wyll I (sayeth the LORDE) let Sedechias the kynge of Juda, (yee and all his prynces, and the resydue of Jerusalem that remayne ouer in this lande, & the also that dwell in Egipte) to be vexed and plaged in all kyngdomes and lan-Psal.78.a des. And wyl make the to be * a repro-, Bar.3.a. a comune byworde, a laughyng stocke, & shame, in all the places, where I shall scattre them. I wyll sende y swearde, honger and pestilence among them, vn tyll I haue clene consumed them out of the lande, that I gaue vnto them and theyr fathers.

The.xxv. Chapter.

He reproueth the kynge and all the people, and sheweth the punyshmēt for to come vpon the Heythen.

B A Sermonde that was geuen vnto Jeremye, vpon all the people of Juda: In y fourth yeare of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, y was in the fyrst yeare of Nabuchodo-nosor kynge of Babilō. Which sermon Jeremy the prophete made vnto al the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitours of Jerusalem, on this maner: From the.xiii. yeare of Josias the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto this present day, (that is euē.xiii. year) the worde of the LORDE hath ben commytted vnto me. * And so I haue Jere.29.c spoken vnto you, I haue rysen vp ear- 35.c.44.a ly, I haue geuen you warnynge in season, but ye wolde not heare me:
* Though the LORDE hath sente 2.pa.36.c his seruauntes, all the prophetes vnto you in season: Yet wolde ye not obeye, ye wold not enclyne your eares to hear He sayd: * turne agayne euery man 4.Re.17.c from his euell waye, and from youre wycked ymaginacyons, and so shall ye dwell for euer in the lande, y the LOR DE promysed you and youre forefathers: And go not after straunge god-des, serue them not, worshippe thē not and anger my not with the workes of your handes: then wyll not I punyshe you. Neuerthelesse, ye wolde not heare me (sayeth the LORDE) but haue de fyed me with y workes of your handes to youre owne great harme.
Wherfore, thus sayeth the LOR- B DE of hoostes: * Because ye haue not Jere.1.d herkned vnto my worde, lo, I wyl sēde out, and call for all the people, y dwell in the north (sayeth the LORDE) & wyll prepare Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon * my seruaunt, and Esay.45.a wyll brynge them vpon this lande, and Jere.27.a vpon all that dwell therin, and vpō all the people that are aboute them & wyll vtterly roote them out. I wyll make of them a wyldernesse, a mockage, & a cōtynuall deserte.
* Moreouer, I wyl take frō them Jere.7.d the voyce of gladnesse & solace, y voyce and.16.a of the brydegrome and the bryde, the voyce of the anoynted, with the cresshet tes: and this whole lande shall become a wyldernesse, and they shall serue the sayd people, and the kynge of Babilon thre score yeares and ten. * When the 2.par.36.d lxx. yeares are expyred, I wyll vyset al 1.Esd.1.a so the wyckednesse of the kynge of Ba Jere.29.a bilon and his people, sayeth the LOR and.29.b DE: yee and the lande of the Caldees, Dan.9.a and wyll make it a perpetuall wylder- zach.1.b nesse, and wyll fulfyll al my wordes vp pon that lande whiche I haue deuysed agaynst it: yee all that is wrytten in this boke, whiche Jeremy hath prophecyed of all people: so y they also shalbe subdued vnto dyuerse nacyons and greate kynges, * for I wyll recompence them Job.34.b accordynge to theyr dedes and workes of theyr owne handes.
For thus hath the LORDE God C of Israel spoke vnto me: * Take this Psa.74.b wyne cuppe of indignaciō frō my hōde Esay.51.d

that thou mayest cause all ye people (to whom I sende the) for to drynke of it: that whē they haue dronken therof, they may be madde, & out of theyr wyttes, whē the swearde cōmeth yt I wyl sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the LORDES hande, & made all the people drynke therof, vnto whō the LORDE had sent me.

But fyrst ye cytie of Jerusalē, & all the cyties of Juda, theyr kynges & princes: to make thē desolate, waist, despised, & cursed, accordynge as it is come to passe this daye. Yee & Pharao the kinge of Egipt, his seruaūtes, his prin ces, & his people altogether one wt another. And all kynges of ye lāde of Hus, al kynges of the Philistines lāde, Ascalon, Gaza, Accaron & the rēnaūt of Asdod, ye Edomites, the Moabites, & the Ammonites: all ye kynges of Tyrus & Sidon, ye kynges of the Iles, yt are beyonde the see: Dedan, Thema, Buz &
Jere.9.d *the shauē Ismaelites all the kynges of Araby, & (generally) al the kynges yt dwell in the deserte: all the kynges of Simri, al the kynges of Elā, al ye kynges of the Meedes, al kynges towarde the north (whether they be farre or nye) euery one with his neyghbours: Yee & all the kyngdomes yt are vpon ye whole earth. The kynge of Sesach (sayd he) shall drynke with them also.

D And saye yu vnto thē: this is the cōmaūdement of the LORD of hoostes the God of Israell: drynke & be dronken, spewe & fal, that ye neuer ryse: & yt thorow the swearde, which I wyl sēde amonge you. But yf they wyll not receaue the cuppe of thy hande, & drynke it, then tell them: Thus doth ye LORDE of hoostes threaten you: drynke it Jere.49.b ye shall, & that shortly. For lo, *I be-Ezech.9.b gynne to plage the cytie, that my name 1.Pet.4.c is geuen vnto: thynk ye then, yt I wyll leaue you vnpunyshed? Ye shall not go quyte. For why? I call for a swearde vpon al the inhabiters of the earth, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes.

Therfore tell them all these wordes, & saye vnto them: *The LORD Joel.3.c
Amos.1.a shal crye from aboue, & let his voyce be herde frō his holy habitacyon. With a great noyse shal he crye from his court regall. He shall geue a great voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) vpon al them that dwell on the earth, & the sounde therof shalbe herd vnto the endes of ye world. For the LORDE hath a iudgemēt to geue vpon all people, and wyll holde his court of iustice with al flesh, & punyshe the vngodly, sayeth the LORD.

For thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: *Beholde, a myserable plage Jere.30.d shal go frō one people to another, and a great stormy water shall aryse frō all the endes of the earth. And ye same day shall ye LORD hymselfe slaye thē, frō E one ende of the earth to another. Ther shall no mone be made for ony of them, none gathered vp, none buryed: but shall lye as dounge vpon the grounde.

Mourne (o ye shepherdes) and crye: sprenkle your selues wt asshes, o ye rāmes of the flocke: for ye tyme of youre slaughter is fulfylled, & ye shal fal lyke vessels connyngly made for pleasure.

*The shepherdes shall haue no Psal.141.a waye to flye, & the rāmes of the flocke shal not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horribly, & ye rāmes of ye flock shall mourne: for the LORD shal consume theyr pasture & theyr best feldes shall lye deade, because of the horrible wrath of the LORDE. They shal forsake theyr folds lyke as a liō: For theyr lādes shalbe waist, because of ye wrath of the destroyer, and because of his fearfull indignacyon.

The.xxvi. Chapter.

¶ Because the prophet rebuketh the people, the prestes and ye prophetes put hym to trouble: but at the last Ahicam delyuereth hym.

In the begynnynge of the reygne of Joachim ye sōne of Josias kynge of Juda, came this worde from the LORDE, sayenge: Thus sayeth ye LORD: *Stāde in ye courte Jere.7.a of the LORDES house, & speake vn and.17.d to all them (whiche out of the cities of Juda come to do worship in the LORDES house) all the wordes yt I commaūde the to saye. *Loke yt thou kepe Deut.4.a not one word backe, yf (peraduenture) and.12.b they wyll herken, & turne euery mā frō his wycked waye: *that I maye also Jere.18.a repente of the plage, which I haue de- Jone.3.b termyned to brynge vpō them, because of theyr wycked inuencyons.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto thē. Thus sayeth ye LORDE: yf ye wyll not obeye me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, & to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the prophetes, whome I sent vnto you, rysynge vp tymely and still fedinge: Yf ye will not folowe the (I saye) Jere.7.a then will I do to this house, * as I dyd vnto Silo and will make this citie to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the prestes, the prophetes, & all ŷ people herde Jeremy preach these wordes in the house of the LORDE.

B. Now when he had spoken out all the wordes, that the LORDE commaunded hym to preach vnto all the people: then the prestes, the prophetes, and all the people toke holde vpon hym, and sayde: Thou shalt dye. Howe darrest ŷ be so bolde, as to saye in the name of ŷ LORD: It shall happen to this house as it dyd vnto Silo: & this citie shalbe so wayst, ŷ no man shal dwell therin?

And when all the people were gathered about Jeremy in ŷ house of the LORDE, the prynces of Juda herde of thys rumoure, and they came soone out of the kynges palace in to the house of the LORDE, and sat them downe before the * new porte of ŷ LORDE.
4.Re.15.g
Jere.36.b Then spake the prestes, and the prophets and vnto the rulers, and to al the people these wordes: * This man Mat 26.g
Joh.19.a is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynste this citie, as ye youre selues haue herde it with your eares.
C Then sayde Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people: The LORDE hath set me to preach agaynst this house, and agaynst this citie, al the wordes that ye haue herde * Therfore amende Jere.7.a your wayes, and your aduysementes and be obedient vnto the voyce of the LORDE your God: so shall ŷ LORDE repent of the plage, that he hath deuised agaynst you. Now as for me: I am in your hondes, do with me, as ye thynke expedient & good. But thys shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to death, Mat.23.e * ye shall make your selues, thys citie and all the inhabitours therof, gyltie of innocent bloude. For this is of a treuth: that the LORDE hath sente me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayde the rulers and all the D people vnto the prestes and prophetes: This man maye not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the LORDE our God. The elders also of the londe stode vp & sayde thus vnto all ŷ people: Micheas Mich.1.a the Morasteite, * whiche was a prophete vnder Ezechias kynge of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda: Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes:
* Sion shalbe plowed lyke a felde, Jerusalem shalbe an heape of stones, and the hyll of the LORDES house shal be turned to an hye wood. Dyd Ezechias the kynge of Juda and ŷ people of Juda put hym to death for this? No verely, * but rather feared ŷ LORD, and made theyr prayer vnto hym. For the which cause also the LORDE repented of the plage, that he had deuised agaynst them. Shulde we then do such a shamefull dede agaynst our soules?
Mich.3.c
Jone.3.d
There was a prophete also, that preached stytly in the name of the LORD called Urias the sonne of Semeia of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this cytie & agaynst this lande, accordynge to all as Jeremy sayde. E
Now whan * Joachim the kynge with all the estates, and prynces had herde his wordes, the kynge wente about to slaye hym. * When Urias perceaued that, he was afrayed, and fled, & departed in to Egipte. 3.Re.22.d

Then Joachim the kynge sent seruauntes in to the lande of Egipte, Namely: Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, & certayne men with hym in to Egipte, which fetched Urias out of Egipte, & brought hym vnto kyng Joachim that slewe hym with the swearde, and caste his dead body into the comune peoples graue. But Ahicam the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremy, that he came not in to ŷ handes of ŷ people to be slayne.

The.xxvii. Chapter.

¶ God commaundeth the prophet for to make bondes and cheynes, to sygnifye the captiuite of the Heythen kynges.

In the begynnynge of the A reygne of Joachim ŷ sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, came this worde vnto Jeremy from the LORDE, which spake thus vnto me. Make the bondes and cheynes, and put them about thy neck, and sende them to ŷ kynge of Edom, the kynge of Moab, the kynge of Amon, the kynge of Tirus, & to the kynge of Sidon: and that by the messaungers, which shall come to Jerusalem vnto Sedechias the kynge of Juda, and byd them saye vnto theyr masters: Thus sayeth the LORD of hoostes the God of Israell, speake thus vnto your masters: * I am he that made ŷ Deu.10.c wer and outstretched arme, & haue ge-

...ll.10.a now wyll I delyuer all these landes in Moreouer, that people and kyngdome which wyll not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wyll not put theyr neckes vnder the yocke of the kynge of Babilon: the same people wyll I vyset with swearde, with honger, with pesti lence, vntyll I haue consumed them in his handes, sayeth the LORDE.

B *And therfore, folow not your pro Jere.15.c phetes, soythsayers, expoūders of drea vnto you: ye shal not serue the kinge of Babilon. For they preach you lyes, to brynge you farre from your lande, and that I myght cast you out, and destroy you. But the people that put theyr nec-kes vnder the yocke of the kinge of Ba bilon and serue hym, those I wyll let remayne styll in theyr lande (sayeth the LORDE) and they shal occupye it, and dwell therin.

All these thynges tolde I Sedechi-Jer.38.c as the kynge of Juda, and sayd: * Put your neckes vnder the yocke of ỹ kyng of Babilon, and serue hym and his peo ple, that ye maye lyue. Why wylt thou in my name: that I myghte the sooner dryue you out, & that ye myght perysshe with your preachers.

C I spake to the prestes also and to tie to be destroyed? But yf they be true prophetes in very dede, and yf ỹ wordes of the LORDE be commytted vnto them, then let them praye the LORD of hoostes, that the remnaūt of the or-namentes (whiche remayne yet in the house of the LORDE, and in ỹ house of the kynge of Juda and at Jerusalē) be not caryed to Babilō also. For thus hath the LORDE of hoostes spokē concernyng the pylers, the lauer, ỹ seat and the resydue of the ornamētes that yet remayne in this cytie, which Nabu

Yee thus hath the LORD of hoo-stes the God of Israel spoken, as tou-chynge the resydue of the ornamentes of the LORDES house, of ỹ kynge of Judas house, and of Jerusalem:
* They shalbe caryed vnto Babilon, 4.Re.25.b and there they shall remayne, vntyll I

* Then wyll I brynge them hether a- 1.Esd.1.b gayne. And this was done in the same yeare: euen in ỹ begynnyng of ỹ reygne of Sedechias kynge of Juda.

The. xxviii. Chapter.

Hananias the false prophet withstā-deth Jeremy.

But in the fourth yeare of ỹ A reygne of Sedechias king of Juda in the fyfthe mo-neth. It happened, ỹ Ha-nanias the sonne of Assur the prophete of Gabaon spake to me in the house of the LORDE, in the presence of the prestes, and of all the people, and sayd: Thus sayeth the LOR DE of hoostes the God of Israel: I haue broken the yocke of the kynge of Babilon * and after two yeare wyll I Jere.27.c brynge agayne in to this place, all the ornamentes of the LORDES house, that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babi lon caryed awaye from this place vnto Babilon. Yee I wyll brynge agayn Je chonias the sonne of Joachim ỹ kynge of Juda hymselfe, with all the preso-ners of Juda, (that ar caryed vnto Ba bilon,) euen in to this place, sayeth the LORDE: for I wyl breake ẏ yocke of the kynge of Babilon.

B Then the prophet Jeremy gaue answer vnto that prophete Hananias before the prestes and before all the peo ple, that were present in the house of ẏ Mich.3.c LORDE. * And the prophet Jeremy sayd: Amen, the LORDE do that, & graunt the thynge, which thou hast pro phecyed: that he maye brynge agayne all the ornamentes of the LORDES house, and restore all the presoners frō Babilon in this place. Neuerthelesse, herken thou also, what I wyll saye, ẏ thou and al the people may heare: The prophetes that were before vs in times past, whiche prophecyed of warre, or trouble, or pestilence, other of peace, vp pon many nacyons and greate kyngedomes, were proued by this (yf God Deu.18.d had sende them in very dede) * when ẏ Nu.16.a thynge came to passe, whiche that pro-phete tolde before.

And Hananias ẏ prophet toke the chayne frō ẏ prophet Jeremyas necke, & brake it: & so that sayd Hananias, ẏ al ẏ people myght heare: Thus hath ẏ LORD spoken: Euen so wyl I break the yocke of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilō, frō ẏ necke of all naciōs: yee & C ẏ within this two yeare. And so ẏ prophet Jeremy went his way. After now that Hananias the prophet had taken the chayne frō the prophete Jeremyas necke, and broken it, the worde of the LORD came vnto ẏ prophet Jeremy sayenge: Go, and tell Hananias these wordes: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Thou hast brokē the cheyne of wood, but in steade of wood, thou shalt make cheynes of yron. For thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Isra el: I wyll put a yocke of yron vpon the necke of al this people, ẏ they may ser-ue Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Ba-bilon, yee & so shal they do. And I wyll geue hym the beastes in the felde. Thē Jere.29.e sayd ẏ prophet Jeremy vnto ẏ prophet Hananias: * Heare me (I praye the) Hananias: The LORD hath not sent the, but ẏ bryngest this people in to a false beleue. And therfore thus sayeth ẏ LORD: beholde, I wyl sēde the out of the lande, & within a yeare ẏ shalt dye, because ẏ haste falsly spoken agaynst the LORD. So Hananias ẏ prophet dyed ẏ same yeare in ẏ seueth moneth.

The.xxix. Chapter.

¶ A letter of Jeremy sent vnto the pre

This is the copye of the let- A sent from Jerusalem vnto all the people, whome Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babilon: after the tyme ẏ kynge Jechonias, & his quene, his chā- 4.Re.24.

salem were departed thyther. Which Jere.24. lettre, Elasa the sonne of Saphan and Gamaria ẏ sonne of Helchia dyd bear whom Sedechias the kynge of Juda sent vnto Babilon to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon: these were ẏ wordes of Jeremias lettre: Thus hath B the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel spoken, vnto all the presoners, that were led frō Jerusalem vnto Ba-bilon: * Buylde you houses to dwell Jere. therin: plante you gardēs, that ye may prouyde wyues for your sonnes, & hus bandes for your doughters, that they maye get sonnes and doughters, and that ye maye multiplye there. Laboure not to be fewe, but seke after peace & prosperite of the cytie, wherin ye be pre in the peace therof shall your peace be. 1.Tim.

For thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: * Let not Jere. those prophetes, and soythsayers that and.27. be among you, deceaue you: and beleue not your owne dreames. For whye they * preach you lyes in my name, and Jere.14.
I haue not sent them, sayeth ẏ LOR-DE But thus sayeth the LORDE:
* When ye haue fulfylled.lxx. yeares 2.Pa. at Babilon, I wyll brynge you home, Jere. and of myne owne goodnes I wyll ca 1.Esd. rye you hether agayne vnto this place.
For I know what I haue deuysed for C you, sayeth the LORD. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, & not trouble (which I geue you alredy) and that ye myght haue hope agayne. * Ye shall Deu.4. crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon and.
me, and I shall heare you. ‡ Ye shall ‡Job.7. seke me, and fynde me: Yee, yf so be ẏ ye seke me with youre whole harte, I wyll be founde of you (sayeth ẏ LOR DE) & wyl delyuer you out of presō, & gather you together agayne frō amōg all nacyons, and out of al places, wher in I haue scattred you sayeth ẏ LOR-DE: and wyll brynge you agayne to ẏ same place, from whence I caused you be caryed awaye captyue.

But where as ye saye, that God hath raysed you vp prophetes at Babylon: Thus hathe the LORDE spoken (concernynge the kynge that sitteth in the seate of Dauid, and all the people that dwell in thys cytye, youre 4 Re.24.b brethren *that are not gone wyth you in to captyuyte) Thus (I saye) speaketh the LORDE of hoostes: Be-Jere.24.b holde, * I wyll sende a swearde, honger, and pestilence vpon them, and wyl make them lyke vntymely fygges, that maye not be eaten for bytternesse. And I wyll persecute them ŵ the swearde, B wyth honger, and death.

I wyll delyuer thē vp to be vexed of all kyngdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusyon of all the people, among whom I haue scattred them: and that because they haue not bē obediēt vnto my cōmaundementes, (sayeth the LORDE) D which I sente vnto them by my seruaū-Jere.25.a and.44.a tes the prophetes. * I rose vp earlye, and sente vnto them, but they wolde not hear sayeth the LORDE. Heare therfore the worde of the LORDE, all ye presoners, whome I sente from Jerusalem vnto Babylon: Thus hath the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell spoken, of Achab the sonne of Colaias and of Sedechias the son of Maasia, which prophecye lyes vnto you in my name: Beholde, I wyll delyuer them in to the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, that he maye slaye them before youre eyes. And all the presoners of Juda that are in Babylon, shall take vpon them thys terme of cursynge, and saye: Now god do vnto the, as he dydde vnto Sedechias and Achab, whome the kynge of C Babylon rosted in ŷ fyre, because they synned shamefully in Israell. For they haue not onelye defyled theyr neghboures wyues, but also preached lyenge wordes in my name, which I haue not commaunded them. Thys I testyfye E and assure, sayeth the LORDE.

But as for Semeia the Nehelamyte, thou shalte speake vnto hym: Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name, vnto all the people that is at Jerusalem, and to Sophonias the sonne of Maasia the prest, yea and sent them to al the prestes, wherin thou wrytest thus vnto hym: The LORDE hath ordened ŷ to be prest in steade of * Joiada ŷ preste, 4 Re.11.a 2.pa.23.a that thou shuldeste be the chefe in the house of the LORDE aboue all prophetes, and preachers, and that thou myghtest put them in preson, or in ŷ stockes. How happeneth it thē, that thou hast not reproued Jeremye of Anothot which neuer leaueth of his prophecienge? And besydes all thys, he hath sent vs word
* vnto Babylō, and tolde vs plainlye Jere.29.a that oure captyuyte shal longe endure: ŷ we shulde buylde vs houses to dwel therin, and to plante vs gardens, that we myghte enioye the frutes therof. Which lettre Sophonias ŷ preste dyd reade, & let Jeremye ŷ prophet hear it.

Then came the worde of ŷ LORDE vnto Jeremye, sayenge: Sende worde to all them that be in captyuyte on thys maner: Thus hath the LORDE spoken concernynge Semeia the Nehelamyte: * Because ŷ Semeia Jere.28.a hathe prophecyed vnto you wythoute my commissyon, and broughte you in to a false hope, therfore thus doth the LORDE certifye you: Beholde, I wyll vyset Semeia the Nehelamite, & hys sede, so ŷ none of hys shal remayn amonge thys people, and none of them shal se the good, that I wyl do for this people sayeth the LORDE: For he hath preached falsely of the LORDE.

The.xxx.Chapter.

¶ Jeremye (at the cōmaundement of God) wryteth hys sermons in a boke. Swete and comfortable promyses vnto the Godlye: Agayne, the wrath of God agaynste the wycked.

A These are the wordes, that the LORDE shewed vnto Jeremye sayenge: Thus sayeth ŷ LORDE God Jere.36.a of Israell: * Wryte vp diligentlye all the wordes, that I haue spoken vnto the, in a boke. For, lo the tyme commeth (sayeth the LORDE) that I wyll brynge agayne the presoners of my people of Israell and Juda, sayeth the LORDE: For I wil restore them vnto the lond, that I gaue to theyr fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the LORDE, concernynge Israell and Juda: Thus sayeth ŷ LORDE: We heare a terryble crye, feare & disquietnesse

B Alas for thys daye, which is so dre deful, that none maye be lykened vnto LORDE) and be not afrayed, o Is-bed. For I wyll geue the thy healthe a-gayne, and make thy woundes whole, sayeth the LORDE: because they reuyled the, as one caste awaye and de spysed, o Sion. For thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, I wyll sette vp * Jacobs tentes agayne, and defende Nu.24.d hys dwellynge place. The cytye shall be buylded in hyr olde estate, and the wyll multiplye them, and they shal not D tayne also shall come of them, and a Mich.5.a same tyme (sayeth the LORDE) shall I be the God of all the generacyons of Israel, & they shalbe my people.

The.xxxi.Chapter.

He putteth the people in mynde of the louynge mercye and benefytes of God, and comforteth them wyth hys promyses.

Thus sayeth the LOR-DE: * The people of Is- A raell which escaped in the Num.14. wildernesse from the swe arde, found grace to come in to theyr reste. Euen so shal the LOR-DE nowe also appeare vnto me from farre, and saye: I haue loued the wyth an euerlastynge loue, therfore do I Jer.3.e sprede my mercye before the. I wyll re- Math.2.c payre the agayne (o thou doughter of Israell,) that thou mayeste be fast and sure. Thou shalte take thy tabrettes a-gayne, and go forthe wyth them, that lede the daunce. Thou shalte plante vynes agayne vpon the hylles of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shall plante, and synge.
And whan it is tyme, the watch men vpon the mount of Ephraim shal [Ier.]31.a crye:* Arise, let vs go vp vnto Syon to oure LORDE God, for thus say= eth the LORDE: Reioyce wyth gladnesse because of Jacob, crye vnto the heade of the Gentyles: spake oute, synge, and saye: The LORDE shal delyuer hys people, the remnaunte of Israell, and make them whole. Be B holde, I wyll brynge them agayne frõ oute of the northlonde, and gather thẽ from the endes of the worlde, wyth the blynde and lame that are amonge thẽ, wyth the women that be greate wyth chylde, and suche as be also delyuerd: and ÿ cõpany of thẽ that come agayne shall be greate. They departed from hence in heuynesse but wyth ioye wyll I brynge them hether agayne, I wyll lede the by the ryuers of water in a straughte waye, where they shall not Deut.32.a stoble:* For I wyll be Israels father, Gen.48.d and Ephraim shall be my fyrstborn.

Heare the worde of the LOR= DE (o ye Gentyles) preache in the I= les, that lye farre of, and saye: He that hath scattred Israell, shall gather hym together agayne, and shal kepe hym as a shepherde doth hys flocke. For the LORDE shall redeme Jacob, and rydde hym from the hande of the vio= lente. And they shall come, and reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnesse of goodes, whiche the LORDE shal geue them: Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle yong shepe, and cal ues. And theyr conscience shall be as a wel watred gardẽ, for they shal nomor be hongrye.

C Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, ye bothe yonge and olde folkes. For I wyll turne theyre sorow into gladnesse, and wyll comforte thẽ, and make them ioyfull, euen frõ theyr hartes, I wyll poure plenteousnesse v= pon the hartes of the prestes, and my people shall be satisfyed wyth good thynges, sayeth the LORDE.

Thus saieth the LORDE:
Jere.3.e *The voyce of heuynesse, weppynge & Math.2.c lamentacion came vp in to heauen: euẽ of Rachaell mournynge for hyr chyl= deren, and wolde not be comforted, be= cause thy were awaye.

But nowe sayeth the LOR= DE: ceaue of from weppynge & crieng wythholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy laboure shall be rewarded, sayeth the LORDE. And they shall come agayne oute of the londe of theyr ene= myes: Yee euen thy posterytie shall haue consolacyon in thys (sayeth the LORDE) that thy chylderen shall come agayne in to theyr owne londe.

Morouer I herde Ephraim, (that was ledde awaye captyue) complayne on thys maner:* O LORDE, thou Ezech.20.f haste correcte me, and thy chastenynge haue I receaued, as an vntamed calfe.
* Converte thou me, and I shall be Tren.5.e converted, for thou arte my LOR= Zach.1.a DE God. Yee as soone as thou tur= nedst me, I shall refourme myselfe: and whan I vnderstonde, I shall smyte v= pon my thye. For verelye I haue com= mitted shamefull thynges: O let my youthe beare thys reprofe and confu= syon.

Upon thys cõplaynte, I thought D thus by my selfe:* is not Ephraim my Gen.48.a deare sonne? Is he not the chyld, with whome I haue hadde all myrthe and pastime? For sence the tym that I first communed wyth hym, I haue hym e= uer in remembraunce: therfore my ve= ry harte dryueth me vnto hym: gladly and louyngly wyll I haue mercye vp pon hym, sayeth the LORDE. Get the watchmen, prouyde teachers for ÿ: set thyne harte vpon the ryghte waye, that thou shuldeste walke, and turne agayne: (o thou doughter of Israell,) turne agayne to these cytyes of thyne.
Howe longe wylte thou go astraye, o thou shrenckynge doughter? For the LORDE wyl worke a newe thynge vppon earthe: A woman shall compas= se a man.

For thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell: It wyll come therto, that whã I haue brought Juda oute of captyuyte, these wordes shall be herde in the londe of Juda and in hys cytyes: The LORDE, which is the fayre* brydegrome of righteous Esa.62.a nesse, make the frutefull, o thou holye hyll: And there shal dwell Juda and all hyr cytyes, the shepherdes and husbãd men: For * I shall fede the hongrye soule, and refreshe all faynte hartes. Math.5.a Whan I herde thys, I came agayne and.11.c to myselfe, and mused, lyke as I hadde bene waked oute of a swete slepe.

Beholde (sayeth the LORDE) E the dayes come, that I wyll sowe the house of Israell, and the house of Iu= Deu.28.g da, wyth men and wyth cattell.* Yee Jere.32.e it shal come therto, that lyke as I haue Zacha.8.a gone aboute in tymes paste to rote the oute, to scattre them, to breake them downe, to destroye them, and chasten them: Euen so wyll I also go dilligent lye aboute, to buylde them vppe a-gayne, and to plante them sayeth the LORDE.

Eze.18.a * Then shal it nomor be sayd: The fathers haue eaten a sowre grape, and the chyldrens tethe are set on edge: for euerye one shall dye for hys owne mys dede, so y^t who so eateth a sowre grape Hebre. 8.b hys tethe shall be set on egge. * Be-holde, y^e dayes come (sayeth the LOR DE) that I wyll make a newe conue-naunte wyth the house of Israell, and wyth the house of Iuda: not after the conuenaunte that I made wyth theyre fathers whan I toke them by y^e hande and ledde them oute of the londe of Egypte: whiche conuenaunt they brake, wherfore I punysshed them sore, say-Hebr.10.b eth the LORDE: But * thys shall F be the conuenaunte that I wyll make wyth the house of Israell after those Esay.51.b dayes, sayeth the LORDE: * I wyll plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of them, and wryte it in theyre Jere.24.b and.30.b hartes, * and wylbe theyr God, & they shall be my people.

And from thenceforth shal no mā teache hys neghboure or hys brother, and say: knowe the LORDE: But they shall all knowe me, from the lowe-est vnto the hyghest, sayeth the LOR DE. For I wyll forgeue theyr mysde-des, and wyll neuer remembre theyre synnes onye more. Thus sayeth the Gene.1.b LORDE, * which gaue y^e Sonne to be a lyghte for the daye, & the Moone & starres to shyne in the nyght: whiche moueth the see, so y^t the floudes therof waxe fearce: hys name is the LOR-DE of hoostes. Lyke as thys ordi-naunce shal neuer be taken oute of my syghte, sayeth the LORDE: So shal the sede of Israel neuer ceasse, but alwaye be a people before me.

Moreouer thus sayeth the LOR-DE: Lyke as the heauē aboue can not be measured, and as the fundacyons of the earth beneth may not be sought Rom. 11.a oute: * So wyll I also not caste oute the whole sede of Israell, for that they haue commytted, sayeth the LOR-DE. Beholde, the dayes come sayeth the LORDE that the cytye of the 2.Ed.3.a LORDE shall be enlarged from Za.y.14.b the * towre of Hananeel, vnto y^e gate of the corner wall. From thence shall the ryghte measure be taken before her vnto the hyll toppe of Gareb, and shal come about Gaatha, * and the whole Jere.19.a valleye of the dead carcases and of the asshes, and all Seremoth, vnto y^e broke of Cedron: and from thence vnto the corner of the horsgate towarde y^e east, where as the Sanctuary of the LOR DE also shall be set. And whan it is now buylded & set vp of this fasshyon, it shall neuer be broken nor cast downe ony more.

The.xxxii. Chapter.

¶ The prophet beynge in preson sheweth the delyueraunce of the people oute of captyuyte.

These wordes spake the LORDE vnto Jeremye, A in the tenthe yeare of Sedechias kynge of Iuda, which was the.xviii. yeare of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as y^e kynge of Babylons hooste layed sege vnto Jerusalem. But Jeremye y^e prophet laye bounde in the courte of the preson, which was in the kynge of Iudas house: where Sedechias the kyng of Iuda caused hym to be layed, becau se he hadde prophecyed on thys maner: Thus sayeth the LORDE: * Be- Jere.21.a 27.a.34.a 38.a.39.a holde, I wyll delyuer thys cytye in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon, which shall take it. As for Sedechias the kynge of Iuda he shall not be able to escape the Caldees, but surelye he shall come in to the handes of the king of Babylon: which shall speake wyth hym mouth to mouth, and one of them shall loke another in the face. And Sedechias shall be caryed vnto Babylon and there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I vyset hym, sayeth the LOR-DE. But yf thou takeste in hande to fyghte agaynst the Caldees, thou shalt not prospere.

And Jeremye sayde: Thus hathe B the LORDE spoken vnto me: Be-holde, Hananeell the sonne of Sellum, thyne vncles sonne shall come vnto y^e, and requyre the to redeme the londe, that lyeth in Anathot vnto thyselfe:
* For by reason of kynred it is thy Leui.25.b Nu.27.a and.36.a Ruth.4.a parte to redeme it, and to bye it oute.

And so Hananeel myne vncles son came to me in the courte of the preson, (accordynge to the worde of y^e LOR DE,) and sayde vnto me: Bye my londe (I praye the) that lyeth in Anathot in the contrye of Ben Jamin: for by he ritage thou haste right to lowse it out for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceaued, that thys was the com-maundemente of the LORDE, and so I lowsed the londe from Hananeel of Anathot, myne uncles sonne, & wey ed hym there the moneye: euen seuen sy cles, and ten syluer pens.

I caused hym also to make me a wrytynge and to seale it, and called recorde therebye, and weyed hym there the moneye vpon the wayghtes. So I toke the euydence wyth the copy (whā it was orderlye sealed and redde ouer) and I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maa sia in the syghte of Hananeell my co-sin, and in the presence of the wytnes-ses, that be named in the euydence, and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the preson.

I charged Baruch also before them, sayenge: The LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell commaundeth the, to take thys sealed euydence wyth the coppye, and to lay it in an earthen vessell, that it maye longe continue. For the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell hathe determyned, that houses, feldes and vyneyardes C shall be possessed agayne in this londe.

Nowe whan I hadde delyuered the euydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias; I besoughte the LOR-DE, sayenge: O LORDE God.
Gen.1.a Jere.10.b * It is thou that haste made heauen and earthe wyth thy great power and hyghe arme, and ther is nothynge to Exo.34.a harde for the. * Thou shewest mercye vpon thousandes, thou recompencest the wyckednesse of the fathers, into the bosome of the chylderen that come after them.

Thou arte the greate and myghtye tye God, whose name is the LOR-DE of hoostes: greate in counsel, and infinyte in thoughte: Thyne eyes loke Rom.2.a vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren, * to rewarde euery one after his waye and accordynge to the frutes of hys in uencyons. Thou haste done greate tokens and wonders in the londe of Egypte (as we se thys daye) vppon the Exo 7.vn to the.15. chapter. people of Israell and vpon those men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe thys daye. * Thou haste broughte thy people of Israell oute of the londe of Egypte, wyth tokens, & wonders, wyth a myghty hande, with a stretchedoute arme, and with greate terryblenesse: and hast geuen them this londe, lyke as thou haddeste promysed vnto theyr fathers: Namely that thou woldeste geue them a londe, that flow eth wyth mylke and honye.

* Nowe whan they came therin, Jud.2.3.4 6.8 and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, & walked not in thy law: * but 2.Reg.5.b al that thou cōmaundedest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plages vpon them. Be-holde ther are bulworkes made nowe agaynst the cytye, to take it, and it shal be wonne of ye Caldees that besege it, wyth swearde, wyth honger, & death, and loke what thou haste spoken, that same shall come vpon them. For lo, all thynges are presente vnto the: Yet say este thou vnto me (O LORDE god) and commaundeste me, that I shal lose oute a pece of londe vnto myselfe, and take wytnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cytye is delyuered in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the D LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Be-holde, I am the LORDE God of all fleshe. Is ther onye thynge then to harde for me? Therfor thus sayeth the LORDE: * Beholde, I shall dely- Jere.25.b uer thys cytye in to the power of the and.39.b Caldees, and in to the power of Na-buchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, they shall take it in: For the Caldees shall come, and wynne thys cytye, and sette fyre vpon it, and burne it, wyth the gorgeous houses: in whose parlers they haue made sacrifyce vnto Baal, and poured drynckofferynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

For seynge the chylderen of Israell and the chylderen of Juda haue wroughte wyckednesse before me euer from theyre youthe vppe, what haue they els done, but prouoked me wyth the workes of theyre owne han-des: sayeth the LORDE.

Or, what hathe thys cytye bene els, but a prouokynge of my wrathe, euer sence the daye that I bupded it, vnto thys houre? Wherein I caste it oute of my syghte, because of the great blasphemyes of the chylderen of Israell and Juda, whiche theye haue done to prouoke me: yee they, theyr kynges, theyre prynces, theyr pre stes, theyr prophetes, whole Juda, and Jere.2.d al these cytezyns of Jerusalē. * Whan J stode vp early, & taught thē, and in= struct thē, they turned theyr backes to Jer.7 a.d me, & not theyr faces. They wolde not hear to be refourmed & correct. * They haue set theyre goddes in the house, ỷ is halowed vnto my name, to defile it.

They haue builded hie places for Baal in the valleye of the chylderen of En= non, to vowe theyr sonnes and dough= ters vnto Moloch: which J neuer cō= maunded them, nother came it euer in my thoughte, to make Juda to synne wyth suche abhomynacyon.
E Morouer thus hathe the LOR DE God of Jsraell spoken, concer= nynge thys cytye, which (as ye your sel ues confesse) shal be delyuered in to the hande of the kynge of Babylon, whan it is wonne wyth the swearde, wyth Deut.30.a honger, and wyth pestylēce. * Behold, J wyll gather them together from al londes, wherein J haue scattred them in my wrath, in my fear full and greate dyspleasure: and wyll brynge them a= gayne vnto thys place, where they shal dwell safelye. And they shall be my peo ple and J wyll be theyr God.
Psa.118.c * And J wyll geue them one hart and one way, that they may fear me all the dayes of theyre lyfe, that they and Eze.36.e theyr chylderen after them maye pros= pere. And * J wil set vp an euerlasting couenaunt wyth them, Namely: that J wyll neuer ceasse to do them good and that J wyl putte my feare in theyr hartes, so that they shall not turne a= Deu.39.b waye fro me. * Yee J wyll haue a lust Jere.31.e and pleasure to do them good, & faythe fully to plante them in thys londe, wyth my whole harte, and wyth al my soule.
For thus sayeth the LORDE:
lyke as J haue broughte all thys great plage vpon thys people: so wyll J also brynge vpon them all the good, that J haue promysed them. And men shall haue theyre possessyons in thys londe, whereof ye saye nowe, that it shall no= ther be inhabyted of people nor of cat= tell, but be delyuered in to the hondes of ỷ Caldees. Yee londe shalbe bought for moneye, and euidences made ther= vpon and sealed before wytnesses in ỷ contrye of Ben Jamin, and rounde a= boute Jerusalem: in the cytyes of Ju= da, in the cytyes that are vppon the mountaines, & in them that lye benethe yee and in the cytyes that are in the de= serte. For J wyll brynge theyre preso= ners hither agayn, saieth the LORD.

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

¶ A playne and manifeste propheeye of the kyngdome of Christe.

Morouer the worde of the LORDE came vnto Je= A remye on thys maner,
* whan he was yet bound Jer.37.a in the court of the preson: and.32.b Thus sayeth the LORDE which fulfylleth the thynge that he speaketh:

houses of thys cytye, and the houses of the kynges of Juda: that they shall be broken thorow the ordinaunce, & wea them: and they shall be fylled wyth the dead carcases of men, whome J wyll slaie in my wrath & dyspleasure: whan J turne my face from thys cytye, be= cause of all hyr wyckednesse: Beholde, (sayeth the LORDE) J wyll heale theyr woundes, and make them whole J wyll open them the treasure of pea= ce and treuthe.

And J wyll returne the captiuite B of Juda and Jsrael: and wyll set them vp agayn, as they were afore. * From Esa.41.b all mysdedes (wherein they haue offen

And all theyr blasphemyes which they haue done agaynste me, whan they re= garded me not, J wyl forgeue them.
And thys shall get me a name, & of the earthe, which shall heare all the

at the same tyme, I wyll brynge forthe 3.Re.2.b of Israell: * nother shall the prestes, and Leuytes want one to offre alway before me burntoffe rynges, to kyndle the meatofferynges, and to prepare the sacrifyces.

D And the worde of the LORDE came vnto Jeremye after thys maner: Thus saieth the LORDE: Maye Gen.8.d the conuenaunte * which I haue made wyth daye and nyghte, be broken that ther shulde not be daye and nyghte in due season? Then maye my conenaunt also be broken, which I made with Da uid my seruaunt, and so he not to haue 1.Pet.2.a a sonne to reygne in hys Trone. * So shall also the prestes, and Leuytes ne-Gen.15.a uer fayle, but serue me. * For lyke as and.22.c the starres of heauen maye not be nom bred, nother the sonde of the see measured: so wyll I multiplye the sede of Dauid my seruaunte, and of the Leuytes my mynysters.
Morouer, the worde of ỹ LOR-DE came to Jeremye, sayenge: Consydreste thou not what thys people speaketh? Two kynreddes (saye they) hadde the LORDE chosen, and those same two hath he caste awaye.
(For so farre is my people come, that they haue no hope to come together ony more, & to be one people agayne.) Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: Yf I haue made no conuenaunt wyth daye and nyghte and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: thē wyll I also caste awaye the sede of Dauid my seruaunte: so that I wyll take no prynce oute of hys sede, to rule the posteryte of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. But yet I wyll turne agayne theyre captyuyte, and be mercyfull vnto them.

The.xxxiiii.Chapter.

He sheweth the kynge Sedechias & the people theyre punyshemente, for breakyng the conuenaunte.

These are the wordes which A the LORDE spake vn to Jeremye, * what tyme Jere.39.a as Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, and all hys hooste (oute of all the kyngdomes that were vnder his power) and al his people foughte agaynste Jerusalem & all the cytyes thereof: Thus saieth the LORDE God of Israell: Go, and speake to Sedechias the kynge of Ju da, and tell hym: The LORDE sendeth the thys worde: Beholde, * I 4.Re.25.a wyll delyuer thys cytye in to the hand Jere.32.a of the kyng of Babylon, he shal burne and.39.a it, and thou shalte not escape hys han-des, but shalte be led awaye presoner, and delyuered in to hys power. Thou shalte loke the kynge of Babylon in ỹ face, and he shal speake wyth ỹ mouth to mouthe, and then shalte thou go to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the LORDE, o Sedechias thou kyng of Juda: Thus sayeth the LORDE vnto the: Thou shalte not be slayne wt the swearde, but shalte dye in peace.
* Lyke as thy forefathers the kinges, 1.Reg.31.c thy progenitours were brente: so shall thou be brente also, & in the mournyng they shall say: oh LORDE. For thus haue I determyned, saieth ỹ LORD.
Then spake Jeremye the prophet B al these wordes vnto Sedechias kyng of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hoste beseged Jerusalem, and the remnaunte of the cytyes of Juda: Namelye, Lachis and Azecha, whiche yet remayned of the 2.Pa.11.a *stronge fensed cytyes of Juda.

These are the wordes that the LORDE spake vnto Jeremy the pro phet, whan Sedechyas was agreed & all the people of Jerusalem, that ther Exod.21.a shulde be proclamed * a libertie: so that Leui.25.f euery man shulde go fre hys seruaūt Deu.15.b and handmayden Hebrue & Hebrnesse, and no Jewe to holde hys brother as a bondeman. In this also dydde al the prynces and all the people consente, which agreed vnto thys conuenaunte, that euery one shuld let hys seruaunt, and hys handmayden go fre & nomore to holde as bonde. Nowe as they had consented, euen so they were obedient, and let them go fre But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the ser uauntes and handmaides, whom they hadde letten go fee, and so made them bonde agayne.

¶ For the which cause the worde of the LORDE came vnto Jeremye from the LORDE hymselfe, say-enge: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israell: I made a conuenaunt wyth youre fathers, whan I brought them oute of Egypte, (that they shuld Exo.21.a no more be bondmē,) sayeng: * Whan let go fre hys bought seruaunte an He brue, yf he haue serued him syre yeares But youre fathers obeyed me not and herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned and dydde ryght before me, in that ye proclamed, euery mā to let his neghboure go fre, and in that ye made a conuenaunte before me in ye temple that beareth my name: But yet ye haue turned youre selues agayne, & blasphemed my name in thys, that eue ry man hathe requyred hys seruaunte and handmayden agayne, whome ye hadde letten go quyte and fre, and com pelled them to serue you agayn, and to be youre bondemen. And therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye haue not obeyed me, euerye man to proclame fre dome vnto his brother and neghboure: wherfore I wyll call you vnto a fredome sayeth the LORDE: euen vn to the swearde, to the pestilence, and to honger, and wyll make you to be pla-ged in all the kyngdomes of the earth.

Yee those men that haue broken my co uenaunte, and not kepte the wordes of the appoyntment, which they made be fore me: * whā they hewed the calfe in Gen.15.b two, and ther wente thorowe the two halfes: the prynces of Juda, the pryn-ces of Jerusalem, the gelded men, ye pre stes, and al the people of ye lond (which wente thorowe the two sydes of the calfe,) Those men wyl I geue in to the power of theyr enemyes, and in to the handes of them that folow vpon theyr lyues. * And theyr dead bodyes shal be Psa.78.a meate for the foules of the ayre, & beas Jere.7.d tes of the felde. As for Sedechias the kynge of Juda and his prynces, I wil delyuer them in to the power of theyre enemyes, and of them that desyre to slaye them, and in to the hande of the kynge of Babylons hooste, * whiche Jere.37.a nowe is departed from you. But tho-rowe my commaundemente (sayeth ye LORDE) they shall come agayne before thys cytye, they shall fyghte a-gaynste it, wynne it, and burne it. Mo reouer I wyll laye the cytyes of Juda so waist, that noman shal dwel therin.

The.xxxv. Chapter.

¶ He reproueth the dysobedience of the people, thorowe the good example of the Rechabytes.

The wordes which ye LOR DE spake vnto Jeremye, (in the raygne of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda) are these: Go vn- 4.Re.10.c to the house of * the Rechabites, and call them oute, and brynge them to the house of the LORDE in to some commodious place, and geue thē wine to drynke. Then toke I Jasanias the sonne of Jeremye, the sonne of Haba-zania, and hys brethren, and all hys sonnes, and the whole housholde of the Rechabites: and broughte them in to the house of the LORDE, in to the closet of the chyldern of Hanan the sonne of Igdalia the man of God: whiche was by the closet of the pryn-ces, that is aboue the closet of Maasia the sonne of Sellum, whiche is the kepe of the treasurye. And before the sonnes of the kynrede of the Recha-bites I sette pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them: drynke wyne. But they sayde: we drynke no wyne, For Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father cōmaunded vs, sayenge: Ye & youre sonnes shall neuer drinke wyne, * buylde no houses, sowe no sede, plante no vynes: yee ye shall haue no wynyardes, but for all youre tyme ye shall dwell in tētes, that ye maye lyue longe in the londe, wherin ye be straungers.

B Thus haue we obeyed the cōmaūdement of Jonadab, the sonne of Rechab oure father, in all ŷ he hath charged vs, and so we drinke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we, our wyues, oure sonnes, and our doughters. Nother buylde we ony house to dwell therin, we haue also amōge vs nother vynyardes, nor corne londe to sowe: but we dwel in tentes, we obeye, and do acordinge vnto all, ŷ Jonadab our father commaunded vs.

But now, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon came vp in to ŷ londe, we sayde: Come let vs go to Jerusalem, that we maye escape ŷ hooste of the Caldees and ŷ Assirians: and so we dwell now at Jerusalem. Then came ŷ worde of the LORD vnto Jeremy, sayenge: Thus sayeth ŷ LORD of hoostes the God of Israel: Go and tell whole Juda & all the inhabitours of Jerusalem: Wyll ye not be refourmed, to obeye my wordes? sayeth the LORDE. The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaūded his sonnes, that they shulde drynke no wyne, are faste & surely kept, for vnto thys daye they drynke no wyne, but

C obey theyr fathers cōmaūdement. But as for me, * I haue stonde vp early, I haue spoken vnto you, and geuen you earnest warnynge: and yet haue ye not ben obedient vnto me. Yee I haue sent my seruauntes, all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, and sēt you worde, sayenge: O turne you euery man from his wicked waye: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge goddes, to worshippe them: that ye maye continue in the londe, which I haue geuen vnto you & youre fathers but ye wolde nother heare me, nor folowe me.

The childrē of Jonadab Rechabs sōne haue stedfastly kept theyr fathers commaundement, that he gaue them, but thys people is not obedient vnto me. And therfor thus sayeth ŷ LORD of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyl brynge vpon Juda and vpō euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, all ŷ trouble that I haue deuysed agaynst them. * For I haue spoken vnto thē, but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuertheles they wolde geue me no answere. Jeremy also spake vnto the housholde of the Rechabytes Thus sayeth ŷ LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: For so muche as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Jonadab youre father, and kepte al his preceptes, and done acordynge vnto all that he hath bydden you: Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: * Jonadab ŷ sōne of Rechab shal not fayle, but haue one oute of hys stocke, to stonde alwaye before me.

The.xxxvi. Chapter.

¶ The kynge burneth the prophetes boke, but a greater is wrytten agayne for it, and the kynge punyshed.

In the fourth yeare of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, came the worde of the LORDE vnto Jeremy, sayēge * Take a boke, & wryte therin all ŷ wordes that I haue spoken to the, to Israel, to Juda, and to all the people, from ŷ tyme that I begāne for to speake vnto the (in the reigne of Josias) vnto this daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of ŷ plage, which I haue deuysed for thē, they maye peraduenture * turne euery mā frō his wicked waye ŷ I may forgeue their offēces & sinnes

Then dyd Jeremy call Baruch the sonne of Nerias, * & Baruch wrote in ŷ boke at the mouth of Jeremy, all ŷ wordes of ŷ LORDE, which he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremy cōmaūded Baruch sayenge: I am lette, so ŷ I maye not come in to the house of the LORDE: therfore go thou thyther, & reade the boke that thou hast wryttē at my mouth: Namely, ŷ wordes of the LORD, & reade thē in LORDES house vpō the fastynge daye: ŷ the people, whole Juda, & all they ŷ come out of the cyties of Juda, maye heare. Peraduenture they will praye mekely before the face of ŷ LORD and turne, euery one frō his wycked waye. For great is the wrath and displeasure, that the LORDE hath taken agaynst thys people.

Jere.30.c Jere.18.a Jere.45.a

So Baruch the sonne of Nerias B dyd accordinge vnto all that Jeremy the prophet commaunded him, readin-ge the wordes of the LORDE, out of the boke in the LORDES house.

And this was done in the fyfth yeare of Joachim the sonne of Josias kinge Jone.3.a of Juda in the .ix. moneth * when it was commaunded, that all the people of Jerusalē shuld faste before yͤ LOR DE, and they also that were come frō the cytyes of Juda vnto Jerusalem.
Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremy out of the boke within yͤ house of the LORDE out of the treasury of Gamarias the sonne of Saphan yͤ Jere.26.b scribe, whiche is besyde the hyer lofte of the * new porte of the LORDES house: that al the people myght heare.
Now when Micheas the sonne of Ga marias yͤ sonne of Saphan had herde all the wordes of the LORDE out of yͤ boke, he wente downe to the kinges palace in to the scrybes chambre: for there all the prynces were set, Elisama the scribe, Dalias the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, Gama ria the sonne of Saphen, Sedechias the sōne of Hananias, with all the prices. And Micheas tolde them all the wordes, that he herde Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.
Then all the prynces sent Jehudy the sonne of Nathamas, the sonne of Salmia, the sonne of Chusi, vnto C Baruch, sayeng: Take in thine honde the boke, wherout thou haste red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Nerias toke yͤ boke in his honde, and came vnto them. And they sayd vnto him: Syt downe, and reade the boke, that we maye heare also. So Baruch red, that they might heare.
Now when they had herde all the wor des, they were abashed one vpon another and sayde vnto Baruch: We will certifie the kynge of all these wordes.
And they examined Baruch, sayenge: Tel vs, how diddest thou wryte al these wordes out of hys mouth? Thē Ba ruch answered them: He spake al these wordes vnto me with his mouth, and J alone was with hym and wrote thē in the boke.
Then sayde the prynces vnto Baruch: Go thy way, & hyde yͤ & Jeremy so that no mā knowe where ye be. And they went in to the courte to the kinge.
But they kepte the boke in yͤ chābre of Elisama the scrybe, and tolde yͤ kynge al yͤ wordes, that he myght hear. So yͤ kynge sent Jehudi to fetch him the boke, whiche he brought out of Elisama the scrybes chambre. And Jehudi red it that the kynge & all the prynces, which were aboute him, might heare. Now the kynge sat in the wynter house: for it was in the .ix. moneth, and ther was a good fyre before hym. And when Je-hudi had red thre or foure leaues thereof, he cut yͤ boke in peces with a pēne knyfe, * and cast it in to the fyre vpon 1.Mac.15 the herth, vntil the boke was all brēte in the fyre vpon the herth. Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente hys clothes: nother yͤ kynge hym selfe, nor his seruauntes, though they herde all these wordes. Neuertheles Elnathan, Dalias and Gamarias, besoughte the kynge, that he wold not burne yͤ boke: not withstōdinge the kynge wolde not heare them, but commaunded Jerah-miel the sonne of Amalech, Sarias the sōne of Esriel, & Selamia yͤ sōne of Ab diel, to laye hondes vpon Baruch the scrybe, and vpon Jeremy the prophet: but the LORDE kepte them out of sight. After now yͤ the kynge had brēte B the boke, and the sermons which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy, The worde of the LORDE came vn to Jeremy sayenge: Take another boke, and write in it all the forsayde sermons that were writtē in yͤ first boke, which Joachī the kynge of Juda hath brente.
And tell Joachim the kynge of Juda, Thus sayeth the LORDE: thou hast brente the boke, and thoughtest so in thy selfe: Why hast thou writtē ther in, that the kynge of Babilon shall come, and make this londe waist so that he shall make both people and catel be out of it? Therfor thus the LORDE sayeth of Joachim the kynge of Juda:
* Ther shall none of hys generacyon 4.Re.24.b syt vpon the seate of Dauid. * Hys Jere.22.d dead coarse shalbe caste out, yͤ the heat of the daye, and the frost of the nighte maye come vpon hym: And J will vy-set the wickednes of hym, of hys sede, and of his seruauntes. Moreouer all yͤ euell that J haue promised thē (though they herde me not) wyll J bringe vpon them, vpon the inhabitours of Jerusa lem, and vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremy another boke, and gaue it Ba ruch yͤ scribe the sōne of Nerias, which wrote therī out of yͤ mouth of Jeremy al the sermons ẏ were in the first boke, which Joachim the kinge of Juda dyd burne. And ther were added vnto thē many mo sermons, then before.

also was come out of Egipte: whiche when the Caldees that beseged Jerusalem, perceaued, they departed from thence.

Then came the word of the LOR DE vnto Jeremy the prophet, sayeng: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel. This answere shall ye geue to B the kynge of Juda, that sent you vnto Jer.46.a me for counsell: * Beholde, Pharaos hoost which is come forth to helpe you shall returne to Egipte in to his owne lande: But the Caldees shall come a-gayne, & fyght agaynst this cytie, wyneth the LORDE: deceaue not youre theyr way. For though ye had slayn the whole hoost of the Caldees that besege set fyre vpon this citie. Now when the hoost of the Caldees was broke vp frō warde the lande of Ben Jamin, to do mins porte, ther was a porter called Je rias the sonne of Selamia the sonne of * Hananias, which fell vpon hym and Jere.28.a toke hym, sayeng: thy mynde is to ryse to the Caldees. Then sayd Jeremy: It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Ne-uerthelesse Jerias wold not beleue him but brought Jeremy boūd before ẏ prin ces. Wherfore the prynces were angry with Jeremy, causynge hym to be beaten, and to be laied in preson in ẏ house of Jonathas the scribe: For he was the ruler of the preson. Thus was Jeremy put in to the doungeon and pre-son, and so laye there a longe tyme.

* Then Sedechias the kynge sent for Jere.38.b hym, and called hym, and axed hym qui etly in his owne house, sayenge: thyn-kest thou this busynes (that now is in hande) commeth of the LORDE? Jeremy answered: yee that it doth: & thou (sayd he) shalt be delyuerd in to ẏ kyng of Babilons power.

Moreouer, Jeremye sayd vnto D kynge Sedechias: What haue I offen ded agaynst the, agaynst thy seruauntes, or against this people, that ye haue caused me to be put in presō. * Where Je.28.b ar your prophetes, which haue prophe cyed vnto you and sayd, that the kyng of Babilon shulde not come agaynst you and this lande? And therfore heare now, o my lorde the kyng: let my prayer be accepted before the, and sende me no more in to the house of Jonathas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then Sedechias the kyng commaunded to put Jeremye in the forentrye of the preson, and daylye to be geuen hym a cake of breade, and els no dyght meate, vntyll all the bread in the cytie was eaten vp.
Thus Jeremy remayned in the forentry of the preson.

The.xxxviii.Chapter.

¶ The prynces laboure to haue ẏ pro phete dead, they put hym in a sorer pre son: but Abdemelech getteth hym out, and the kynge communeth with hym.

Saphatias the sonne of Ma A than, Godolias the sōne of Pashur, Juchal the sonne of Selamia, and Pashur ẏ sonne of Malchias percea-ued the wordes that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people, namely on this maner: Thus sayeth the LORDE:
* Who so remayneth in this cytie, shal Jere.21.b perysh ether with the swearde, & hon- and.27.b ger, or with pestilence: But who so fal leth vnto the Caldees, shal escape, wyn nyng his soule for a pray, and shal lyue.

Jere.32.a *For thus sayeth ẏ LORDE. This citie (no doute) muste be delyuered in to the power of the kynge of Babilon, & he also shall wynne it. Then sayde the prynces vnto ẏ kynge: Syr we beseche you let thys man be put to deathe, For thus he discorageth the handes of the souldyers that be in thys citie, and the hondes of all the people, when he speaketh suche wordes vnto thē. This mā verely laboureth not for peace of the people, but myschefe. Sedechias the kynge answered and sayde: lo, he is in your hondes, for the kynge maye deny you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremy, & caste him in to the doungeon of Mal chias the sonne of Amelech, that dwelt in the forentry of the preson. And they let downe Jeremy with coardes in to a doungeon, where ther was no water, but myre. So Jeremy stacke fast in the B myre. Nowe whē Abdemelech the Mo rian beyng a chamberlen in the kynges courte, vnderstode, that they had caste Jeremy into the doūgeon: he went out of the kynges house, and spake to the kynge (whiche then sat vnder the porte of Ben Jamin) these wordes: My lord the kynge, where as these men medle with Jeremy the prophet, they do hym wronge: Namely, in that they haue put him in presō, there to dye of honger, for ther is no more breade in the citie. Thē the kynge cōmaunded Abdemelech the Morian, and sayde: Take from hence xxx. men whom thou wylte, and drawe vp Jeremy the prophet out of the doū-geon, before he dye. So Abdemelech to-ke the men with hym, and wente to the house of Amelech, and there vnder an almery he gat olde ragges and worne cloutes, and let thē downe by a coarde, in to the doungeon to Jeremy.

And Abdemelech the Morian sayde vnto the prophet Jeremy: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwexte them and the coardes: and Jeremy dyd so. So they drewe vp Jeremy with coardes, and toke hym out of the doungeon, and he remayned in the fore entrie of the preson. Then C *Sedechias the kynge sent and caused Jere.37.c Jeremy the prophet be called vnto him in to the thyrde entrie, that was by the house of the LORDE. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremy: I wyll axe the som what, but hyde nothyng fro me. Then Jeremy answerde Sedechias: Yf I be playne vnto the, thou wylte cause me suffer death: yf I geue the counsel, thou wylt not folowe me. So ẏ kyng sware an oth secretly vnto Jeremy, sayenge: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wyl not slaye the, nor geue the in to the hōdes of thē, that seke after thy lyfe.

Thē sayde Jeremy vnto Sedechias: Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: *Yf case be, that Jere.17.d thou wylt go forthe vnto the kynge of Babylons prynces, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and thys citie shal not be brent, yee bothe thou & thy housholde shal escape with your lyues. But yf thou wilt not go forthe to the kynge of Babilōs prin ces, then shall this citie be delivered in to the hōdes of the Caldees which shal set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be a ble to escape thē. And Sedechias sayde vnto Jeremy: I am afrayde for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees, lest I come in theyr hōdes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremy answered: No, they D shal not betray the: O herken vnto the voyce of the LORDE (I beseke the) which I speake vnto the, so shalt thou be well, and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wylt not go forthe, ẏ LORDE hathe tolde me this playnly: Beholde, all the women that are lefte in ẏ kynge of Judas house, shall go out to the kynge of Babilons prynces. For they thynke, that thou arte deceyued: and that the mē in whom thou diddest put thy trust haue gotten the vnder, and set thy fete fast in the myre, & are gone theyr ways from the. Therfore all thy wyues with theyr chyldrē shal flye vnto ẏ Caldees, and thou shalt not escape theyr hondes but shalt be the kynge of Babilons pre soner, and this citie shalbe brent. Then said Sedechias vnto Jeremy: loke that no body knowe of these wordes, & thou shalt not dye. But yf ẏ prīces perceaue that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, saieng: O speake, what sayde the kynge to the? hyde it not from vs, and we wyll not put the to deathe. Tel vs (we pray the) what sayde the kynge to the? Se thou geue thē this answere: I haue humbly besought the kynge, that he wyl let me lye nomore in Jona-thas house, that I dye not there. Then came all the prynces vnto Jeremy, and axed hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kynge bad him. Thē they held theyr peace, for they perceaued no Jere.39.a thynge. * So Jeremye abode styll in ỹ forentrye of the preson, vntyll the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

The.xxxix.Chapter.

¶ The cytie of Jerusalem is wonne, the kynge taken, his sõnes and princes slaine before his face, his own eyes put out, and he led vnto Babilon. But Jeremy and Abdemelech escape.

Jere.52.b * Moreouer, the Caldees brente vp the kynges palace, & the other houses of the people, & brake downe ỹ walles of Jerusalẽ. ye haue in keppynge.

Yee all the Jewes also that dwelte they were fled vnto, and came in to the Moreouer Johanna the sonne of D and sayd vnto hym: knowest thou not that Baalis kynge of the Ammonites sonne of Ahicam beleued them not.

Then sayd Johanna the sonne of Ca-Nathanias, so that no body shal know but lyes, that men saye of Ismael.

And whan they returned, they cam to Johanna the sonne of Carea. But Ismael the sōne of Nathanias fled frō Johanna with eyght of his sworne cōpanyons, and wente to the Ammonites. The.xlii. Chapter.

The captaynes are counsel at Jeremy, but folowe hym not.

So all the rulers, and Johanna the sonne of Carea, Jesanias the sonne of Osias came with all the people from the least vnto the moost and sayd vnto Jeremy the prophete: *O heare oure peticyon, þ thou mayest praye for vs vnto the LORDE thy God, & for þ rēnaunt, wherof ther be very fewe lefte of many, as þ seyst vs: that the LORDE thy God maye shewe vs a waye to go in and tell vs, what we shulde do. Then Jeremy the prophete sayd vnto them: I haue herde you. Beholde, I wyll praye vnto God youre LORDE, as ye haue requyred me and loke what answere the LORDE geueth you, I shall certifie you therof, and kepe nothynge backe from you. And they sayd vnto Jeremy: *The LORDE of trueth and faythfulnesse be our recorde, that we wyl do all that the LORDE thy God cōmaundeth vs, whether it be good or euell. We wyl herken vnto the voyce of our LORDE God, to whom we sende the: that we maye prospere, whan we haue folowed the voyce of the LORDE our God. B Jere.27.a and 37.a Josu.7.c Jere.43.a 1Mat.2.a

And after ten dayes came þ worde of the LORDE vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanna the sonne of Carea, and al the captaynes of the people that were with hym: Yee and all the people from the least to the moost, and said vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel vnto whom ye sent me, to laye forth your prayers before hym: *Yf ye wyll dwel in this lande, I shal buyld you vp, & not break you downe: I shall plante you, and not roote you out: for I am pacyfied, as concernyng the trouble that I haue done to you. Feare not the kinge of Babilō, of whō ye stande in awe: O be not afrayed of hym, sayeth the LORDE: for I wyll be with you, to helpe you, and delyuer you from his hande. I wyll pardō you I wyll haue mercy vpon you, & brynge you agayne in to your owne lande. B Jere.21.b Neuerthelesse, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this londe, nor to folowe the C

voyce of the LORDE your God: but wyll saye thus: we wyll not dwel here, but go in to Egipte, where we shal no ther se warre, heare the noyse of batayll, nor suffre honger, there wyll we dwell: Then heare the worde of the LORDE, o ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: * Yf ye be wholy purposed to go in to Egipte and to be there as straungers: the swearde, * that ye feare shall ouertake you in Egipte, & the honger wherof ye be here afrayed, shall hange vpon you in to Egipte, and there shall dye. For all they, that of set purpose vndertake to go in to Egipte, there to ease them selues of theyr myserye, shall perysshe with the sweard, with honger & pestilence: not one of thē shal remayne, ther shal none escape the plage, that I wyll brynge vp pon them.

Jere.41.c

D For thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell: lyke as my wrath and indignacyon is come vpon the inhabitours of Jerusalem, so shall my displeasure go forth vpō you also, yf ye go in to Egipte: For there ye shalbe reupled, abhorred, broughte to shame and confusyon, and as for this place, ye shall neuer se it more. The LORDE forbyddeth you (o ye remnaunt of Juda) that ye shall not go in to Egipte. And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this day, els shal ye begyle your selues. * For ye sent me vnto the LORDE your God, & said: O praye thou the LORDE our God for vs, and loke what answer ŷ LORDE our God geueth the, that brynge vs agayne, and we shall do therafter. Now haue I shewed, and declared vnto you the voyce of the LORD youre God, for the which cause he hath sente me to you. * Yf ye wyll not folowe it, be sure, that ye shall perysshe with the swearde, with honger and pestilence: euen in the same place, where youre lust was to go and dwell.

¶ They wyll nedes go in to Egipte agaynst the commaundement of God. The prophete exhorteth them to the cōtrarye.

A Now when Jeremy had ended al ŷ wordes of ŷ LORDE God vnto the people, (for theyr sakes to whome God had sent hym) Asarias the sonne of Osias, and Johanna the sonne of Carea, with al the proude personnes, sayd vnto Jeremy: * Thou lyest, the LORDE our God hath not sente the to speake vnto vs, that we shulde not go in to Egipte, and dwell there: But Baruch the sonne of Nerias prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myght brynge vs in to the captiuite of the Caldees: that they myght slaye vs, and carye vs awaye presoners vnto Babilon.

So Johanna the sōne of Carea, & all the captaynes of the hoost, and al ŷ people folowed not the commaūdemēt of the LORDE: Namely, to dwell in the londe of Juda: But Johanna the sonne of Carea and all the captaynes of the hoost, caryed awaye all the remnaunt in Juda, * that were come together agayne from the Heythen (amōge whom they had bene scattred) to dwell in the lande of Juda: Men, women, chyldrē, the kynges doughters: al those that Nabusaradan the chefe captayne had lefte with Godolias the sonne of Ahicam. They caryed awaye also the prophete Jeremy, Baruch the sōne of Nerias, & so cam in to Egipte: for they were not obediēt vnto ŷ cōmaūdemēt of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

This is the worde that was shewed to Jeremy cõcernyng all the Jewes, wich dwelte in Egypte at Magdall, at Taphnis, at Mẽphis, & in ẏ lond of Patures. Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell: Ye haue sene all the myserye, that I haue broughte vppon Jerusalem, and vpon all the cytyes of Juda: so that thys daye they are desolate, and no man dwellynge therein: and that because of the greate blasphemyes, whiche they commytted, to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they wente backe to do sacryfyce and worshyppe vnto straunge goddes: whome nother they, nor ye, nor youre fathers haue knowen. Howe be it, I sente vnto them my seruauntes all the Prophetes: * I rose vppe earlye, I sente vnto them, and gaue them warnynge: O do not such abhominable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But theye wolde not folowe, nor herken to turne from theyre wyckednesse, and to do no more sacryfyce vnto straunge Goddes.

Wherfore my indignacyon and wrath was kyndled, and it brent vppe the cytyes of Juda, the feldes wyth the stretes of Jerusalem: so that theye were made wayste and desolate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Nowe therfore thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell: Howe happeneth it, that ye do so greate euell vnto youre owne soules, thus to destroye the men and women, chylderen and babes of Juda? so that none of you is lefte, because ye prouoke me vn to wrathe wyth the workes of youre owne handes: Ye offre vnto straunge goddes in the londe of Egypte, where as ye be gone to dwell: That ye myghte vtterlye perysshe, and that ye myghte be reupled, and shamefully intreated of all nacyons. Or haue ye now forgottẽ the wyckednesse of youre forefathers, the wyckednesse of the kynges of Juda and theyre wyues, the wyckednesse that ye youre selues, and youre wiues haue done in ẏ londe of Juda, in the cytye and in the londe of Jerusalem?

Yet are ye not sorye thys daye, ye fear not, nother walke ye in my law and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you and youre forefathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell: I am stedfastlye adupsed and determyned, to punysh you, and to roote out al Juda. As for the remnaunte of Juda, that purposlye wente in to Egypte, there to ease them of theyre myserye: I wyll take them, * and they shall all be destroyed. In the londe of Egypte shall they perysshe, beynge consumed wyth the swearde and wyth honger. For from the leeste vnto the mooste, they shall perysshe wyth the swearde, and wyth honger. Moreouer they shall be reupled, abhorred, shamed and confounded. For I wyll vyset them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue vysyted Jerusalem: wyth the sweard, with honger and wyth pestylence: So that none of the remnaunte of Juda, which are gone to dwell in Egypte, shall be lefte to come agayne in to the londe of Juda: althoughe they thynke to come thyther agayne, and to dwell there. For none shall come agayne but suche as are fled awaye.

Go vp (o thou auenger) in to ÿ enemies londe, and vyset them that dwell therein: downe with them, and smyte them vpon the backes, saieth ÿ LORDE: do accordinge to all, that I haue cōmaunded the. Ther is gone aboute the londe a crie of a slaughter & greate murthur, namely on this maner: How hapeneth it, ÿ the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and brused in sonder? How chaunceth it, that Babilon is become a wyldernesse amonge ÿ Heythē on this maner? I my self haue layed wayte for ÿ, and thow art takē, vnwarres art thou trapped and snared, for why? thou hast prouoked ÿ LORDE vnto anger. The LORDE hath opened his house of ordinaunce, and brought forth ÿ weapens of is wrath. For the thinge ÿ is done in the lōde of the Caldees, it is the LORDE of hoostes worke.

E These thynges shal come vpon her at ÿ last, they shall breake in to hir preuy chābres, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layed together vpon heapes. to make the lande of Babilon so wayst that no man shall dwell ony more therin.

K This is the charge ŷ Jeremy gaue vnto Sarias the sonne of Nerias, the sonne of Maasia, when he wente towarde Babilon with Sedechias the kynge of Juda, in the fourth yeare of his raygne. Now this Sarias was a peaceable prynce. Jeremy wrote in a boke, al the mysery that shuld come vppon Babilon, yee and all these sermōs that be wrytten agaynst Babilon, and gaue Sarias this charge: Whan thou cōmest vnto Babilon, se that thou rede all these wordes, and saye: O LORD thou arte determyned to roote out this place, so ŷ nother people nor cattel shal dwell there ony more, but to lye waist for euer: and when thou hast redde out the boke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye:

Apo,18.c *Euen thus shall Babilon synke, and be thruste downe with the burthen of trouble, that I wyll brynge vpon her: so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachynges of Jeremye.

The lii. Chapter.

A recytynge how Jerusalem was beseged, wonne, and taken.

Sedechias *was .xxi. yeare olde, whan he was made kynge, and he raygned .xi. yeares in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamuthal, Jeremyes doughter of Lobna. He lyued wyckedly before the LORD euen as Joachim dyd. Wherfore the LORDE was angrye at Jerusalē and Juda, so longe tyll he had cast thē out of his presence. And Sedechias fel from the kynge of Babilon. *But in the .ix. yeare of his raigne, in the tenth moneth, ŷ tenth day of ŷ moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon with al his hoost came before Jerusalem, and beseged it, and made hym bulworkes rounde aboute it. And this besegynge of the cytie endured vn to the .xi. yeare of kynge Sedechias.

*And in the fourth moneth the .xi. daye of the moneth, ther was so greate honger in the cytie: that ther were no more vytayles for the people of ŷ lāde. So all the souldyers brake awaye, and fled out of the cytie by nyght, thorowe the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Now ŷ Caldees had cōpassed the cytie rounde aboute, yet wente these men theyr waye towarde the wyldernesse. And so the Caldees folowed vpon them, and toke Sedechias the kynge in the felde of Jericho, whan his hooste was rūne from hym. So they caryed the kynge awaye presoner to Reblatha, vnto the kynge of Babilon in the lande of Hemath *where he gaue iudgemēt vpon hym. The kyng of Babilon also caused Sedechias sōnes be slayne before his face, yee and put all the prynces of Juda to death at Reblatha. Moreouer he put out the eyes of Sedechias, caused hym be bounde with cheynes, to be caryed vnto Babilon: & let hym lye in preson, tyll he dyed.

Jere.39.

Now the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in the .xix. yeare of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne and the kynges of Babilons seruauntes came vnto Jerusalem, and brent vp the house of the LORDE. He brent vp also the kynges palace, all the houses, and all ŷ gorgious buyldynges in Jerusalem. And the whole hoost of the Caldees ÿ were with the chefe captatayne, brake down all the walles of Jerusalem rounde aboute.

C As for the poore people and suche folke as yet was left in the citie, which also were fallen to the kynge of Babilon, yee and what people as yet remayned, Nabusaradan the chefe captayne caried them awaye presoners. But the poore people of the contry, dyd Nabusaradan the chefe captayne leaue in the londe, to occupye the vyneyardes and feldes. The Caldees also brake ÿ bra-sen pilers, that were in the house of the LORDE, yee the seates and the bra-sen lauer that was in the house of the LORDE: and caryed all the metall of them vnto Babilon. They toke awaye also the cauldrons, shouels, flesho-kes, sprynklers, spones and all the bra-sen vessell that was occupyed in ÿ seruice, with the basens, colepannes, sprink lers, pottes, candelstickes, spones, and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, & some of syluer.

The chefe captayne toke also the two pylers, the lauer, the.xii. brasen bul-kynge Salomon made in the house of the LORDE: and all the vessell conxviii cubytes hye, and the rope ÿ went aboute it, was.xii. cubites and foure fyngers thycke and rounde. Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, & euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and vppon the knoppes were whoopes, and pomgranates rounde aboute of clene brasse.

After this maner were both the py-lers fashioned with the pomgranates wherof ther were an hundreth and.xcvi which hanged vpon the whoopes rounde aboute. The chefe captayne also toke Sarias the hye prest, and Sophonias that was the chefe nexte hym, and the thre kepers of the treasury. He toke out of the cytie a chamberlayne, which was a captayne of the souldyers, and seuen men that were the kynges seruan-tes, which were founde in the cytie: and Sepher a captayn that vsed to muster the men of warre: with.lx. men of the contry that were taken in the cytie.

These Nabuzaradan the chefe captaine toke, and caryed them to the kynge of Babilon vnto Reblatha: and ÿ kynge of Babilon caused them to be put to death at Reblatha in the lande of He-math. And thus Juda was led awaye captyue, out of his owne lande.

This is the summe of the people, whom Nabuchodonosor led away captyue:

In the seuenth yeare of his reigne E he caryed awaye of ÿ Jewes, thre thou sande thre and twenty. In the.xviii. yeare Nabuchodonosor caryed awaye from Jerusalem eyghte hundreth and two and thyrtye personnes. In the thre and twenty yeare of Nabuchodonosor Nabusaradan the chefe captayne, toke awaye seuen hundreth and fyue & fortye Jewes presoners. The whole summe of all the presonners, is foure thousande and sixe hundreth.

* In the seuen and thyrtyeth yeare 4.Re.25.d after that Joachim the kynge of Juda was caryed away, in the fyue and twen tyeth day of ÿ twelfe moneth, Euilme rodach the kynge of Babilon (the same yeare that he reygned) gaue Joachim the kynge of Juda his pardon and let hym out of preson, and spake louyngly vnto hym. And set his trone aboue the trones of the other kynges ÿ were with hym
in Babilon.
He chaun
ged also the clothes of his presonment, yee & he dyd eate with hym all his lyfe longe. And he had a contynuall lyuynge geuen hym of the kynge of Babilon, euery daye a certayne thynge allowed hym, al ÿ dayes of his lyfe, vntyll he dyed.

downe from heauen vpon the earth: How happeneth it, that he remembred

The LORDE hath cast downe all the glory of Jacob without ony fa-uoure: All the strõge places of ŷ dough ter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and throwen them downe to ŷ groũde: hir kyngdome and hir prynces hath he suspended.
In the wrath of his indignacyon he hath broken all the horne of Israel:

He hath bent his bowe lyke an e-nemye, he hath fastened his ryght hãde as an aduersary: and euery thynge that was pleasaunt to se, he hath smyten it downe. He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre, in to the Tabernacle of the doughter Sion.
The LORDE is become, lyke as it were an enemye, he hath cast downe Israell and all his places: yee all his stronge holdes hath he destroyed, & fylled the doughter of Juda with muche sorow and heuynesse.
*Hir tabernacle (which was lyke B hir hye solempne feastes hath he put it so to passe, that the hye solempne fea forgotten. In his heuye displeasure hath he made the kynge and prestes to be despysed.

The LORDE hath forsaken his owne aulter, & is wroth with his own Sanctuary, and hath geuen the walles of theyr towres in to the handes of the enemye. Theyr enemyes made a noyse in the house of ŷ LORDE, as it had bene in a solempne feastdaye.
The LORDE thought to breake downe the walles of the doughter Si-in his honde, tyll he had destroyed thẽ.

All thyne enemyes gape vpon the, whisperynge and bytynge theyr tethe, sayenge: let vs deuoure: for the tyme y we loked for, is come: we haue founde and sene it.

The LORDE hath fulfylled the thynge, that he was purposed to do: & perfourmed that he had deuysed longe ago: he hath destroied, and not spared. He hath caused thyne aduersary to triumphe ouer y, and set vp the horne of thyne enemye.

The. iii. Chapter.

I Am the man, that (thorow the rod of his wrath) haue experience of mysery.

He droue me forth and led me: yee in to darcknesse, but not in to lyghte.

Agaynst me onely he turneth his hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.

My fleshe and my skynne hath he made olde & my bones hath he brused.

He hath buylded rounde aboute me, & closed me in with gall and trauayle.

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, y I can not get out, and hath layed heuy linkes vpon me.

Though I crye and call peteously, yet heareth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped vp my wayes w fouresquared stones, and made my pathes croked.

He layeth wayte for me lyke a bere, and as a lyon in a hole.

He hath marred my wayes, & broken me in peces, he hath laied me waist altogether.

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marke to shute at.

The arowes of his quyuer hath he shote, euen in to my reynes.

O remembre yet my mysery & my trouble, the wormwood and the gall.

Yee thou shalte remembre them, for my soule melteth awaye in me.

Whyle I consydre these thynges in my harte, I get a hope agayne.

Namely, that the mercyes of the LORD are not clene gone, & that his louynge kyndnesse ceasseth not.

The verye * breth of oure mouth: euen the anoynted LORDE himselfe shall be taken in oure synnes, of whome we saye: Under hys shadowe we shall be preserued amonge the Heythen. Gen.2.b

And thou (O doughter Edom) y dwelleste in the londe of Hus, be glad and reioyce: for the cuppe shal come vnto the also, which whan thou suppeste of, thou shalte be dronchen. Jere.25.c

Thy synne is well punyshed (O thou doughter Syon) he shall not suffre the to be caryed awaye onye more. But thy wyckednesse (O doughter Edom) shall he vyset, and for thy synnes sake, he shall lede the in to captyuyte.

Call to remembraunce (O LORD) what we haue suffered, consyder and se oure confusyon. Oure enheritaunce is turned to the straungers, and oure houses to the aleauntes. We are become carefull and fatherlesse, and oure mothers are as y wydowes. We are fayne to drynke oure owne water for moneye, and oure owne wood muste we bye wyth moneye. For tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egypcyans, and now to the Assyrians: onelye that we myghte haue bread ynough. * Oure fathers (which now are gone) haue synned, & we must beare theyr wickednesse. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, and no man delyuereth vs oute of theyr handes. We muste get oure lyuynge wyth the parel of oure lyues, because of the drouth of the wyldernesse. Jer.31.e Eze.18.a B Oure skynne is as it hadde bene brent in an ouen, for verye sore honger. The wiues are rauesshed in Sion, and the maydens in the cytyes of Juda. The prynces are hanged vp wyth the hande of the enemyes, they haue not spared the old sage men, they haue taken yongemens lyues from them, & the boyes are hanged vp vpon trees. The elders sytte nomore vnder the gates, and the yongemen vse nomore playenge of musyck. The ioye of our hart is gone, oure mery quere is turned to mournynge. The garlande of oure heade is fallen: alas, that euer we synned so sore.

¶ The ende of the Lamentacyons of Jeremy.

The prophete Ezechiel.

The fyrst Chapter.

A IT chaunced in ÿ xxx. yeare the fifth daye of ÿ fourth moneth that I was amonge ÿ presoners by the riuer of Cobar, where the heauens opened, and I sawe a vysyon of God. Nowe the fyft daye of the moneth, made full the fyfth year of kynge Joachims captyuyte. It the same tyme came the worde of ÿ LORDE vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi preste, in the londe of the Caldees by ÿ water of Cobar, * where the hand of the LORDE came vpon hym. And I loked, and beholde, a stormye wynde came oute of the northe wyth a greate cloude full of fyre, which wyth hys glystre lyghtened all rounde aboute. And in ÿ myddest of the fyre it was al clear, and as it were the lykenesse of foure beastes, whiche were fashioned lyke a man: sauynge, that euery one had four faces, and foure wynges. Ezec.10.a

B Theyr legges were straughte, but theyr fete were like bullockes fete, and they glystred, as it had bene fayre scoured metall. Under theyr wynges vpon all the foure corners, they hadde mens hãdes. Theyr faces and theyr wynges were towarde the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer touched another. When they wente, they turned them not aboute. But echone wente straughte forwarde.

✠ * Upon the ryghtsyde of these foure, were theyr faces lyke the face of a Man, and the face of a Lyon: But vpon the leftsyde, they hadde the face of an oxe and the face of an Egle. Theyr faces also & theyre wynges were spred Ezec.10.b out aboute:so ẏ two wynges of one tou ched euer two wynges of another, and with the other two they couered their C bodyes. Euery one when it wente, it wente straight forwarde. Where as the sprete led them, thither they wente, Jer.10. c *and turned not aboute in their goynge.

The fashion and countenaūce of the beastes was like hote coales of fyre euen as though burnynge cresshettes had bene amonge the beastes: the fyre gaue a glistre, and out of the fyre ther wente lighteninge. When the beas-tes wente forwarde and backwarde, one wolde haue thought, it had lyghte ned. ✝ Now when I had wel considered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth with foure faces also lyke the beastes.

The fashion & worke of ẏ wheles was like the see. The foure wheles we re ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde they wente al fou re, and turned thē not aboute in their goinge. They were large, greate, and horrible to loke vpō. Their bodies we re ful of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. Whan the beastes wente, the wheles wente also wyth them: And whan the beastes lyfte themselues vp from ẏ earth, the wheles were lyfte vp also.

Whyther so euer the sprete wente, thither wente they also, and the wheles were lyft vp and folowed them, for the sprete of lyfe was in the wheles. Whē the beastes wēte forth, stode stil, or lyft them selues vp from the earth: then the wheles also wente, stode stil and were lift vp: for the breth of lyfe was in the wheles.

D Aboue ouer the heades of the beastes ther was a firmamēt, which was fashioned as it had bene of the moost pure cristall, and that was spred out aboue vpon their heades: vnder the same firmament were their wynges layed abrode, one towarde another and two wynges couered the body of eue-ry beast. And when they wente forth, I herde the noyse of their wynges, lyke the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the greate God and a russhinge together as it were of an hoost of men. And when they stode stil they let downe their wynges. Now when they stode stil, and had lett ē dow ne their wynges, it thondred in the fir-mament, that was aboue their hea-des.

Aboue the firmament that was ouer their heades, ther was the fashiō of a seate, as it had bene made of Sa-phir. Vpon the seate ther sat one like a man, * I behelde him, and he was like Ezech.8.a a cleare light, as it had bene all of fyre within from his loynes vpwarde. And beneth when I loked vpon him vnder the loynes, me thought he was lyke a shyninge fyre, ẏ geueth lyght on euery syde. Yee ẏ shyne and glistre that lightened rounde aboute, was like a raynbow, which in a rayny daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euē so was the similitude, wherein the glory of the LOR-DE apeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of him, that spake.

the house of Israell: Not to many nayf I sent the to those people, they wold they are a frowarde housholde.

B He sayde moreouer unto me: thou sonne of man, take diligente hede with thyne eares to ye wordes that I speake unto the, fasten them in thyne harte: & go to ye presoners of thy people, speake unto them, and saye on thys maner: Thus the LORDE God hath spo ken: Whether ye heare, or heare not.
Wyth that, the sprete toke me up. And I herde the noyse of a greate rushynge and remouynge of the mooste blessed glory of the LORDE oute of hys place. I herde also the noyse of ye wyn-ges of the beastes, that rushed one a-gaynste another: yee and the ratlynge of the wheles, that were by thẽ, which rushynge and noyse was verye greate.
* Nowe whan the sprete toke me Ezech.8.a wyth an heuye and a sorowfull mynd: but the hande of the LORDE com forted me ryght soone. And so in the be gynnynge of the moneth Abib. I came to the presoners, * that dwelte by the Psa.136.a water of Cobar, and remained in that place, where they were: and so conty-nued I amonge thẽ seuen dayes, being verye sorye. And whan the seuen dayes C were expyred, the LORDE sayde unto me: * Thou son of man, I haue Ezech.33.b of Israell: therfore take good hede to the wordes, of my mouthe and geue

Yf I say unto the, concerning the un godlye man, that (wythoute doute) he muste dye, & thou geuest him not war-nynge, nor speakeste unto hym, that he maye turne from hys euell way, and so to lyue. Then shall the same ungodlye man dye in hys own unryghteousnesse: but hys bloude wyll I requyre of thy hand. Neuerthelesse, yf thou geue war nynge unto the wicked, and he yet forsake not hys ungodlynesse: then shall he dye in hys owne wyckednesse, but thou haste dyscharged thy soule. Now yf a ryghteous man go from, * hys Ezec.18.a is euell: I wyll lay a stomblyng blocke before hym, and he shall dye, because yu hast not geuen him warnyng: Yee, dye shall he in hys owne synne, so thet the vertue, which he dydde before, shal not be thoughte upon: but hys bloude wyl I requyre of thyne hande.

Neuerthelesse, yf thou exhorteste the ryghteous, that he synne not, and so the ryghteous do not synne: Then shal he lyue, because he hathe receaued thy warnynge, and thou haste dyschar ged thy soule.

And there came the hande of the LORDE vpon me, & he sayd vnto me, Stande vp, & go in to the feld, that I D maye there talke wyth the. So whan I hadde rysen vppe, and gone forthe in to the felde: Beholde, the glorye of Ezech.1.a the LORDE stode there, *lyke as I saw it afore, by the water of Cobar.
Ezech.2.a * Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the sprete came in to me, which set me vppe vpon my fete, and sayde thus vnto me: Go thy waye, and sparre thy selfe in thyne house. Beholde (O thou sonne of man) ther shall chaynes be broughte for the, to bynde the wythall so shalte thou not escape oute of them.
And I wyl make thy tunge so to cleue to ye rofe of thy mouth, that thou shalt be domme and not be as a chyder with them: for it is an obstinate housholde.
But whan I speake vnto the, then open thy mouthe, and saye: Thus say-the LORDE God: Who so heareth, let hym heare: who so wyl not, let him leaue: for it is a froward houshold

The.iiii. Chapter.

A prophecy of the sege of Jerusalē.

A Thou sonne of man: take a tyle stone, and laye it before the, and describe vpon it ye cytye of Jerusalem: howe it is beseged, howe bulworkes and stronge dyches are grauen on euerye syde of it: describe also tentes, and an hooste of men rounde about it.
Morouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwixte the, and the cytye in steade of an yron wall. Then sette thy face to-warde it, besege it, and lay ordinaunce agaynste it, to wynne it. Thys shall be a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy leftsyde, and laye the synne of the house of Israell vpon the. Certayne dayes appoynted, shalte thou slepe vppon that syde, and Dan.9.d beare theyr synnes. * Neuerthelesse I wyll appoynte the a tyme (to put of theyr synnes) and the nombre of the dayes: thre hundreth and nynety daies must thou beare te wyckednesse of the house of Israell. Whan thou hast ful-fylled these dayes, lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy ryghtesyde fourtye dayes, and beare ye synnes of the house Nu.14.e of Juda. * A daye for a yeare, a daye (I saye) for a yeare wyll I euer laye vpon the.

Therfore sette nowe thy face a- B gaynste that beseged Jerusalem, and dyscouer thyne arme, that thou mayeste prophecye agaynste it. Beholde I wyll laye chaynes vpon the, that thou shalte not turne the from one syde to another, tyll thou hast ended the dayes of thy sege. Wherfore, take vnto the wheate, barlye, beanes, lentyles, mylle, and fytches: and putte these together in a vessell, and make the loaues, of breadethereof, accordynge to the nombre of the daies that thou muste lye vppon that syde: that thou mayest haue bread to eate, for thre hundreth and .xc.
dayes.

And the meate that thou eateste, shall haue a certayne wayghte appoynted: Namely, twenty sycles euery day.
This appointed meate shalt thou eate dayly, frō the begynnynge to the ende.
Thou shalte dryncke also a certayne measure of water: Namelye, the syxte parte of an Hin shalte thou drynche daylye, from the beginnynge to ye ende.
Barlye cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fyrst strake them ouer wyth mās dounge, that they maye se it.

And wyth that, sayde the LOR- C DE: * Euen thus shall the chylderen Osee.9 of Israell eate theyre defyled bread in in the myddeste of the Gentyles, amōg whome I wyll scattre them. Then sayde I: O LORDE God, Behold, my soule was yet neuer staynedr for fro my youth vppe vnto this hour, I dydde neuer eate of a dead carcase, or of that whiche was slayne of wylde beastes, nother came ther euer ony vn-clene fleshe in my mouthe. Where vnto he answered me, & saide: Wel than, I wyll graunte the to take cowes dounge for the dounge of a man, and to strake the bread ouer wythall, before them.

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde, thou sonne of man, * I wyll mynyshe Ezech.5 all the prouysyon of bread in Jerusa- and.14 lem, so that they shall weye theyr bread 4.Re.6 and eate it wyth scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a verye lytle measure thereof, to drynche. And whan they haue nomore bread nor water, one shall be destroyed wyth another, and famyshe awaye for theyr wickednesse.

The.v. Chapter.

Wyth what plages God punyshed Jerusalem.

B Take the then a sharp knyfe (O thou sonne of man) namelye, a rasoure. Take that, and shaue the heere of thy heade and beerde, Then take the scoales and the weyght and deuyde the heere asunder . And burne the thyrde parte thereof in the fyre, in the myddeste of the cytye, whan the dayes of the sege are ended, and cut the other thyrde part in peces with Iere.7.d a knyfe. * As for ye thyrd part yt remay neth , caste it in the wynde, and then shewe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe.
Then take a curtsye of it, and caste it in the myddeste of the fyre, and burne it in the fyre. Oute of the same fyre shall ther go a flame, vpon the whole house of Israell.

B Moreouer thus sayde the LOR-DE God, Thys same is Ierusalem.
I sette her in the myddeste of the Hey-then and nacyons , that are rounde about her, but she hath despysed my iud gementes more then the Gentyles thē-selues , and broken my commaunde-C mentes more then the nacions, that lye Osee.9.a rounde aboute her: For they haue cast oute myne ordynaunces, and not walked in my lawes. Therfore thus say- Esai.18.d eth the LORDE God: * For so muche as ye wyth youre wyckednesse farre exceade the Heythen, that dwel round aboute you: (For ye haue not walked in my lawes, nother haue ye kept mine ordynaunces) therfore thus sayeth the LORDE God:

I wyll also come vpon the, for in the myddeste of the, wyll I sytte in iud gements, in the syghte of the Heythen, and wyl handle the of suche a fashyon, as I neuer dydde before, and as I neuer wyll do from that tyme forth, and Deut.28.e that because of al thyn abhominaciōs.
Lam.4.b * For in the, the fathers shall be fayne 4.Reg.6.f to eate theyr owne sonnes, and the son nes theyre owne fathers . Suche a courte wyll I kepe in the, and the who le remnaunte wyll I scattre in to all C the wyndes.

Wherfore , as truelye as I lyue (sayeth the LORDE God) seynge thou haste defyled my sanctuary, wyth all maner of abhominacions & with a thy shamefull offences: For thys cause wyll I also destroye the . Myne eye shall not pytye the, nother wyl I spare the. * One thyrde parte wythyn the, Iere.15.a shall dye of the pestylence and honger: Another thyrde parte shall be slayne downe rounde aboute the wyth the swearde: The other thyrde parte that remayneth , wyll I scattre abrode to-warde all the wyndes, and drawe oute the swearde after them. Thus wyll I perfourme myne indignacyon and set my wrath agaynste them, and ease my selfe. So that whan I haue fulfylled myne anger agaynste them, they shall knowe, that I am the LORDE, whiche with a feruente gelousye haue spoken it.

Moreouer I wyll make the waist, D and abhorred , before all the Heythen, that dwel aboute the, and in the syght of all them, that go by the: so that whā I punysh the in my wrath, in myne an ger , and wyth the plage of my whote dyspleasure, thou shalte be a verye abhominacyon , shame , a gasynge and wondrynge stocke , amonge the Hey-then that lye aboute the . Euen I the LORDE haue spokē it, and it shal come to passe, whan I shoute amonge them the parlous dartes of honger, whiche shal be but death: Yee therfore shall I shute them, because I wyll de-stroye you. * And I wyll encrease hon Ezech.4.d ger , and mynyshe all the prouysyon of bread amonge you.

Plages and myserye wyl I sende you, yee and wylde beastes also to destroye you. Pestylence and bloudshed-dynge shall come vpon you , and the swearde wyll I brynge ouer you. Euē I the LORDE, haue sayde it.

The.vi.Chapter.

¶ Punyshemente for Idolatry.

The worde of the LOR- A

Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the * mountay- Ezec.36.a nes of Israell , that thou maieste prophecye vnto them, and say: Heare the worde of the LORDE God, o ye moūtaynes of Israel: Thus hath the LORDE God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles , valleyes, and dales.

Beholde, I wyll brynge a swearde ouer you, and destroye your hyghe pla ces: I wyll caste downe youre aulters, and breake down your temples. Your slayne men wyll I laye before youre goddes, and the dead carcases of the chylderen of Israell wyll I cast before theyr ymages, youre bones wyll I strowe rounde aboute youre aulters, and dwellynge places. The cityes shal be desolate, yͤ hylchappels layed wayst youre aulters destroyed and broken, youre goddes caste downe, and taken awaie, youre tempels layde euen with the grounde, youre owne workes clene rooted oute. Youre slayne men shall lye amonge you that ye maye learne to knowe, howe that I am the LOR-escaped the swearde, wyll I leaue amonge the Gentyles: for I wyl scattre you amõg yͤ nacions. And they yͭ escape from you, shall thynke vpon me amõg the Heythen, where they shal be in cap tyuyte.

As for that whorysh and vnfaithfull harte of theyrs, wherewyth they runne awaye fro me, I wyll breake it: yee and putte oute those eyes of theyrs that commytte fornicacion wyth theyr Idols. Then shal they beashamed and dyspleased wyth themselues, for the wyckednesses and abhomynacyons, whiche theye haue done: and shall learne to knowe, howe that it is not in vayne, that I the LORDE speake to brynge suche myserye vppon them.

C The LORDE sayde moreouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together, and stampe wyth thy fete, and saye: Wo worth all the abhominacyons and wyckednesses of the house of Israell, for because of them, they shall perysshe wyth the swearde, wyth hon-ger, and wyth pestylence. Who so is farre of, shall dye of the pestylence: he that is at hande, shall dye wyth the swearde: and the other that are beseged, shall dye of honger. Thus wyll I satisfye my wrothfull dyspleasure vppon thẽ. And so shal ye learne to know yͭ I am yͤ LORD, whan youre slayne men lye among your goddes, & aboute your aulters: vpõ al hygh hilles & top-pes of mountaines, amõg al grene trees among all thycke okes: euen in the places, where they dyd do sacryfyce to all theyr Idols. I wyl stretche myne hand oute vppon them, and wyll make the londe wayste: So that it shall lye deso late and voyde, from the wyldernesse of Deblat forth, thorowe all theyr habytacions: to learne thẽ for to knowne that I am the LORDE.

The.vii. Chapter.

The longe captiuyte of the people, and the causes thereof.

THe worde of the LOR- A maner: The I call, O thou

eth the LORDE God
vnto the londe of Israell: The ende vpon the foure corners of the earthe.

But nowe shall the ende come vppon

Thus sayeth the LORDE

The.viii.Chapter.

Ezechiel seyth great abhominacyons thorow the hole in the wall.

IT happened, that in ye sixte A yeare, the fyfth daye of the sixte moneth I satte in my house, and the lordes of the counsell of Iuda with me: and the hande of the LORDE God fell euen there vpon me. And as I loked vp, *I sawe as it were a lykenesse Ezech.1.e of fyre from his loynes downewarde, and from his loynes vpward it shyned maruaylous cleare. *This similitude Ezech.3.b stretched out an hande, and toke my by and.11.d the heery lockes of my head, & the spret lyft my vp betwene heauen and earth: and God brought me in a vision to Ie-rusalem, in to the courte of the inward porte that lyeth towarde ye north: there stode an ymage, with which he yt hath all thynges in his power, was verye wroth.
And beholde, the glorye of the God of Israell was in the same place: euen *as I had sene it afore in the felde. Ezech.1.
And he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man O lyfte vp thyne eyes and loke to warde the north. Then lyfte I vp myn eyes towarde the north, and beholde, Beside ye port northward, ther was an aulter made vnto ye ymage of prouoca-cyõ in the very entringe in. And he said furthermore vnto me: Thou sonne of man, Seyst thou what these do? Seyst thou the great abhominacyons that ye house of Israell commytte in this place? which ought not to be done in my Sãc tuary. But turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacyons.
And with yt brought he me to ye courte gate, and whan I loked, beholde, ther was an hole in the wall.
Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sõne B of man dygge thorowe the wall. And when I dygged thorowe the wall, be-holde, there was a dore. And he sayde vnto me: go thy way in, and loke what wycked abhominacyons they do there.
So I went in, and sawe: and beholde, ther were all maner ymages, of wormes and beastes, all Idols and abhominacyons of the house of Israell, paynted euerychone rounde aboute the wall. Ther stode also before the

Than sayde he vnto me: Thou sōne of man, hast thou sene what ÿ Senatours of ÿ house of Israel do secretly euery one in hys chambre? *For they saye: Tush, the LORDE seyth vs not, the LORDE regardeth not the worlde. And he sayde vnto me: Turne ÿ yet agayne and thou shalt se ÿ greate abhominaciōs that they do. And with that, he brought me to the dore of the porte of the LORDES house, towarde the north. And beholde, there sat women mournynge for Thamus. Than sayde he vnto me: Haste thou sene thys thou sonne of man? Turne the aboute, and thou shalte se yet greater abhominacions. And so he brought me in to ÿ inwarde courte of ÿ LORDES house: & beholde, at the porte of the LORDES house, betwyxte the forentrye and the aulter ther were fyue and twenty men, that turned theyr backes vpon the tempel of the LORDE, and their faces towarde the easte, and these worshipped the Sonne. And he sayde vnto me hast thou sene this thou sonne of man? Thynketh the house of Juda, that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhominacions here? Shulde they fyll the londe full of wickednesse, & vndertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Yee and purposly to cast vp their noses vpon me? Therfore wyll I also do some thinge in my wrothfull displeasure, so that myne eye shall not pytie them, nother wyll I spare the. * Yee & though they crye in myne eares wyth a loude voyce, yet wyll I not heare them.

HE cryed also wyth a loude voyce in myne eares, sayenge: Come here ye rulers of the cytie, euery mā wyth his weapened hande to the slaughter. Ther was one amonge them, ÿ had on hym a lynnen rayment, and a wryters ynkhorne by his syde. These went in, and stode besyde the brasen aulter: for ÿ glory of ÿ God of Israel was gone away from the Cherub (*where it was wōt to be vpon,) and was come downe to ÿ threshholde of the house, and he called ÿ man, that had the lynnen rayment vpō hym, and the wryters ynkhorne by his syde, and the LORDE sayd vnto hym: Go thy waye thorowe the cytie of Jerusalem, and set this marke Thau vpon the foreheades of thē that mourne, and are sory for al the abhominacyons that be done therin. And to the other, he sayd that I myght heare: * Go ye after hym thorow the cytie, slaye, pytie none, spare none: kyll, & destroye both olde men and yonge, maydens, chyldren and wyues.

Now when they had done the slaughter, and I yet escaped: I fel downe vpon my face, & cryed, sayeng: O LORDE, wylt thou then destroye all the resydue of Israell, in thy sore displeasure that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalē? Then sayd he vnto me: The wyckednesse of the house of Israell and Juda is very great, so that the lande is ful of bloude, and the cytie ful of vnfaythfulnesse: For they saye: *Tush, the LORDE regardeth not the earth, he seyth vs not. AND as I loked, beholde, In the firmament that was aboue the Cherubins ther appeared the similitude of a seate of Saphir vpon thē.

Now the Cherubins stode vpon the ryght syde of the house, when the man wente in, and the cloude fylled the yn-

LORDE remoued from the Cheru-bins, and came vpon the thresholde of B the house: so that the temple was ful of Iudit.2.b cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the LORDES glorye. Yee and the sounde of the Cherubins wyn ges was herde in to the forecourt, lyke as it had ben the voyce of the almygh-

B he had bydden the man that was clo-

1.Pet.4.d which were vnder the Cherubins: he wente and stode besyde the wheles.
Thē the one Cherub reached forth his hande from vnder the Cherubins, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Che-rubins, and toke therof, and gaue it vn out. And vnder the wynges of the Che rubins, ther appeared the lykenesse of a mans hande: I saw also foure wheles besyde the Cherubins, so that by euery Cherub ther stode a whele. And yͤ whe les were (to loke vpon) after the fashi-

Esay.29.d Yet (vnto the syght) were they fashiowente all foure together, not turnynge aboute in theyr goynge: But where the fyrste wente, thyther wente they after also, so that they turned not aboute in theyr goynge. Theyr whole bodyes, theyr backes, theyr hōdes and wynges, yee and the wheles also, were all ful of eyes rounde aboute them all foure.

And I herde hym call the wheles, Gal Ezech.1.b gall (that is) a rounde boule. *Euery one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the D seconde of a man, the thyrde of a Lyon, the fourth of an Aegle, and they were lyfted vp aboue. This is the beast that E I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubins wente, the wheles went with them: and whā the Che rubins shoke theyr wynges, to lyfte themselues vpwarde the wheles remayned not behynde, but were wyth them also. Shortly, when they stode, these stode also: And when they were lyfte vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them: for the spirete of lyfe was in the wheles.
* Then the glorye of the LORD Eze.11.d was lyfte vp from the threshold of the and.43.a temple, and remayned vpon the Cheru bins: And yͤ Cherubins flackred with theyr wynges, and lyfte thē selues vp from the earth, so that I saw whē they wente, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte yͭ is in the house of the LORDE. So the glory of the God of Israel was vp pon them. This is yͤ beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israell, by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued, yͭ it were the Cherubins. Euery one had foure faces, and euery one foure winges, and vnder theyr wynges, as it were mens hondes. Now the figure of theyr faces was euen as I had sene them, by yͤ wa ter of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of them: Euery one in his goynge wente strayght forwarde.

The.xi.Chapter.

The vision of the.xxv.men.

Moreouer the spirete of the A LORDE lyft me vp, and brought me vnto the East porte of the LORDES house. And beholde, ther were.xxv.men vnder the dore: amonge whom I sawe Iaasanias the sonne of Asur, and Pheltias the sonne of Banaias, the rulers of the people. Thē said the LORDE vnto me: Thou sonne of man: These men ymagen myschefe, and a wycked counsel take they in this cytie, sayenge: Tush, ther is no destruccyon at hande, let vs buylde houses: This Ierusalem is the cauldron, and we be the flesh. Therfore shalte thou prophecy vnto them: yee prophecy shalt thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with that, fell the spirete of the LOR-DE vpon me, and sayd vnto me: Speake, thus sayeth the LORDE: On this maner haue ye spoken, (O ye house of Israell) and I knowe yͤ ymaginacyons of your hartes. Many one haue ye murthured in this citie, and fyl led the stretes full of the slayne.
Therfore, thus sayeth the LOR- B

DE God: The slayne mē that ye haue layed on the grounde in thys cytie, are Ezec.24.a the flesh, and this cytie is ỷ *cauldron: Mat,26.c But I wyll brynge you out of it: † ye haue drawen out the swearde, euen so wyll I also brynge a sweard ouer you, sayeth the LORDE God. I wyll dryue you out of this cytie, and deliuer you in to your enemyes handes, & wyl condempne you. Ye shalbe slayne with the swearde in al the coastes of Israel.
I wyll be auēged of you: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the LORD.
This cytie shall not be your cauldron, nother shall ye be the flesh therin: but in ỷ coastes of Israel wyl I punysh you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the LORDE, in whose commaūdements ye haue not walked, nor kepte his law Leui.18.a es: *but haue done after the customes Deut.12.d of the Heythē, ỷ lye rounde aboute you.
C Now when I preached, Pheltias the sonne of Banias dyed. Then fel I downe vpon my face, and cryed with a loude voyce: O LORDE God, wylte thou then vtterly destroye all the remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the LORDE came vnto me on this maner. Thou sonne of man: Thy brethren, thy kinsfolke, & the whole house of Juda, which dwell at Jerusalē, say: They be gone farre from the LORD, but the lande is geuen vs in possession.
Therfore tell thē, thus sayeth ỷ LOR DE God: I wyl sēde you farre amōge the Gentyles, and scattre you amonge the nacyons, & I wyll halowe you but a lytle, in the lādes where ye shal come.
Tell them also, thus sayeth the LOR DE God: I wyll gather you agayne out of the nacyons, and brynge you frō the contryes where ye be scattred, and wyll geue you the lande of Israell a-gayne: and thyther shall ye come. And as for all impedimentes, and all youre abhominacyons: I wyll take them a-D waye. *And I wyll geue you one hart Jere.31.f. and wyll plante a new sprete wythin Ezec.18.e youre bowels. That stony hart wyll I and.36.e take out of youre bodye, and geue you a fleshy hart, that ye may walke in my commaundementes, and kepe myne ordinaūces, and do them: that ye may be my people, and I your God. But loke whose hartes are disposed to folowe theyr abhominacyons and wycked lyuynges: those mens dedes wyl I bryng vpō theyr own heades, sayeth ỷ LOR DE God. After this dyd ỷ Cherubins lyft vp theyr wynges, & ỷ wheles wēt with them, & the glorye of the God of Israel was vpon thē. *So the glorye Ezec.10.c of the LORDE went vp frō ỷ myd and.43.a dest of the cytie, & stode vpon ỷ moūte of the cytie towarde the east. * But Ezec.3.b the wynde toke me vp, and in a vision and.8.a (whiche came by the sprete of God) it brought me agayne in to Caldee amōge the presoners. Then the vision that I had sene, vanyshed awaye fro me. So I spake vnto ỷ presoners, al ỷ wordes of ỷ LORD, which he had shewed me.

fore (O thou sonne of man) make thy Joan.12.f geare redy to flyt, and go forth by fayre Rom.11.b daye lyght, that they maye se. Yee euen in theyr syght shalte thou go from thy they wyll consydre, that they be a diso-hast made redy to flye withall, shalte ỷ beare out by fayre daye lyght, that they maye se, & thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euē in theyr syght, as a mā doth thou shalt go forth in the darke. Hyde thy face that thou se not the earth, for I haue made the a shewetoken vnto ỷ that I had made redy, brought I oute thorow the wall with myne hande: and whan it was darke, I toke the geare

And in the mornyng, came ỷ worde

As for al his helpers, and all hys hoosthem towarde al the wyndes, & drawe

Moreouer the worde of LORDE came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, with a fearfull tremblynge shalte thou eat thy bread, with carefulnesse & sorowe shalt thou drynke thy water.
And vnto the people of the lõde, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayeth the Ye shall eate your bread with sorowe, & drynke youre water with heuynesse:

of thẽ that dwell therin. And the cyties that nowe be so well occupyed, shalbe voyde, and the lande desolate: ỳ ye may knowe, how that I am the LORDE.
D Yet came the worde of the LOR-

I wyll make that byworde to ceasse, so that it shall nomore be comunly vsed in

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me sayenge: Beholde, thou sonne phecye out of their owne hartes: Heare the worde of the LORDE, thus say eth the LORDE God: * Wo be vn Ezec.34.a to those foolysh prophetes, that folowe theyr owne sprete & speake, where they se nothynge. O Israel, thy prophetes are lyke the foxes vpon the drye felde: For they stande not in the gappes, nor ther make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men might abyde the pa rell in the daye of the LORDE.

Vayne thynges they se, and tell lyes, * to mantayne theyr preachinges with Jere.27.b all. The LORDE (saye they) hath spoken it, when in very dede ỳ LOR-DE hath not sent them. Vayne visiõs haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecyes, when ye saye: the LORDE hath spoken it, where as I neuer sayd it.
Therfore thus sayeth the LORD B God: Because your wordes be vayne, and ye seke out lyes: Behold, I wyl vp pon you, sayeth the LORDE God.
Myne handes shall come vpon ỳ prophetes, that loke out vayne thynges, & preache lyes: he shall not be in ỳ coũcel of my people, nor wrytten in the boke of the house of Israel, nother shal they come in the lãde of Israel: that ye may know, how ỳ I am the LORD God, And ỳ for this cause: they haue deceaued my people, * & tolde thẽ of peace, Jere.8.b where no peace was. One setteth vp a wall, & they dawbe it with lowse claye Therfore tell thẽ which dawbe it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall.

Mat.7.c * For ther shall come a great showre of rayne, greate stones shal fall vpon it and a sore storme of wynde shal breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shal it not then be sayde vnto you: where is now ye morter, yt ye dawbed it withall?
C Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE God: I wyll breake out in my wrothfull dyspleasure with a stormy wynde, so that in myne anger ther shall come a myghtie shower of rayne, and hale stones in my wrath, to destroye wythall.
As for the wall, that ye haue dawbed with vntempered morter, I will break it downe and make it euen with the grounde: so that the fundacyon therof shall remoue, ant it shall fal: yee and ye youre selues shall perish in the myddest therof, to learne you for to knowe, that I am the LORDE. Thus wyll I perfourme my wrath vpon thys wall, and vpō thē that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wyll I saye vnto you: The wall is gone & the dawbers are awaye These are the prophetes of Israel, whiche prophecye vnto the cytie of Ierusalem, and loke out visions of peace for them, where as no peace is sayeth the LORDE God.
Wherfore (o thou sonne of man,) set thy face agaynste the doughters of thy people, which prophecy out of theyr owne hartes: & speake thou prophecie agaynst them and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Wo be vnto you, yt sowe pylowes vnder all arme holes & bolsters vnder the heades both of yōge & olde, to catch soules withal.
D * For when ye haue gotten the soules Esa.5.e of my people in youre captiuite, ye pro-Mich.3.b myse them lyfe, and dishonoure me to my people for an hādfull of barly, and for a pece of bread, whē ye kyl ye soules of them that dye not, & promyse lyfe to them that lyue not. Thus ye dyssem ble wt my people, yt beleueth your lyes.
Wherfore thus sayeth the LOR-DE God: Beholde, I wyll also vpon the pilowes, wherewyth ye catch the soules in flyenge: them wyll I take frō your armes, and let the soules go, that ye catch in flyenge. Youre bolsters also wyll I teare in peces, and delyuer my people out of your honde: so that they shall come nomore in your hōdes to be spoyled, & ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE. Seinge that with youre lyes ye dyscomforte the harte of ye righ teous, whom I haue not discōforted. Osee.4.b Agayne: For so muche as * ye corage the honde of the wycked, so yt he maye not turne from hys wycked waye, and lyue: therfore shall ye se no more vanyte, nor prophecie youre owne gessin ges: for I wyll delyuer my people out of your hōde, yt ye maye knowe, how
that I am the LORDE.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

Punyshmente for wylfulnesse and presumptiō of synne, God letteth such people be deceaued.

Ther * resorted vnto me cer-tayne of the elders of Israel, and sat downe by me. Eze.20.a Then came the worde of ye LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, these men beare their Idols in their hartes, and go purposly vpon ye stōblynge blocke of theyr owne wyckednesse: howe darre they thē axe cousell at me? Therfore speake vnto them and saye: thus sayeth the LORDE God: Euery man of ye house of Israel that beareth hys Idols in hys harte, purposynge to stōble in hys owne wickednesse, and commeth to a prophet, to enquere ouy thynge at me by hym vnto that mā wyll I ye LOR-DE my self geue answere, accordynge to the multitude of hys Idols: that ye house of Israel maye be snared in their owne hartes, because they be clene gon fro me, for theyr Idols sakes.
Wherfore, tell the house of Israel: Eze.14 thus sayeth the LORDE God: * Be conuerted, forsake youre Idols, and turne youre faces from all your abho-minacions. For euery man (whether he be of the house of Israel: or a strāunger that sepourneth in Israel) which departeth fro me, and caryeth Idols in hys harte, purposynge to go still stomblinge in hys owne wyckednesse, and commeth to a prophet, for to axe counsell at me thorow hym: vnto that mā wyll I the LORDE geue answere, by myn owne self. I wyll set my face a-gaynst that mā, and wyll make hym to be an example for other: yee & a comun byworde: and will rote hym out of my people, that he maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE. * And yf that 3.Re.22 prophet be deceaued, when he telleth Job.12 hym a worde: then I the LORDE myself haue deceaued ye prophet, & wil stretch forth myne honde vpon hym, to roote hym out of my people of Israel: and they both shalbe punished for theyr wyckednesse. Accordynge to the synne of hym y axeth, shall the synne of y prophete be, that the house of Israel be led nomore fro me thorow erroure, and be nomore defyled in theyr wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I theyr God, sayeth the LORDE God.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynste C me, and goeth forth in wyckednesse, I wyll stretch out myne hande vpon it, Ezech. 4. d / Esa. 5. d * and destroye all the prouisiō of theyr bread, and sende derth vpō them, to destroye man and beast in the lande.
Jere. 15. a * And though Noe, Daniel, and Job, these thre men were amonge them, yet shall they in theyr ryghteousnesse delyuer but theyr owne soules: sayeth the LORD God.

Yf I brynge noysome beastes in to the lande, to waist it vp, and it be so desolate, that no man maye go therin for beastes: yf these thre men also were in the lande. as truely as I lyue (sayeth y LORDE God) they shall saue nother sonnes nor doughters, but be only delyuered thēselues: & as for y lande, it shal be wayst. Or, yf I brynge a swerde in to the lāde, and charge it to go thorow the lande: so that I slaye downe man and beast in it, & yf these thre men were therin. As truely as I lyue (sayeth the LORDE God) they shall delyuer nother sonnes nor doughters, but only be D saued themselues. Yf I sende a pestilence in to the lande, and poure out my sore indignacyon vpon it in bloude, so that I roote out of it both man & beast and yf Noe, Daniel, & Job were therin: As truly as I lyue (sayeth y LORDE God) they shall delyuer nother sōnes nor doughters, but saue theyr own soules in theyr ryghteousnesse.

Jere. 27. b Moreouer, thus sayeth the LORDE God: Though I sende my * foure troublous plages vpon Jerusalem: the swearde, honger, perlous beastes, and pestilence, to destroye mā and beast out of it: yet shall ther a remnaunt be saued therin, whiche shall brynge forth theyr sonnes and doughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se theyr waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shalbe comforted, as touchynge al the plages y I haue brought vpon Jerusalem. They shall comforte you. whē ye se theyr way and workes: and ye shall knowe, how that it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynst Jerusalem, as I dyd, sayeth the LORDE God.

The. xv. Chapter.

¶ Agaynst Jerusalem that vnfrutfull vyne.

A The worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sōne of man, What commeth of the vyne amōg all other trees: and of the wyne stocke, amonge all other tymber of the groue? Do men take wood of it, to make ony worke withall? Or maye ther a nayle be made of it, to hange ony thynge vpon? Beholde it is cast in the fyre to be brent, the fyre cōsumeth both the endes of it, the myddest is brent to asshes. Is it mete then for ony worke? No. Seynge then, that it was mete for no worke, beynge whole: muche lesse maye ther ony thynge be made of it, when the fyre hath cōsumed & brent it.

B And therfore thus sayeth y LORDE God, Lyke as I cast the vyne in to the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wood: Euen so wyll I do with them y dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume thē.
Ezec. 7. a / and. 22. b * Then shall ye knowe, that I am the LORDE, whē I set my face agaynst them, and make the lāde waist: because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the LORDE God.

The. xvi. Chapter.

¶ A maruaylous goodly descripcyon of the Idolatrye of Jerusalem, for the which he calleth them whores.

A Agayne, the worde of the LORDE spake vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā Isawe the cytie of Jerusalē theyr abhominacyons, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE God vnto Jerusalē: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the lande, of Canaan, Ezec. 16. e * thy father was an Amorite, thy mother an Hethite. In the daye of thy byrth whē thou wast borne, the strynge of thy nauel was not cut of: thou wast not bathed in water to make the clene: thou wast nother rubbed with salt, nor swadled in cloutes. No man regarded the so muche, as to do ony of these thynges for the, or to shewe the such fauoure, but thou wast vtterly cast oute vpon the felde: yee despised wast thou in the daye of thy byrth.

Then came I by the, & saw the troden downe in thyne owne bloude, and sayd vnto the: thou shalte be pourged from thyne owne bloude: from thyne owne bloude (I saye) shalte thou be

Esay.5.a Jere.11.c clensed. * So I planted the, as þ blossome of the felde: thou art growen vp, & waxen great, þ hast gotten a maruaylous pleasaũt beuty: thy brestes ar com vp, thy heere is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

B Now when I wente by the, & loked vpon the, beholde, thy tyme was come, yee euen the tyme to wowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer the, to couer thy dishonestye: Yee I made an

Jere.3.a Osee.2.c oth vnto the, * and maryed my selfe to the (sayeth the LORDE God) and so thou becamest myne owne. Then wasshed I thy with water, & pourged thy bloude from the. I anoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of raymẽtes, I made the shues of does lether, I gyrded the aboute with whyte sylke, I clothed the with kercheues, I decked the with costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers, a chayne aboute thy necke, spanges vpon thy forheade, earrynges vpon thyn eares, and set a bewtyfull crowne vpon thyne head. Thus wast thou deckt with syluer and gold, and thy raymente was of fyne whyte sylke, of nedle worke and of dyuerse colours. Thou dyddest eate nothyng but symnels, honye and oyle, maruaylous goodly wast thou and bewtyfull: Yee euen a very Quene wast thou. In so muche, that thy bewty was spoken of amonge the Heythen, for thou wast excellent in my bewty, which I put vpõ the sayeth the LORDE God. But thou hast put confidence in thyn owne bewtye, & played the harlot, whã thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou haste commytted whoredome with all that went by the, and hast fulfylled theyr desyres. Yee thou hast taken thy garmentes of dyuerse colours, and deckt thyn

Thy garmentes of dyuerse colours haste thou taken, and deckt them therwith: myne oyle and incense haste thou set before them. My meate which I gaue the, as symnels, oyle and hony (to fede the with all) that hast thou set before them, for a swete sauoure. And this came also to

C passe, sayeth þ LORDE God: * Thou hast taken thyn owne sonnes & doughters, whom thou haddest begotten vnto me, and these hast thou offred vp vnto them, to be theyr meate. Is this but a small whoredome of thyne, (thynkest thou) that thou slayest my chyldrẽ, and geuest them ouer, to be brent vnto thẽ? And yet in all thyn abhominacyõs and whoredome, thou hast not remembred the daies of thy youth, how naked and bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne owne bloude. After all these thy wyckednesses (wo wo vnto the sayeth the LORDE God) þ hast buylded thy stewes and brodelhouses in euery place: yee at the heade of euery strete hast thou buylded the an alter. Thou hast made thy bewtye to be abhorred: þ haste layed out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multyplyed thyne whoredome. * Thou hast commytted fornicacyon with the Egipcyãs thy neyghbours which had much flesh: and thus hast þ vsed thyne whoredome, to anger me.

Beholde, I haue stretched out myne hande ouer the, and * wyll mynish thy stoare of foode, & delyuer the ouer into the wylles of the Phylystines thyne enemyes, which are ashamed of thyne abhominable waye. * Thou hast played the whore also with the Assirians, which myght not satisfy the: Yee thou hast played the harlot, and not had ynough. Thus hast thou styll commytted thy fornacion, from the lande of Canaan vnto þ Caldees, and yet thy luste not satisfyed. How shulde I circumcyse thyne harte (sayeth the LORDE God) seynge thou doest all these thynges, thou precyous whore: buyldynge thy stewes at the heade of euery strete, and thy brodelhouses in all places? Thou hast not ben as another whore, that maketh boast of hir wynnyng, but as a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in steade of hir husbande. Gyftes are geuen to all other whores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: and offrest them gyftes, to come vnto the oute of all places, and to com mytte fornicacyon wyth the. It is come to passe wyth the in thyne whordomes, contrarye to y vse of other wo men: yee ther hath no such fornicacion bene committed after the, seynge that y proferest gyftes vnto other, & no reward is geuē y: thys is a cōtrary thing D Therfore heare the worde of the LORDE, o thou harlot: Thus sayeth the LORD god: For so much as thou haste spente thy moneye, and dys-couered thy shame, thorowe thy whor-dome wyth all thy louers, and wyth al the Idols of thyn abhomynacyōs in y blode of the chylderen, * whom thou gather together all thy louers, vnto whome thou haste made thyselfe cōmune: yee and al them whome thou fa as a breaker of wedlocke & a marthurer, and recompence the thyne owne bloude in wrathe and gelousye, I wyll geue the ouer in to theyre power that shall breake downe thy stewes, and destroy thy brodelhouses: they shal stripe the out of thy clothes, al thy fayre and bewtyfull yewels shall they take from the, and so lette the sytte naked & bare:

people vpon the, which shall stone the,
and slaye the downe wyth theyr swear 4.Re.25.b des. * They shal burne vp thy houses, and punyshe the in the syghte of many women. Thus wyll I make thy whor dome to ceasse, so that thou shalte geue oute no mo rewardes.

Shulde I make my wrath to be styll, take my gelousye from the, be con tente, & nomore to be displeased? seyng thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in al these thynges? Beholde therfore, I wyll brynge thyne owne wayes vpō thyne heade, sayeth the LORDE God: howe be it, I neuer dydde vnto the accordynge to thy wickednesse and all thyne abhominacyons. Beholde, all they that vse cōmune prouerbes, shall vse thys prouerbe also agaynste the:
Suche a mother, suche a doughter.
E Thou arte euē thy mothers owne doughter, that hath caste of hyr husbande and hyr chylderen: Yee thou art the syster of thy systers which forsoke theyre husbandes and theyre chyldren.
* Youre mother is a Hethyte, & youre Ezec.16.a father an Ammoryte thyne eldeste syster is Samaria, she and hyr doughters that dwell vpon thy lefthande.
But thy yongeste syster that dwelleth on the ryghtehande, is Sodoma & hyr doughters. Yet hast thou not walked after theyr waies, nor done after theyr abhomynacyons: But in all thy waies thou hast bene more corrupte thē they.
As truelye as I lyue, sayeth the LOR DE God: * Sodoma thy syster with Gen.18.19 hyr doughters, hath not done so euell, as thou and thy doughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meate, abundance, and ydelnesse: these thynges had she and hyr doughters. Besydes that, they reached not theyr hand to y poore and nedye, but were proude and dydde abhomynable thynges before me: therfore I toke them awaye, whan I had sene it. Nother hathe Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, * yee thou hast ex- Iere.3.a ceaded the in wickednesse: In so much that in comparyson of all the abhominacyons which thou haste done, thou haste made thy systers good women.
Therfore beare thine own shame, thou that in sinne hast ouercom thy systers.
Seynge thou haste done so abhomina bly, that they were better then thou, be ashamed therfore (I saye) & beare thyne owne confusyon, thou that makest thy systers good women.

As for theyr captiuite namely the captyuyte of Sodoma and hyr dough- F ters: the captyuyte of Samaria and hyr doughters I wyll brynge them a-gayne, so wyll I also brynge agayne thy captyuyte amonge them: that thou mayeste take thyne owne confusyon vppon y and be ashamed of al y thou haste done, and to comforte them.

Thus thy systers (namelye) So-doma and hyr doughters, Samaria, and hyr doughters wyth the selfe and thy doughters, shall be broughte a-gayne to your olde estate. When thou waste in thy pryde, and before thy wyc kednesse came to lyghte: thou woldeste not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vntyll the tyme that the Syrians wyth all theyre townes and the Phylystynes wyth all that lye rounde a-boute them, broughte the to shame and confusyon: that thou myghtest beare thyne owne fylthynesse and abhominacion, sayeth the LORDE.

For thus sayeth the LORDE God: I shuld (by right) deale wyth the as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the oth, and broken the conuenaunte: Neuertheles, I wyll remembre my cō uenaunt, that I made wyth the in thy youth, in so much ẏ it shall be an euerlastynge conuenaunt: So that thou al so remembre thy wayes, & be ashamed of them, then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder and yonger systers, whom I will make thy doughters, and that be-Jere.31.e. Heb.8.b syde thy conuenaunt. * And so I wyll renue my conuenaunt with the, that thou mayest knowe, that I am LOR DE, that thou mayest thynke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne owne cō-fusion nomore: when I haue forgeuen the, all that thou hast done sayeth the LORDE God.

The.xvii.Chapter.

A prophecy of the destruction of Je rusalem. A promyse of Christ.

A The worde of the LORD came vnto me, sayenge: Ezec.24.a Thou sonne of man, put forth * a darke speakinge and a parable, vnto ẏ hou se of Israel, and saye: Thus sayeth ẏ LORDE God, Ther came a greate Dan.7.a. * Aegle with greate wynges, yee with myghtie longe wynges, and full of fethers of dyuerse colours vpon ẏ mout of Libanus, and toke a braūch from a Cedre tre, and brake of ẏ toppe of his twygge, and caryed it in to the lōde of Canaan, & set it in a cite of marchaū-tes. He toke also a braunch of the lon-de, and planted it in a frutefull groūde he brought it vnto greate waters, and set it as a wylly tre thereby. Then dyd it growe, and was a greate wyne stock but lowe by thy grounde: thus ther came of it a vyne, & it brought forth blos somes and spred out braunches. But ther was another Aegle, a greate one which had greate wynges & many fethers: and beholde, the rotes of thys vy ne had an hunger after hym, and spred out his braunches towarde hym to wa ter his frutes: Neuertheles it was plā ted vpon a good grounde besyde great waters: so ẏ (by reason) it shulde haue B broughte out braunches and frute, and haue bene a goodly vine. Speake thou therfore, thus sayeth the LORD god: Shal this vyne prospere? shal not hys rotes be plucht out, his frute broke of, his grene braūches wythered & fade away? yee wythout ether strōg arme or many people, shal it be plucked vp by ẏ rotes. Beholde, it was planted: shall it prosper therfore? Shal it not be dryed vp & wythered, yee euē in the shouting oute of hys blossomes, as soone as the easte wynde bloweth?
Morouer, the worde of the LOR DE came vnto me sayenge: Speake to that frowarde housholde: knowe ye not, what these thynges do sygnifye? 4.Re.24.
Tell them: Beholde, * the kyng of Ba bylon came to Jerusalem and toke the kynge and hys princes, and ledde them to Babylō He toke of the kynges sede and made a conuenaunte wyth hym, & toke an oth of hym: the prynces of the londe toke he wyth hym also, that ẏ londe myghte be holden in subieccyon, & not to rebelle, but kepe the conuenaunte, & C fulfyll it. But he fell from him, & sente hys embassatours in to Egypte, that he myghte haue horses, and much people. Shulde that prospere? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth such thynges?
Or shulde he escape, that breaketh hys conuenaunt? As truelye as I lyue, sayeth the LORDE God: He shall dye at Babylon, in the place where the kynge dwelleth, that made hym kynge whose oth he hath despysed, & whose conuenaunte he hath broken. Nother shall Pharao wyth hys greate hooste and multytude of people, mayntayne hym in the warre: whan they cast vppe dyches, and set vppe bulworkes to de-stroye much people. For seyng he hath despysed the othe, and broken the con-uenaunte (where as he yet gaue hys hande thervpon) and done al these thin ges, he shall not escape.
Therfore thus sayeth the LOR-DE God. As truely as I lyue, I wyl brynge myne oth that he hathe despy sed, and my conuenaunte that he hath Ezec.12. broken, vpon hys owne heade. * I wil and.12. caste my nette aboute hym, and catche hym in my yarne. To Babylon wyll I cary hym, there wyll I punysh hym, because of the greate offence ẏ he made me. As for those that flie from him out D of the hooste, they shall be slayne wyth the swearde. The residue shall be scattered towarde all the wyndes: and ye shall knowe, that I the LORDE haue spoken it.

Thus saieth y LORDE God:
I wil also take a braunch from an hie cedretre, & will set it, and take y vpper-most twygge, that yet is but tendre, & plante it vpõ an hye hil: Namely vpõ the hye hyl of Sion wyll I plante it, that it maye bringe forth twygges, & geue frute, and be a greate cedertre: so y al maner of foules maye byde in it, and make their nestes vnder the shado we of his braunches. And al the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the LORDE haue brought downe the hye tre, and set the lowe tre vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tre, and made the drye tre to florysh: Euen I the LORDE y spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The.xviii. Chapter.

Euery mã shall beare hys owne syn ne, and not anothers.

B The worde of y LORDE came vnto me, on this maner: What meane ye by this cõmun prouerbe, that ye vse in the londe of Isra-Iere.31.e el, sayenge: * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, and y childrens teth are set on edge? As treuly as I lyue saieth the LORDE God, ye shal vse this byworde nomore in Israel.

He shal not lyue. Seinge he hath done al these abhominaciõs he shall dye, his Now yf this man get a sonne also, that seith al his fathers synnes, which he hath done: and feareth, nother doth for his father, because he oppressed and spoyled his brother, & dyd wyckedly owne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherfore then shulde not this sonne beare his fathers synne? Therfore because the sonne hath done equyte & right, hath kepte all my commaundementes, and done them, therfore, shall he lyue in for all hys synnes that he dyd before, they shall not be thought vpon: but in his righteousnes that he hath done, he Agayne, yf the righteous turne a waye from his righteousnes, and do iniquite, accordinge to al the abhomina cions, that the wicked man doth, shall he lyue? All the righteousnes that he hath done, shall not be thought vpon: but in the faute that he hath offended with all, and in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.

Eze.33.d. And yet ye saye: Tush* ẏ waye of the LORDE is not indifferent.
Heare therfore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye right? Or, are not youre Ezec.33.c. wayes rather wicked?* Whē a right ous man turneth awaye from his righteousnesse, and medleth with vn-E godlynes: he must dye therein. Yee for ẏ vnrightuousnes that he hath done, man turneth awaye from his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thinge which is equall and right, he shall saue his soule alyue. For in so much as he remembreth himself, and turneth him from all the vngodlynes, ẏ he hath vsed, he shal liue & not dye. F And yet sayeth the house of Israel: Tush, the waye of the LORDE is not equall. Are my wayes vnright? O ye house of Israel? Are not youre wa-yes rather vnequall? As for me, I will iudge euery man, accordinge to his you then, and ye shall lyue.

The.xix. Chapter.

¶ The captiuite of the kynges of Iu-da. The cruelty of kinges and princes.

A BUt mourne thou for ẏ prin ces of Israel, & say: Wher fore laye thy mother ẏ lyo nesse, amonge thy lyons? and norished hir yōgeones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of hir whelpes she brought vp, & it be came a lyon: it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The Heythen herde of him, and toke him in their nettes, and brought him in chaynes vnto the lon-de of Egipte. Now when the damme sawe, that all hir hope and comforte was awaye, she toke another of hir whelpes, & made a lyon of him: which wente amonge the lyons, and became a fearce lyon, learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke, he destroyed their palaces, and made their cities waist: In so much ẏ the whole lōde & euery thinge therin, were vtterly desolate, thorow the very voyce of his roaringe. Then came the Heithen together on euery syde out of all contryes agaynst him, layed their nettes for him, & toke him in their pytte.* So they bounde him 4 Re.25.a with chaynes, and brought him to the Iere.39.a kinge of Babilon: which put him in 52.a. preson, that his voyce shulde nomore be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israel.
As for thy mother, she is like a vy B ne in thy bloude, planted by the water syde: hir frutes and braunches are growen out of many waters, hir stalkes were so stronge, that men myght haue made staues therof for officers: she grew so hye in hir stalkes. So whē men sawe that she exceeded the heyght and multitude of hir braunches, she was rooted out in displeasure, & cast downe to the grounde. The east wynde dryed vp hir frute, hir stronge stalkes were broken of, wythered & brent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wildernesse, in a drye and thyrstye grounde. And ther is a fyre gone out of hir stalkes, which hath brēt vp hir braunches & hir frute: so that she hath no mo stronge stalkes, to be staues for officers. This is a piteous and misera ble thinge.

The.xx. Chapter.

¶ The great vnthankfulnesse of the feraunce of God.

LORDE, and sat thē downe by me Then came the worde of the LOR-DE vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of man, speake to the elders of Israel, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Are ye come hether to axe ony thīge at me? As treuly as I lyue (sayeth the LOR-DE) I will geue you no āswere. Wilt thou not reproue them, (thou sonne of mā) wilt thou not reproue thē? Shew them the abhominacyons of theyr fore fathers, and tell them: Thus sayeth Exod.3.b the LORDE God: * In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyft vp myne honde vpon the sede of the house of Ia cob, and shewed my selfe vnto them in the londe of Egipte, Yee whan I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, and sayd: I am the LORDE your God, euen in the daye that I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, to brynge them out of þ lãde of Egipte, in to a lande that I had pro vyded for them, which floweth wt mylk monge all other. Thẽ sayd I vnto thẽ: Deut.7.a. * Cast awaye euery man the abhomynacyons that he hath before hym, and defyle not your selues with the Idols of Egipte, for I am the LORDE your God. But they rebelled agaynste me, and wolde not folowe me, to cast a waye euery mã the abhominacyons of his eyes, and to forsake the Idols of Egipte.

B Then I made me to poure myne in-dignacyon ouer them, & to satisfye my wrath vpon them: yee euen in the myd-dest of the lõde of Egipte. But I wold not do it, for my names sake, þ it shuld not be vnhalowed before the Heythen, whome whom I shewed myselfe vnto them, that I wolde brynge them out of they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbathes: for theyr harte was gone after theyr Idols.

Neuerthelesse myne eye spared them, so that I wolde not vtterly slaye thẽ, and consume them in the wyldernesse.
Moreouer, I sayd vnto theyr son C nes in the wyldernesse: * Walke not Exod.[illegible] not youre selues with theyr Idols, for

I made me agayne to poure out my in-my wrath vppon them in the wylderhande for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonge the Heythen, be fore whom I had brought them forth.

I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse, that I wolde scat-tre them amonge the Heythẽ, & strowe them amonge the nacyõs: because they hadde not kepte my lawes, but caste asyde my commaundementes, vnhalo-wed my Sabbathes, and lyft vp theyr eyes to theyr fathers Idols. Wherfore I gaue them also commaundemẽtes not good, and lawes thorowe the which they shulde not lyue, and I vn-halowed them in theyr owne gyftes:
* (when I appoynted for my selfe all Exo.13.a theyr fyrstborne) to make thẽ desolate, that they myght knowe, howe that I am the LORDE.
Therfore (O thou sonne of mã) tel D the house of Israell, thus sayeth the LORDE God: Besyde all this, youre forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, & greatly offended agaynst me: For after I had brought thẽ in to the whẽ they saw euery hye hyl and al the thicke trees: they made there their ofringes, and prouoked me with these oblacions, makinge swete sauours the-

Then I axed them: what haue ye to do with al, ẏ ye go thither? And therfore is it called the hye place vnto this daye Wherfore, speake vnto the house of

The.xxi.Chapter.

The swearde prophecyed to come vpon Israel and the Ammonites, by ẏ kynge of Babilon.

The worde of ẏ LORDE A came to me sayenge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face towarde Ierusalē, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, & prophecie agaynst the londe of Israel, saye to the lōde of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, I wil vpon the, and will drawe my swearde out of the sheeth, and roote out of the both the righteous and the wycked.
Seynge then that I will roote out of the both the righteous and wicked, therfore shall my swearde go out of his sheeth, agaynst al flesh, frō ẏ north to ẏ south: that all flesh maye knowe, how that I the LORDE haue drawen my swearde out of the sheeth, & it shall not be put in agayne. Mourne therfore (o thou sonne of man) ẏ thy loynes crack withall: yee mourne bytterly for them. And yf they saye, wherfore mournest thou? Then tell thē: for the tydinge that commeth, at ẏ which all hartes shal melte, all hōdes shall be letten downe, al stomackes shal faint, and all knees shal waxe feble. Beholde it cōmeth and shal be fulfylled, sayeth the LORDE God.

E Agayne, ẏ worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophecie, and speake: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: speake, ẏ swearde is sharpened and wel scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, & scoured that it maye be bright. O ẏ destroyenge * staf of my sonne, shall bringe downe all woode. (Nu.10.a.) He hath put his swearde to the dightinge, that good holde maye be taken of it. This swearde is sharpened and dight, that it maye be geuen in to the hond of the manslayer.

Crye (o thou sonne of man) and houle, for this swearde shall smyte my people, and all the rulers in Israell, which with my people shall be slayne downe to the grounde thorow this swearde. Smyte thou vpō thy the: for wherfore shulde not the plage and staf of iudgment come? Prophecy thou sōne of man and smyte thine hondes together: make the swearde twoegged, yee make it thre egged, that mānslayers swearde, that swearde of the greate slaughter, which shall smyte them, euē in their preuy chambres, to make them abashed and faynte at the hartes, and in all gates to make some of them fal. O how bright & sharpe is it, how wel dight and mete for the slaughter? Get the to some place alone, other vpō the right honde or on the lefte, wheter so euer thy face turneth. I will smyte my hondes together also, and satisfie my wrothfull indignacion, euē I ẏ LORDE haue sayde it.

F The worde of the LORDE came yet vnto me agayne, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, make the two stretes, that ẏ swearde of the kinge of Babilō maye come. Both these stretes shall go out of the londe. He shall set him vp a place: at the heade of ẏ strete shall he chose him out a corner. Make the a strete, that the swearde maye come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cytie of Ierusalem. For the kinge of Babilon shal stonde in ẏ turnynge of the waye, at the heade of the two stretes, to * axe counsel at the sothsayers, castynge the lottes & his arowes, to axe counsell at the Idols, (Leuit.19.f. and.20.a Deu.18.b) and to loke in the lyuer. But the sothsayenge shall poynte to the right syde vpon Ierusalem, that he maye set men of warre, to smyte it with a grate noyse, to crye out Alarum, to set batteirāmes agaynst the gates, to graue vp dyches, and to make bulworkes. Neuertheles, as for the sothsayēge, they shal holde it but for vanite, euē as though a prest were tolde them: Yee and they them selues remembre their wickednesse, so that by right they must be taken & wōne. Therfore sayeth the LORDE God: For so much as ye youre selues shew your offēce, & haue opened your wickednes, so ẏ in al your workes mē may se youre synnes: Yee in so much (I saye) that ye youre selues haue made mencion therof, ye shalbe taken by violence.

D O thou shamefull wicked gyde of Israel, whose daye is come: euen the tyme that wickednesse shal haue an ende: Thus saieth the LORDE God: take awaye the mytre, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: ẏ humble is exalted, and ẏ proude brought lowe. Punysh, punish: yee, punysh them will I, and destroye them: and that shal not be fulfilled, vntil he come, to whom the iudgment belongeth, and to whom I haue geuē it. And thou (o sonne of mā) prophecy, and speake: Thus saieth the LORDE God to ẏ childrē of * Ammon, & to their blasphemy speake thou (Iere.49.a Ezec.25.a Amos.1.d) The sweard ẏ sweard is drawē forth already to the slaugter, and scoured that it glystreth (because thou hast loked the out vanities, and prophecied lyes) that it maye come vpō thy necke, like as vpon the other vngodly, which be slayne: whose daye came when their wickednesse was full. Though it were put vp agayne in to the sheeth, yet will I punysh the, in the londe where thou wast norished and borne, & poure myne indignacion vpon the, and will blowe vpō the in the fyre of my wrath.

and delyuer the vnto cruell people, which are learned to destroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre, and thy bloude shal be shed in the londe, that thou mayest be put out of remembraunce. Euen I the LORDE haue spoken it.

drosse. All they that shulde be brasse, tynne, yron & leade, are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: For so much as ye all are turned in to drosse, beholde: I will brynge you together vnto Jerusa lem, like as syluer, brasse, yron, tynne and leade are put together i ye fornace, and the fyre blowē there vnder to melt them: Euen so will I gather you, put you in together, and melt you in my wrath and indignacion. I will bringe you together, and kyndle ye fyre of my cruell displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin. Like as ye syluer is melted in the fyre, so shal ye also be melted therin: ye ye maye knowe, how that I the LORDE haue poured my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, tell her: Thou art an vnclene lon-de, which is not rayned vpō in ye daye of the cruell wrath: * thy prophetes ye Miche. 3. ar in ye, ar sworn together to deuoure soules, like as a roaringe Lyon that lyueth by his pray. They receaue riches and good, and make many wyd-dowes in the. Thy prestes breake my D lawe, and defyle my Sāctuary * They Leui. 10. put no dyfference betwene ye holy and vnholy, nother discerne betwene the clene and vnclene: they turne their eyes fro my Sabbathes, & I am vnhalowed amonge thē. Thy rulers in the are like rauyshinge wolues, to shed bloude, & to destroye soules for their owne co-uetous lucre. * As for thy prophetes, Ezec. 13. they dawbe with vntēpered claye, they Mich. 3. se vanities & prophecie lyes vnto thē, Soph. 3. sayēge: ye LORD god saieth so: where as ye LORDE hath not spokē. The people in ye lōde vseth wicked extorciō & robbery. They vexe ye poore and ne-dy & * oppresse the straunger agaynst Exo. 22. c. syght. And I sought in the londe for a man, ye wold make vp the hedge, and set hym self in the gappe before me in the londes behalf, that I shulde not vtterly destroye it: but I coulde fynde none.

Therfore wyll I poure out my cruell dysplesure vpon them and burne thē in ye fyre of my wrath: theyr owne way es wyll I recōpence vpon theyr heades sayeth the LORDE God.

The.xxiii. Chapter.

¶ The Idolatry or whoredome of Samaria and Jerusalem.

B The wordes of ye LORDE
came vnto me, sayenge:
Thou sonne of man, ther were two women that had one mother: These (when they were yonge) beganne to playe the Ez.20.a harlottes * in Egypt. There were their brestes brused, and the pappes of their maydenheade destroyed. The eldest of them was called Oola, and hyr yōgest syster Ooliba. These two were myne, and bare sōnes and doughters. Theyr names were, Samaria, and that was Oola: and Jerusalem, that was Ooliba. As for Oola, she beganne to go a whorynge, when I had takē her to me 3.Re.15.d * She was set on fyre vpō hir louers the Assirians, whych had to do wyth her: euen the prynces and lordes, that were decked in costly araye, fayre yōge men, lusty ryders of horses. Thus tho row hyr whoredome, she cleued vnto all the yonge men of Assiria: Yee she was madde vpon them, and defyled herself wyth all their Idols. Nother ceassed she from the fornicacion, that she vsed wt the Egiptians: for in hyr youth they layed wyth her, they brused the brestes 4.Re.17.a of hyr maydenheade and poured theyr whoredome vpō her. Wherfore * I delyuered her in to the hondes of hyr louers, euen the Assirians, whom she so loued. These discouered hir shame, toke hyr sōnes and doughters, & slewe her wyth ye swearde: An euel name gat she of all people, & they punysshed her.
Jere.3.b * Hyr syster Ooliba sawe thys, & destroyed herself with inordinate loue, more then she, and exceaded hyr syster 4.Re.16.b in whordom * she loued the Assirians Ezec.16.a (whych also laye wyth her) namely, ye princes & greate lordes ye were clothed wyth all maner of gorgyous apparell, all lusty horsmen and fayre yonge personnes. Then I sawe, that they both were defyled alyke: But she increased styl in whoredome: for whē she sawe mē paynted vpon the wall, the ymages of ye Caldees set forth wyth fresh colours with fayre gyrdles aboute them, and goodly bonettes vpon theyr heades, lo kynge al lyke prynces (after the maner of the Babylonians and Caldees in theyr owne lōde, where they be borne) Immedyatly, as soone as she sawe thē she brent in loue vpon them, and sent messaungers for them in to the londe, of the Caldees.
Now when the Babylonians came to her they laye wyth her & defyled her wyth theyr whordom, and so was she polluted wyth them. And when hir lust was abated from thē, * hyr whor Esa. 47.a dome and shame was discouered and Ezec. 16.d sene: then my harte forsoke her lyke as Naum. 3.a my harte was gone frō hyr syster also.
Neuertheles she vsed hyr whordome C euer the longer the more, and remem-bred ye dayes of hyr youth, wherin she had played the harlot in the londe of Egypte: * she brent in lust vpon thē, Ezec.16.a whose flesh was lyke the flesh of asses, and theyr sede lyke the sede of horses.
Thus thou hast renued the fylthynesse of thy youth, when thy louers brused thy pappes, and marred thy brestes in Egypte.
Therfore (o Ooliba) thus sayeth the LORDE God. I wyll rayse vp thy louers (wyth whom thou hast satisfied thy lust) agaynst the, and gather them together rounde aboute the: Namely, the Babylonians, & all the Caldees: Pecod, Schoa, and Coa, wyth all the Assirians: all yonge and fayre louers prynces and lordes, knyghtes & gentelmen, whych be all good horsmē.
These shall come vpon ye wyth horses, charrettes, and a greate multitude of people: which shalbe harnessed aboute the on euery syde, with brestplates, shel-des and helmettes. I will punysh the before them, yee they them selues shall punyshe the, accordynge to theyr owne iudgment. I wyll put my gelousy vpō the, so that they shal deale cruelly with the. They shal cut of thy nose and thine eares, and the remnaunt shal fall thorrow ye swearde. They shall cary away thy sonnes and doughters, and the residue shalbe brent in the fyre. They shall strype the out of thy clothes, and cary thy costly Jewels away with thē.
Thus wyll I make an ende of thy D fylthinesse and whordome, which thou hast brought out of ye londe of Egypt: so that thou shalt turne thyne eyes nomor after them, and cast thy mynde no more vpon Egypte. For thus sayeth ye LORDE, Beholde, I wyll delyuer the in to the hondes of them, whō thou hatest: Yee euen in to the hondes of thē with whō thou hast fulfylled thy lust, which shall deale cruelly with thy. All thy laboure shall they take with them and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthy whordome shal come to light. All these thynges shall happen vnto the, because of thy whor-dome, which thou hast vsed amonge ye Gentyles, & whose Idols thou hast de fyled thyselfe. Thou haste walked in the waye of thy syster, therfore wyll I geue the hir cuppe in thy honde.

Thus sayeth the LORDE God:
Thou shalt drike of thy systers cuppe, how depe, and farre so euer it be to the botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scor ne, and had as greatly in derysion, as is possible. Thou shalt be full of dronkennesse and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy syster Samaria is a cup of destruc-cion and waistyng: the same shalt thou drynke, and suppe it out euen to ye dreg ges: yee thou shalt eate vp the broken peces of it, & so teare thyne owne bres-tes: For euen I haue spoken it, sayeth the LORDE God.
E Therfore thus sayeth the LOR-DE God. For so much as thou hast forgotten me, & cast me asyde, so beare now thyne owne fylthynesse and whor dome, The LORDE sayd moreouer vnto me: Thou sonne of man, wylt yu not reproue Oola, & Ooliba? Shewe them their abhominacions: namely, yt they haue broken theyr wedlocke, and stayned their hondes with bloude: yee 4.Re.21.a euen with their Idols haue they cōmit Eze.16.c ted adnoutry, * and offred them their owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whom they had borne vnto me. Yee and thys haue they done to me also: they haue de fyled my Sanctuary in that same daye and haue vnhalowed my Sabbath.
For whē they had slayne thyer chyldrē for theyr Idols, they came ye same daye in to my Sanctuary to defyle it. Lo, this haue they done i my house. Besyd all thys, thou hast sent thy messaūgers for men out of farre contreyes and whē they came, thou hast bathed, trymmed and set forth thy selfe of the best fashyō thou sattest vpon a goodly bed, and a table spred before the: wherupon thou hast set myne * incēse and myne oyle. Exo.30.d[?] Then was ther greate cheare with her F and the men that were sent from farre cōtryes ouer ye deserte: vnto these they gaue braceslettes vpon their hondes & set glorious crownes vpō their heades Then thought I: no doute, these will vse theyr harlottry also with yonder olde whore. And they went in to the her as vnto a cōmune harlot: Euen so wēte they also to Oola and Ooliba, those fylthy women.
O ye all that loue vertue & ryghteousnes iudge them, punysh them: * as Levi.20.b adnoutrers & murtherers ought to be Eze.16.g[?] iudged & punysshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloude is in their hondes. Wherfore thus, sayeth the LORDE God: brynge a greate multitude of people vpon them, & make them be scattred and spoyled, these shall stone them, and gore them wyth their sweardes. They shall slaye their sōnes and doughters & burne vp their houses with fyre. Thus wil I destroye all such fylthynesse out of the londe, yt all women maye learne, not to do after your vnclennesse. And so they shal laye your fylthynesse vpon youre owne sel-ues, and ye shalbe punysshed for the syn nes, that ye haue cōmitted with your Idols, and ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The .xxiiii. Chapter.

The destruction of Ierusalē & cap tiuyte of ye people signifyed by ye pot.

A IN the .ix. yeare, in the .x.
Moneth, the .x. daye of the Moneth came ye worde of the LORD vnto me, say-enge: O thou sonne of mā, wryte vp the name of thys daye, yee euen ye houre of thys presēt daye when ye kynge of Babilō set himself agaynst Ierusalem Shew that obstinate hous holde a * parable, and speake vnto thē Eze.17.a Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Get the a * pot, set it on, and poure water Eze.11.a in to it, put all the peces together in it, all the good peces, the loyne & the shul-der and fyll it with the best bones.
Take one of ye best shepe, and an heape of bones withall: let it boyle well, and let the bones seeth well therin.
With that, sayde ye LORD God Naū.3.a on thys maner: * Wo be vnto the bloudy cytie of the pot, wherupon the Eze.20.b rustynesse hangeth, and is not yet scou= red awaye. Take out the peces that are in it, one after another: ther nede no lot tes be cast therfore: for the bloud is yet in it. Upon a playne drye stone hath she poured it, and not upon the grounde, y G it might be couered with dust. And ther fore haue I letten her poure hir bloude upon a plaine drye stony rocke, because it shulde not be hyd, and that I myghte bringe my wrothfull indignacyon and vengeaunce upon her.

Wherfore, thus sayeth the LOR=
DE God. O, wo be unto that bloud= Leui.20.b thirsty cytie, for whom I wyll prepare Ezec.16.b an heape of wood: beare thou the bo= nes together, kyndle thou the fyre, seth the fleshe, let all be well sodden that the bones maye be sucked out. Moreouer, set the pot empty upon the coales, that it maye be warme, and the metall hote: that the fylth and rustynesse may be cõ= sumed. But it wyl not go of, ther is so much of it, the rustynesse must be brent out. Thy fylthynesse is abhominable, for I haue clensed the, but thou woldest not be clensed. Thou canst not be pour ged from thyne uncleannesse, tyll I haue poured my wrothfull indignacyon up= pon the. Euen I the LORDE haue so deuysed: Yee it is come therto alrea= dy, that I wyll do it. I wyll not go backe, I wyll not spare, I wyll not be intreated: but accordyng to thy wayes & ymaginacyõs, thou shalt be punished sayeth the LORDE God.

H And the worde of the LORD cam unto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, beholde, I wyl take awaye the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalte y nother mourne nor wepe, nor water thy chekes therfor: thou mayst mourne by thy selfe alone, but use no deadly la= mentacyon, holde on thy bonet, & put on thy shues uppon thy fete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners bread.
So I spake unto the people by tymes Eze.17.d in the mornynge, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then uppon the nexte morowe, I Eze.12.d dyd as I was commaunded. And the people sayd unto me: wylt thou not tell us what that sygnyfieth, whiche thou doest? I answered them, the worde of the LORDE came unto me, sayenge: Tell the house of Israel: thus sayeth y LORDE God: beholde I wyll sus= Nah.3.a pende my Sanctuary: euen the glorye of your power, the pleasure of youre eyes, and the thynge that ye loue: youre sonnes and doughters whom ye haue lefte, shall fall thorow the swearde.

Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye do I also: Ye shall not hyde youre faces, ye shall eate no mourners bread, your bo= nettes shall ye haue upon your heades, and shues upon your fete. Ye shall no= ther mourne nor wepe, but in your syn nes ye shalbe sorowfull, and one repent with another. Thus Ezechiel is youre shewtoken. For loke as he hath done, so (when this commeth) ye shal do also, that ye may learne to know, that I am the LORDE God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man. In the daye when I take from them theyr power, theyr ioye and honoure, the lust of theyr eyes the burthen of theyr bodyes, namely, theyr sõnes and doughters: Then shall ther one escape, and come unto the, for to shewe the. In y daye shal thy mouth be opened to hym, which is escaped, y thou mayest speake, & be nomore dõme Yee and thou shalt be theyr shewtokẽ, that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

The.xxv. Chapter.

¶ Agaynst Ammon, Moab, Seir, and the Philistines.

The worde of the LORD A came unto me, sayenge: Thou sõne of mã, set thy face agaynst the * Ammo= Iere.49.a nites, prophecy upõ them, Ezec.21.d and saye unto the Ammonites. Heare the worde of the LORDE God, Thus sayeth the LORDE God: For so much as thou spekest ouer my Sãc tuary: Aha I trowe it be now suspen= ded, & ouer the lande of Israel: I trow it be now desolat: yee and ouer y house of Juda, I trow they be now led awaye presoners. Beholde, I wyll delyuer the to the people of the east, that they maye haue the in possessiõ, these shal set theyr castels and houses in y. They shal eate thy frute, and drynke up thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyl make of it a stal for camels, and of Ammon a shepfold, and ye shal knowe, that I am the LORD.
For thus sayeth the LORDE God: In so much as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and staped with thy fete, yee reioyced in thyne harte ouer y lãde of Israel with despyte: beholde, I wyl stretch out myne hande ouer the also, & delyuer the to be spoyled of the Heithẽ, and roote the out from amonge ŷ people, and cause the be destroied out of al B landes: yee I wyll make the be layed waist, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the LORDE.

Thus sayeth the LORDE God:
Esa.15.16 For so much as * Moab and Seir do Esa.48.a. say: As for the house of Juda, it is but Soph.2.b lyke as al other Gentyles be: Therfore beholde, I wyl make the cyties of Mo ab wapenlesse, and take awaye theyr strength, theyr cyties and these coastes of theyr lande, which are the pleasures of ŷ cou̅try: As namely, Beth Jesimoth Baalmeon, and Cariathaim: these wyl I open vnto them of the east, that they maye fall vpon the Ammonites: and wyll geue them these in possession, so that the Ammonites shall nomore be had in remembraunce amonge the Hey then. Euen thus wyl I punysh Moab also, that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.
Moreouer, thus sayeth the LOR
Psa.136b DE God: Because that * Edom hath Esay 34 a auenged and eased hymselfe vpon the Jere.49.b house of Juda, therfore thus sayeth ŷ Ezec.32 f. LORDE: I wyll reach out myne and.35.a hande vpon Edom, and take away ma̅ C and beast out of it. From Theman vn to Dedan wyl I make it desolate, they 2 Mac.5.a shalbe slayne with the swearde. * Tho row my people of Israel, wyll I aue̅ge me agayne vpon Edo̅: they shall ha̅dle hym, accordynge to my wrath & indignacyon, so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce, sayeth the LORD God.
Thus sayeth the LORDE God:
Esa.14.e For so much as the * Philistines haue Jere 47.a done this: namely, taken vengeaunce Soph.2.a with dispytful stomackes, & of an olde euell wyll set themselues to destroye:
Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE God: Beholde, I wyl stretch out myne hande ouer the Philistines: & destroye the destroyer, and cause all the remaunt of the see coast to perysh. A great venge aunce wyll I take vpon them, and pu-nysh them cruelly: that they may know how that I am the LORDE, which haue auenged me of them.

The.xxvi. Chapter.

The mourneth vpo̅ the cytie of Tyre (otherwyse called zor) for the destruccyon that was to come vpon her.

The.xxvi. Chapter.

It happened, that in the [illegible] yeare, the fyrste daye of the moneth ŷ worde of ŷ LOR DE came vnto me, sayeng:
* Thou sonne of man, Be-Esa.23.a cause that Tyre hath spoken vpon Je Jere.47.b rusalem: Aha, now I trow the portes Eze.27.a of the people be broken, and she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my bely ful. Yee therfore sayeth the LORDE God. Beholde O Tyre, I wyll vpo̅ ŷ, I wyl brynge a great multitude of peo ple agaynst the, lyke as when the see a-ryseth with his wawes: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and caste downe hir towres: I wyll scrape the grou̅de from her, and make her a bare stone, yee as the dryenge place, where ŷ fysshers hange vp theyr nettes by ŷ see syde. Euen I haue spoken it, sayeth the LORDE God. The Gentyles shall spoyle her, hir doughters vpon ŷ felde shall perysh with the sweard, that they maye knowe, how ŷ I am ŷ LORD.
For thus sayeth the LORD God: B Beholde, I wyll brynge hyther Nabu chodonosor (which is the kynge of Ba bilon and a kynge of kynges) from the North, vpon Tyre, with horses & char rettes, horsemen, and with a great mul tytude of people. Thy doughters that are in the lande, shall he slaye with the swearde. But against the he shal make bulworkes and graue vp dyches about the, and lyft vp his shylde agaynst the.
His slynges and battelrammes shal he prepare for thy walles, and w his wea pens breake downe thy towres. The dust of his horses shall couer the, they shalbe so many, thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horseme̅, charrettes and wheles, whan he commeth to thy portes, as men do in to an open cytie.
With the hoffes of his horse fete, shall he treade downe al thy stretes. He shal slaye thy people with the swearde, and breake downe the pylers of thy stre̅gth They shall wayst awaye thy ryches, & spoyle thy marchaundyse. Thy walles shall they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones thy tymbre and fundacyons, shall they cast in the water. * Thus wyll I brynge ŷ Jere.7.d melody of thy songes, and the voyce of thy mynstrelsy to an ende, so that they shall nomore be herde. I wyll make a C bare stone of the, yee a dryeng place for nettes, and thou shalt neuer be buylded agayne. For euen I the LORD haue spoken it, sayeth the LORDE God.

Thus hath the LORDE God spoken concernynge Tyre: The Iles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fal, and at the crye of the slayne, that shalbe murthured in the. All kynges of the see shal come downe from theyr seates regall: they shal laye awaye theyr roabes, and put of theyr costly clothynge: Yee with tremblynge shall they be clothed, they shall syt vpon the grounde: they shalbe afrayed at thy sodayne fall, and be abashed at the. They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the: * O thou noble cytie, that hast ben so greatly occupied of (Ezec.1.a; Apo.18.c) vide, thou that haste bene the strongest vpon the see with thyn inhabitours, of whom all men stode in feare: How arte thou now so vtterly destroyed? Now at the tyme of thy fall the inhabitours of the Iles, yee & the yles thēselues shal D stonde in feare at thyne ende. For thus sayeth the LORDE God: whē I make the a desolate cytie (as other cyties be ỷ noman dwelleth in) and when I bryng the depe vpon the, ỷ great waters may couer the: Then wyll I cast the downe vnto thē, that descēde in to ỷ pyt: vnto a people that hath ben longe dead, and set the in a lōde that is beneth, lyke the olde wyldernesse, with them which go downe to theyr graues, so that noman shal dwel more in the. And I wyl make the to be nomore in honour, in the lāde of the lyuynge. I wyll make an ende of the, & ỷ shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be foūde for euermore, sayeth the LORDE God.

Agaynst the prynces of Tyre.

A The worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: O thou sonne of man make a lamentable complaynte vpon * Tyre, and saye vnto (Eze.26.28) Tyre, whiche is a porte of the see, that occupieth with much people, and many Iles, thus spaketh the LORDE God: O Tyre thou hast sayd: I am a noble cytie. Thy borders are in ỷ myddest of the see, and thy buylders haue made the maruaylous goodly. All thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mount Senir. From Libanus haue they takē Cedre trees to make ỷ mastes, & the Okes of Basan to make the owers. Thy borders haue they made of yuery, and costly wood out of ỷ Ile of Cethim. Thy sayle was of whyte smal nedle worke out of the lande of Egypte, to hange vpon thy mast: and thy hangynges of yalow sylke and purple, out of the Iles of Elisa. They of Sidō and Aruad were thy maryners, and the wysest in Tyre were thy shipmasters. The eldest and wysest at Geball were they that mēded and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the see & theyr shipmen occupyed theyr marchaundyses in the. The Perses, Lydians, & Lybians were in thyne hoost, and helped the to fyght: these hanged vp theyr shyldes and helmettes & the, these set forth thy bewty. They of Aruad were with thyne hoost rounde aboute thy walles, and were thy watchmen vpon thy towres: these hanged vp theyr shildes roūd aboute thy walles, and made the maruaylous goodly. Tharsis occupyed & B the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne, and lead, and made thy market great, Iauan, Tubal, and Mesech were thy marchauntes, which brought the men, and ornamentes of metall for thyn occupyenge. They of the house of Thogarma brought vnto the at the tyme of thy marte, horse, horsemen & mules. They of * Dedan were thy marchauntes: and many other Iles that occupyed with, brought the wethers, Elephant bones, and Paycokes for a presente. (Ezec.25.f) The Sirians occupyed with the because of thy dyuerse workes, and increased thy marchaūdyses, with Smaragdes, with scarlet, with nedle worke with lynnē cloth, with sylke, and with Crystall.

Iuda and the lande of Israel occupyed with the, & brought vnto thy markettes, wheate, balme, hony oyle, & triacle. Damascus also vsed marchaundyses with the, in ỷ best wyne & whyte woll: because thy occupyenge was so great, and thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan, and Mensal haue brought vnto thy markettes, yron ready made, & Cassia and Calamus, accordyng to thy occupyenge. Dedan occupyed with the in fayre tapestry worke and quyshins. Arabia & all the prynces of Cedar haue occupyed with the, in shepe, wethers, & goates. The marchauntes of Seba & Rema haue occupied also & ỷ in al costly spyces in al precious stones & golde, which they brought vnto thy markets. Haran, Chene, & Edem, ỷ marchaūts of Saba, Assiria and Chelmad, were al doers with the and occupyed with the:

In costly rayment, of yalow sylke and nedleworke (very precyous, & therfore pakte and bounde together with roa-pes.) Yee and in Cedre wood, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Tharsis were the chefe of thyne oc-cuppynge.
A Thus thou arte full, and in great worshippe, euen in the myddest of the see. Thy marynners were euer brynging vnto the out of many waters. But the east wynde shall ouerbeare the in to ÿ myddest of the see: so that thy wares, thy marchaundyses, thy ryches, thy ma ryners, thy shipmaysters, thy helpers, thy occuppers (that brought the thyn-ges necessary) the mẽ of warre that are in the: yee and all thy cõmuns shall perysshe in the myddest of the see, in ÿ day of thy fall. The suburbes shall shake at the loude crye of thy shipmen. All whirrymen, and al marynners vpon the see, shall leape out of theyr botes, & set them selues vpon the londe. They shall lyfte vp theyr voyce because of the, & make a lamentable crye. They shal cast dust vpon theyr heades, and lye downe in the asshes. They shall shaue them sel ues, and put sackcloth vpon them for the sake. They shal mourne for ÿ with hartfull sorowe, and heuy lamentacyõ, yee theyr chyldren also shal wepe for ÿ: Alas, what cytie hath so ben destroyed in the see, as Tyre is? When thy wares and marchaundyses came from the sees, thou gauest all people ynough The kynges of the earth haste ÿ made ryche, thorow the multytude of thy wa res and occupyeng: But now art thou cast downe in to the depe of the see, all thy resorte of people is peryshed with the. All they that dwell in the Iles are abasshed at the, and al theyr kynges are afrayed, yee theyr faces haue chaũged coloure. The marchauntes of the nacy ons wondre at the. In that thou arte so clene brought to naught, and cõmest nomore vp.

The.xxviii. Chapter.

Agaynst the prynces of Tyre, and a gaynst Sidon.

B The worde of the LORDE
came vnto me, sayenge:
Thou sonne of man, tel the Eze.26.27 prynce of * Tyre: Thus sai eth the LORDE God: because thou hast a proude hart, and [illegible] sayd: * I am a God, I haue my seat in Esa.14.d the myddest of ÿ see lyke a God: where as thou arte but a man and not God, and yet stondest in thyn owne conceat, that thou arte God: Behold, thou thyn kest thy selfe wyser then * Daniel, that Dan.2.a ther is no secretes hyd from the. With thy wysedome and thy vnderstãdynge thou hast gottẽ the great welthynesse, and gathered treasure of siluer & gold.
With thy greate wysedome and occupyenge, hast thou increased thy power & because of thy great ryches thy harte is proude.
Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE God: For so much as thou hast lyft vp thyne harte, as though ÿ werest God: beholde, I wyll brynge enemyes vpon the, euen the tyrauntes of the Heythen: these shall drawe oute theyr sweardes vpon thy bewty and wysedome, & shal defyle thy glorye. They shall cast thy B down to the pyt, so that thou shalt dye in the myddest of the see, as they that be slayne. Let se, yf thou wylte saye then (befor them that slaye the) I am God: where as thou art but a man, and not God, in the handes of them that slaye the. Dye shalte thou, euen as the vncir cumcysed in the hãdes of the enemyes: for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayeth ÿ LORDE God.
Moreouer, the worde of ÿ LOR DE come vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, make a lamentable com-playnte ouer the kynge of Tyre, & tell hym: Thus sayeth the LORDE god: Thou arte a seale of a lyknesse, full of wysdome and excellent bewtye. Thou hast ben in the pleasaũt gardẽ of God: thou arte decte with all maner of precyous stones: As Ruby, Topas, Christall, Iacyncte, Onix, Iaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbũcle, and golde. Thy bewtye & the holes that be in the, were set forth in the daye of thy creacyon.
Thou arte a fayre Cherub, stretched wyde out for to couer. I haue set the vpon the holy mounte of God, there hast thou bene, and walked amonge ÿ fayre glysterynge stones. Frõ the tyme of thy creacyon thou haste bene ryghte excellent, tyll wyckednesse was founde C in the. * Because of thy great marchaũ Esa.23.a dyse, thy harte is full of wyckednesse, & thou hast offended. Therfore wyll I cast the from the mounte of God, (O thou coueryng Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glisteryng stones. Thy harte was proude in thy fayre bewtye, and thorow thy bewtye thou haste de= stroyed thy wysedome. I wyll cast the downe to the grounde, and that in the syght of kynges. Thou haste defyled thy Sãctuary, with the great wycked nesse of thy vnryghteous occupyenge.

I wyll brynge a fyre from the myddest of the, to consume the: and wyl make ẏ to asshes, in the syght of all them that loke vpon the. All they that haue bene acquaynted with the amonge the Hey then shalbe abasshed at the: seynge thou arte so clene broughte to naughte, and commest nomore vp.

And the worde of the LORDE cam vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst * Sidõ, prophecye vpon it, and speake, Thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde O Sidon, I wyl vpon the, and get me honoure in ẏ that it maye be knowen, how that I am the LORDE, when I punysshe her, and get my honoure in her. For I wyl sẽde D pestilence and bloudsheddyng in to hir stretes, so that those whiche be slayne with the swearde, shal lye rounde about in the myddest of her: & they shal know that I am the LORDE. She shal no more be a prickynge thorne, and an hur tynge brere vnto the house of Israell: nor vnto them that lye rounde aboute her and hate her: and they shal knowe, that I am the LORDE.

Thus sayeth the LORDE God:
whan I gather the housholde of Israel together agayne, from the nacyons a= monge whom they be scattred, thẽ shal I be sanctifyed in them, in the syght of the Gentyles: and they shall dwell in ẏ lande, that I gaue to my seruaunt Ja cob. They * shall dwell safely therin, buylde houses, and plante vynyardes: Yee safely shall they dwell therin, whẽ I haue punysshed al those, that despyse them rounde aboute: and then shal they knowe, that I am the LORDE theyr
God.

The.xxix. Chapter.

¶ Plages vpon Egipte, and the kyn= ges therof.

A IN the.x. yeare. vpõ the.xii. daye of the.x. moneth, the worde of the LORDE
came vnto me, sayenge:
* O thou sonne of mã, set now thy face agaynst Pharao ẏ kyng of Egipt, Prophecy agaynst hym & a= gaynst ẏ whole lãde of Egipt: Speake Jere.46.a and tell hym, thus sayeth the LORD Eze.30.31 God: Beholde, O Pharao thou kynge and.32. of Egipte, I wyll vpon the, thou great whalfyshe, that lyest in thy waters: Thou that sayest: the water is myne, I haue made it my selfe. I wyll put an hoke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysh in thy waters vpõ thy skales: af= ter that I wyll draw the out of thy wa ters, yee and all the fysshe of thy waters that hange vpon thy skales. I wyll caste the out vpon drye londe with the fysshe of thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the felde. Thou shalte not be gathered nor taken vp, but shalte be meate for the beastes of the felde, & for the foules of the ayre: ẏ all they which dwell in Egipte, maye knowe ẏ I am the LORDE: because thou hast bene a * staffe of rede to the house of Israel. 4.Re.18.d When they toke holde of ẏ with theyr Esay.30.a hande thou brakest and prickedest thẽ 31.a.36.a on euery syde: and yf they leaned vpon the, thou brakest and hurtedest the rey nes of theyr backes.

Therfore thus sayeth the LORD B
God: beholde I wyl brynge a swearde vpon the, and roote out of the both mã and beast. Yee the lande of Egipte shal be desolate and waist, and shal knowe, that I am the LORDE: Because he sayd: the water is myn, I my self haue made it. Beholde therfore, I wyl vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I wyl make the lande of Egipte wayst and deso= late, from the towre of Syenes vnto ẏ borders of the Morians lande: so that in.xl. yeares ther shall no foote of man walke there, nother foote of cattell go there, nother shall it be inhabi= ted. I wyl make the lande of Egipte to be desolate amonge other wayste con= tryes, and hir cyties to lye voyde.xl. yea res, amonge other voyde cyties: And I wyll scattre the Egipcyans amonge ẏ Heythen and nacyons.

Agayne thus sayeth the LORDE God: * Whẽ the.xl. yeares are expyred Jere.46.d I wyll gather the Egipcyans together agayne, out of the nacyõs, amõge whõ they were scattred, and wyl brynge the presoners of Egipte agayne in to the lande of Pathures theyr owne natiue contre, that they maye be there a lowly small kyngdome: yee they shalbe ẏ sma= lest amonge other kingdomes, lest they exalte themselues aboue the Heythen: for I wyll so mynysshe them, that they shal nomore rule the Heythē. They shal nomore be an hope vnto ye house of Is rael, nother prouoke them ony more to wyckednesse, to cause thē turne backe, and to folowe thē: and they shal kno we, that I am the LORDE God.

C In the .xx vii. yeare, the fyrst daye of the fyrst moneth, came the worde of ye LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man Nabuchodonosor ye kyn ge of Babylon hath made hys hoost, wyth greate trauayle and laboure to come before Tyre: ye euery heade maye be balde, and euery shulder bare. Yet hath Tyre geuen nother hym nor hys hoost ony rewarde, for the great tra-uayle that he hath taken there. Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE God: beholde I will geue the londe of Egip te vnto Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon, that he maye take awaye all hir substaunce, robbe hir robberies, & spoyle hir spoyles, to paye hys hoost their wages wythall. I wyll geue him the lõde of Egipte for his laboure, that he toke for me before Tyre. At ye same tyme will I cause the horne of the hou se of Israel to growe forth, and open thy mouth agayne amonge them: that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

The .xxx. Chapter.

Agayne of the plages of Egipte.

A Moreouer, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sõne of mã, prophecy and speake, thus sayth the LORDE God: Mourne, woo worthe thys daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the LOR DE is come, the darck daye of ye Hey-then, the houre is at honde, the sweard commeth vpon Egipte. Whē ye woūded men fall downe in Egipte, when hyr people are taken awaye, and when hyr fundacyons are destroyed: ye Morians londe shall be afrayed: yet ye Mo rians londe, Libia and Lidia, all their comun people, and Chub, and all that be confederate vnto thē shall fall with them thorowe the swearde.
Thus saieth the LORDE: The maynteners of ye londe of Egipte shall fall, the pryde of hir power shall come downe: euen vnto the towre of Syenes shall they be slayne downe with ye swearde, sayeth the LORDE God.
B Amonge other desolate contryes they shall be made desolate, & amõge other wayst cytyes they shalbe waysted. And they shall knowe, ye I am that LOR-DE when I kyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when all hir helpers are destroyed At that tyme, shal messangers go forth fro me in shyppes, to make the carelesse Moryans afrayed: and sorowe shall come vpon them in the daye of Egypte, for doutles it shall come. Thus sayeth the LORDE God: I wyll make an ende of the people of Egipt thorow the hande of Nabuchadonosor kyng of Babylon. He and hys people wyth him yee and the cruell tyrauntes of the Hey then shall be broughte to destroye the londe. They shall drawe oute theyre sweardes vpon Egypte and fyll ye lond ful of slayne men. I wyl drye vp theyre floudes of water, and sell the londe in to the handes of wycked people. The londe and all that is therin, wyll I de-stroye thorowe the enemyes. Euen I the LORDE haue sayde it And thus sayeth the LORDE C God: * I wyll destroye the Idols, and Iere.4 brynge ye ymages of Noph to an ende.
Ther shall nomore be a prynce of E-gipte, and a fearfulnesse wyll I sende in to the Egipcyans lande. As for Pa-thures, I wyll make it desolate, & kind le a fyre in zoan. Alexandria wyll I pu-nyshe, and poure my wrothfull indig-nacion vpon Sin, which is the strẽgth of Egipte. All the substaunce of Alexã-dria wyll I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egipt. Sin shalbe in great heuines, Alexandria shalbe rooted out, & Noph shall haue dayly sorowe. The best men of Heliopolis & Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swearde, and caryed awaye captiue. At Taphnis the daye shalbe darcke, whē I breake there the cepter of the lande of Egipte, and when ye põpe of hir power shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and hir doughters shalbe led awaye in to the captiuite. Thus wyl I punysh Egipte, that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.
It happened in the .xi. yeare, vpon D the seuenthe daye of the fyrste moneth, that the LORDES worde came vn to me, sayenge: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I wyll breake the arme of Pharao kynge of Egypt: and lo, it shal not be bounde vp to be healed, nother shall ony playstre be layed vpõ it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde ye swearde. Therfore, thus sayeth the LORDE God: beholde, I wyll vpon Pharao the kinge of Egypte, and bruse hys stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) and wyll smyte ye swearde oute of hys hande. As for the Egypcyans, I wyll scattre them amonge the Heithen, and strowe them in the lõdes aboute. Agayne I wyll strengthe the arme of the kynge of Babylon, & geue hym my swearde in hys hande: but I wyll breake Pharaos arme, so that he shall holde it before hym pyteouslye, lyke a wounded mã. Yee I wyll stablish the kynge of Babylõs arme, and the armes of Pharao shall fall downe: that it maye be knowne, that I am ye LORDE, which geue the kynge of Babylõ my swearde in hys hande, that he may drawe it oute vpon the lond of Egipt: and that whan I scattre the Egypcyans amonge the Gentyles and strowe them in the londes aboute, that they maye knowe, that I am ye LORDE.

The.xxxi. Chapter.

Of the kynge of Egypte.

Morouer, it happened in the xi. yeare the fyrste daye of the thyrde moneth, that ye
worde of the LORDE
came vnto me, sayenge:
Thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the kynge of Egypte, and to al his people: Whome arte thou lyke in thy greatnesse? Beholde, Assur was lyke a Cedre tre vpon the mounte of Libanus, wyth fayre braunches: so thycke, that he gaue shadowes and shot oute verye hyghe. Hys toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym greate, and the depe set hym vpon hye.
Round about the rootes of hym ranne the floudes of water, he sente oute hys lytle ryuers vnto al the trees of ye feld.
Therfore was he hygher then all the trees of the felde, and thorowe ye multytude of waters that he sente from hym, he optayned many and long braũches.
All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in hys brãches, vnder his bowes gendred all the beastes of the felde, and vnder hys shadowe dwelte al people.
Fayre and bewtyful was he in his greatnesse, and in the lengthe of hys braunches, for hys roote stode besyde great waters: no cedre tre myght hyde hym. In the pleasaunte garden of God ther was no fyrre tre lyke hys braunches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym. All the trees in the garden of God myghte not be compared vnto hym in hys bewty: so fayre and goodlye hadde I made hym wyth the multytude of hys braunches: In so muche, that all the trees in the pleasaunte garden of God, hadde enuye at hym.
Therfore, thus sayeth the LORDE B God: For so much as he hath lyft vp hymselfe so hygh, and stretched his toppe in to the cloudes, and seynge his hart is proude in hys hyghnesse: I wil delyuer hym in to the hãdes of ye myghtyeste among the Heythen, which shal roote hym oute. Accordynge to his wickednesses wyll I caste hym awaye, the enemyes shall destroye hym, and the myghtye men of the Heythen shall so scattre hym, that hys braunches shall lye vpon all mountaynes and in al valleys: hys bowes shall be broken down to the grounde thorowe oute the lond.
Then all the people of the londe shall go from hys shadowe, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall syte vpon him, and al wylde beastes of the feld shal go aboute amonge hys braunches: so that from henceforth, no tre in the water shal attayne to hys hyghnesse, nor reache hys toppe vnto ye cloudes, nother shal ony tre of the water stonde so hyghe, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be delyuered vnder the earthe, and go downe to the graue like other men.
Morouer, thus sayeth the LORDE C God: In the daye whan he goeth downe to the graue, I wyll cause a lamentacyon to be made. I wyll couer the depe vpon hym, I wyl staunch his floudes, and the greate waters shal be refrayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorowful for hys sake, and al the trees of the felde shall be smytten. I wyll make the Heythen shake at the sounde of hys fall, whan I caste hym downe Esay.14.c to *hell, wyth them that descende in Ezech.32.f to the pytte. All the trees of Edẽ, with all the chosen and beste trees of Libanus, yee and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shall mourne wyth hym also in the lower habitacions: for they shall go downe to hell wyth hym, vnto them that be slayn wt the sweard, whiche dwelt afore vnder the shadow of hys arme amonge the Heythen.

To whom shalt yu be likened, that arte so glorious and greate, amonge the trees of Edē? Yet arte thou cast down under the earthe (amonge the trees of Eden) where thou muste lye amonge the uncyrcumcysed, wyth them that be slayne wyth the swearde. Even thus it is wyth Pharao and all hys people, sayeth the LORDE God.

The.xxxii. Chapter.

¶ Agayne of the kynge and people of Egyppte.

In the.xii. yeare, the fyrste daye of the.xii. moneth, the
worde of the LORDE
came unto me, sayenge.
Thou sonne of man, take up a lamentacion upon. * Pharao the Ezec.29. kynge of Egypte, and saye unto hym: 30,and.31. Thou arte reputed as a lyon of ye hey thē and as a whalfish in the see. Thou castest thy waters about the, thou trou blest the waters wyth thy fete, a stam pest in theyre floudes. Thus sayeth the LORDE God: * I wyll sprede Eze.12.b my nette over the, namelye, a greate and.17.c multytude of people: these shall dryve the in to my yarne, for I wyll caste the upon the lond, and let the lye upon the feld, that all the foules of the ayre may sytt upon the: I wyll geve all the beastes of the felde ynough of the. Thy fleshe wyll I caste upon the hilles, and fyll the valleys wyth thy hyghenesse.
I wyll water the londe wyth the abun daunce of thy bloude, evē to the moun taynes, and the valleys shall be full of B ye. When thou arte putte oute, I wyll cover the heaven, and make hys star-Esa.13.b. res dymme. * I wyll sprede a cloude over the Sonne, and the Moone shall not geve hyr lyghte. All the lyghtes of heaven wyll I put oute over the, and brynge darcknesse upon thy londe, say eth the LORDE God. I wyll trouble ye hartes of many people, whē I bryng thy destruccyon amonge the Heythen, and cōtryes, whom thou knowest not.
Yee I wyll make manye people wyth theyr kynges so afrayed thorowe the, that theyr heere shall stonde up, whan I shake my sweard at theyr faces. So denlye shall they be astonnyed, everye man in hymselfe, at the daye of thy fal.

For thus sayeth the LORDE
God: the kynge of Babylons swearde shall come upon the, wyth the swear-des of ye worthyes wyl I smyte down thy people. All they that be myghty amonge the Gentyles, shall wayste the proude pompe of Egypte, and brynge downe all hyr people. All the cattell al so of Egypt wyll I destroye, that they shall come nomor upon the waters: so that nother mans foote nor beastes clawe, shall stere them ony more. Then wyll I make theyr waters cleare, and C cause theyr floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayeth the LORDE God: whan I make the londe of Egypt desolate, and whan the contrye wyth al that is ther in, shall be layde wayste: and whan I smyte all them whiche dwell in it, that they maye knowe, yt I am the LOR-DE. Thys is the mournynge, that the doughters of the Heythen shall make: Yee a sorowe and lamentacyon shall they take uppe upon Egypte and all hyr people, sayeth the LORDE God.

In the.xii. yeare the.xv. daye of the moneth, came the worde of the LOR DE unto me sayenge: Thou sonne of man. Take up a lamentacyon upon the people of Egypte, and caste them downe, yee and the myghtye people of the Heythen also, even with them * yt Esay.14.c dwell beneth: and wyth them that go Ezech.31.c downe in to the graue. Downe (howe fayre so ever thou be) and lay the with the uncyrcumcysed. Among those that be slayne wyth the swearde, shall they lye. The swearde is geven alreadye, he shall be drawen forth and all hys people. The myghtye worthyes and hys D helpers, that be gone downe and lye wyth the uncyrcumcysed, and wyth them that be slayne wyth the swearde shall speake to hym oute of the hell. As sur is there also wyth hys company, & theyr graues rōd about, which were slayne and fell all wyth the swearde, whose graues lye besyde hym in ye low pytte. Hys communs are buryed rōd aboute hys graue: altogether woūded and slayne wyth the swearde, whiche men afore tyme broughte feare in to ye londe of the lyvyng. There is * Elam Jere.49.d also wyth all hys people and theyr gra Dan.8.a ves rounde aboute: whiche all beynge wounded and slayne wyth the sweard are gone downe uncyrcumcysed under the earth, which neverthelesse sometyme broughte feare in to the londe of the ly vynge: for the whiche cause they beare theyre shame, wyth the other that be E gone downe to the graue. Theyr bury all is geven them and all theyr people, amonge them that be slayne. Theyr graues are rounde aboute all them, which be vncyrcumcysed, and with thẽ that be slayne thorowe the sweard: for seynge that in tymes paste they made the londe of the lyuynge afrayed, they muste nowe beare theyre owne shame, wyth them that go downe to the pytte and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Mesech also, and Tubal, and theyr people, and theyr graues rounde aboute. These all are amonge the vncyrcumcysed, and them that be slayne wyth the swearde, because afore tyme they made the londe of the lyuynge a-frayed. Shulde not they than lye also amonge the worthyes, and vncyrcum-cysed Geauntes? which wyth theyr wea pens are gone downe to hell: whose sweardes are laied vnder theyr heades whose wickednesse is vpõ theyr bones because that as worthyes, they haue broughte feare in to the londe of the ly uynge? Yee among the vncyrcumcised shalt thou be destroied, and slepe with F thẽ, that peryshed thorow the sweard.
Jer.49.b There is the lond of * Edom with hyr Gen.25.b kynges and prynces also, which wyth Ab.25.a theyr strengthe are layed wyth them ẏ were slayne wyth the swearde, yee amonge the vncyrcumcysed, and them which are gone downe in to the pytte.
Morouer, there be all ẏ prynces of the north wyth all the Sidonians, which are gone downe to the slayne.
Wyth theyre feare and strengthe they are com to confusyõ, and lye there vncyrcumcysed, amonge those that be slayne wyth the swearde & beare theyr owne shame, wyth them that be gone downe to the pytte. Nowe whan Pha rao seyth thys, he shall be comforted ouer all hys people, that is slaine with the swearde: both Pharao and all hys hooste, sayeth the LORDE God: For I haue geuen my feare in the lond of the lyuynge. But Pharao and all hys people shall lye amonge the vncyr cumcysed, and amonge them that be slayne wyth the swearde, sayeth the LORDE God.

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

¶ The office of a preacher. The word of God muste be folowed in very dede and not onely in mouth.

A Gayn the word of ẏ LOR DE came vnto me, saieng: Thou son of man, speak to the childeren of thy people, and tell them: Whan I sende a swearde vpon a londe, yf ẏ peo ple of the lond take a man of theyr con trye, and sette hym to be theyr * watch 4.Re.9.b man, the same man (whan he seyth the swearde come vppon the londe) shall blowe the trompet, & warne ẏ people.
Yf a man nowe heare the noyse of the trompe and wyll not be warned, & the swearde come and take him away, his bloude shall be vpon hys owne heade: For he herde the sounde of the trompe and wolde not take hede, therfore hys bloude be vpon hym. But yf he wyl re ceaue warnynge, he shal saue hys lyfe.
Agayne, yf the watchman se ẏ sweard come, and shewe it not wyth ẏ trompe so that the people is not warned: yf ẏ swearde come then, and take ony man from amonge them, the same shall be taken awaye in hys owne synne, but hys bloude wyll I requyre of ẏ watch mans hande.
* And now (o thou sonne of man) B I haue made the a watcheman vnto ẏ Ezech.3.c house of Israell, ẏ where as thou heareste onye thynge oute of my mouthe, thou mayest warne them on my behalf Yf I saye vnto the wycked: thou wyc ked, thou shalte surelye dye, and thou geueste hym not warnynge, ẏ he maye beware of hys vngodly waye: thẽ shal the wycked dye in his owne synne, but hys bloude wyl I requyre of thy hand Neuertheles yf thou warne the wyc-ked of hys waye, to turn from it, wher as he yet wyll not be turned from it: then shall he dye because of hys synne, but thou haste delyuered thy soule.
Therfore (O thou son of man) speake vnto the house of Israel, Ye say thus: Oure offences and synnes lye vppon vs, and we be corrupte in them, howe shulde we then be restored vnto lyfe?
Tell them: * As truelye as I lyue (say Ezec.18.d eth the LORDE God) I haue no pleasure in ẏ death of the wycked, but muche rather that the wycked turne from hys waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from your vngodly wayes: o ye of the house of Israell, Oh, wherfore wyll ye dye?
Thou sonne of man, tell the chyl- C deren of thy people: * The ryghteous- Ezec.18.e nesse of ẏ ryghteous shall not saue him whansoeuer he turneth awaye vnfaith fully: Agayne the wyckednesse of the wycked shall not hurte hym, whanso uer he conuerteth from hys vngodlynesse. And the ryghteousnesse of ẏ righ trous shall not saue his lyfe whansoeuer he synneth. Yf I saye vnto te righ teous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he trust to his own righteousnesse, & do synne: then shall his righteousnesse be nomore thought vpō, but in the wic kednesse that he hath done, he shal dye.

Esay.55.b * Agayne, yf I saye to ẏ wicked: thou Iere,18.a. shalt surely dye: & so he turne frō his synnes & do the thinge that is lawfull & righte: In so much that ẏ same wicked man geueth the pledge agayne, res toreth ẏ he hath takē awaye by robbery, walketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and doth no wronge: Thē shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Yee the syn nes that he had done, shall neuer be thought vpon: For in so much as he doth now the thynge that is law full and right, he shall lyue. And yet ẏ chil-drē of thy people saye: Tush, the waye of the LORDE is not right, where as their owne waye is rather vnright.
D Whē the righteous turneth from hys righteousnesse, and doeth the thynge ẏ is wicked, he shall dye therfore. But yf ẏ wicked turne from his wickednesse, doynge the thynge that is lauful and right, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye sa-Eze.18.d ye: * the waye of the LORD is not ge euery one of you after his wayes.

In the.xii.yeare, the.v.daye of ẏ .x.moneth of our captiuite, it happened, that one which was fled out of Ie rusalem, came vnto me, & sayde: The ci tie is destroyed. Now the honde of the LORD had bene vpon me ẏ euenyn-ge afore this mā (which was escaped) cam vnto me, & had opened my mouth vntyll the mornynge that he came to me: Yee he opened my mouth, so that I was nomore domme. Then came ẏ worde of the LORD vnto me, and sayde: Thou sonne of man, these that dwel in the waysted londe of Israel, saye: Abraham was but one man, & he had ẏ londe in possession: now are we many, and the londe is geuē vs to pos-E sesse also. And therfore tell them: Thus ue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyft vp to Idols & * haue shed bloude: shal ye Deut. 3.c then haue the londe in possession? Ye leane vpon youre sweardes, ye worke abhominaciōs, euery one defyleth his neghbours wife: & shal ye then possesse the lōde? Saye thou these wordes vnto the: Thus sayeth ẏ LORD God: As truly as I lyue, all ye that dwel in this wildernesse, shal be slayen with ẏ sweard, what so is vpon ẏ felde, wil I geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes & den nes, shall dye of the pestilence. For I wyll make the londe desolate & waist, and ẏ pompe of hir strength shal come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shall be so wayste that no man shall tra uayle thereby. * Then shall they learne Ezer.25.b to knowe, ẏ I am the LORD, when I make the londe wayst and desolate, because of all their abhomynacyons, that they haue wrought.

And thou sonne of man, the chyl- F drē of thy people that talke of the, by ẏ walles & in the dores of theyr houses, sayenge one to another: come, let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from the LORD: These come vnto the, after the maner of a greate people: yee my people syt downe before the, & hear thy wordes, but they do not therafter. Esay.29.d uent, but theyr harte goeth after theyr owne couetous lucre. And as a ballet that hath a swete tune, & is pleasaūt to synge, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shal they heare, but they wyll not do therafter. When this commeth to passe (for lo, it cōmeth in dede) then shal they knowe, that ther hath bene a prophet amonge them.

are they scattred here and there wyth-

B Therfor o ye shepherdes, hear ÿ word of ÿ LORD, thus sayeth ÿ LORD god: As truly as I lyue, for so much as I wyl bring thē out frō al people & gather them together oute of all londes. I wyll brynge them in to theyr owne londe, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israell, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the con-

Thus my shepe muste be fayne to eate the thynge, that ye haue troden downe wyth youre fete, and to drynke that ye wyth youre fete haue defyled.

Therfore, thus sayeth the LORDE God vnto them: Beholde, I wyl seuer the fat shepe from ÿ leane: for so muche as ye haue shotte the weake shepe vpō the sydes, and shulders, and runne vpon them wyth youre hornes, so longe tyll ye haue vtterlye scattred them abrode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so D

They shall nomore be spoyled of the Heythen, nor deuoured wyth the beastes of the londe: but safely shall they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. I wyll sette vppe an excellente plante for them, so that they shal suffre nomore hunger in the londe, nother beare the reprofe of the Heythen onye more. Agaynste the mounte Seir, that is, agaynste the Edomytes.

A Moreouer, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde the mounte. * Seir Esay.34.a Jere 49.b Ezec.25.b 32.f.35.a and.36.a prophecy vppon it, and saye vnto it: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Beholde, (o thou mounte Seir) I wyl vppon the, I wyll reache oute myne hande ouer the, yee wayste and desolate wyll I make the. Thy cytyes wyll I breake downe, and thou shalte lye voyde: that thou mayeste knowe, howe y I am the LORDE. * For

Thus wyll I make y mounte Seir desolate and wayste, and brynge to passe, that ther shall noman go thyther, nor come from thence. His mountaynes wyll I fyl wyth hys slayne men: thy hylles, dales, and valleys, shall lye full of them, that are slayne wyth the swearde. I wyll make the a perpetual wyldernesse, so that noman shall dwel in thy cytyes: that ye maye know, how that I am the LORDE.

B And because thou hast said: what, both these nacyons and both these londes muste be myne, and I wyll haue Exod.25.c them in possessyon, * where as the LORDE was there. Therfor, thus sayeth y LORDE God: As truely as I lyue, I wyl handle the accordyng to thy wrath & gelousye, lyke as thou haste dealte cruelly wyth them: that I maye be knowne amonge them, howe I haue punyshed the. Yee and that thou also mayeste be sure, that I the LORDE haue herde all thy despytefull wordes, which thou hast spoken agaynste the mountaynes of Israell, sayenge: Lo, they are made wayste, and geuen vs to deuour. Thus wyth youre mouthes ye haue made youre boast agaynste me, ye and multyplyed youre proude wordes agaynste me, whiche I haue herde altogether, Wherevnto, thus sayeth the LORDE God: wh the whole worlde is in wealthe, then wyll I make the wayst. * And lyke as Eze.25.a and.26.a thou (o mounte Seir) waste glad, because the heretage of the house of Israell was destroyed: euen so wyll I do vnto the also, that thou and whole Edom shall be destroied, and know, that I am the LORDE.

The.xxxvi. Chapter.

A promyse of the delyueraunce of Israell.

A Thou sonne of man, prophecye vpon the mountaynes of Israell, and speake: Ezech.6.a * Heare the worde of the LORDE, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Because youre enemy hath sayde vpon you: Aha, the hyghe euerlastynge places are nowe become oures prophecy therfore, and speake: thus sayeth the LORDE God: Seynge ye be waysted and troden downe on euery syde, and become a possessyon vnto the residue of y Gentyles which haue broughte you in to mens mouthes and vnto an euell name among the people: Therfore, heare the worde of y LORDE God, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus sayeth the LORDE God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleys and dales, to the voyde wyldernesses and desolate cytyes, which are spoyled and hadde in derisyon on euery syde, among the resydue of the Heythē: Yee euen thus sayeth the LORDE God: In the fyre of my gelousye haue I taken a deuyce agaynste the resydue of y Ezec.35.a Gentyles, and agaynste all * Edom: which haue taken in my lond vnto thē selues for a possession: which also reioyced frō theyr whole harte & a despytefull stomack, to wayst it, & to spoyle it.
B Prophecy therfore vpon the londe of Israell, speake vnto the moūtaynes & hylles, to valleys & dales, thus sayeth y LORDE god: Behold, thys haue I deuised ī my gelousy & terrible wrath For so much as y haue suffred reprofe of y Heythen, therfore thus sayeth the LORDE god: I haue sworn, y the Gētiles which lye aboute you, shall beare youre confusiō themselues. And as for you (o mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shoute oute your braunches, and bring forth your frut to my people of Israel for it is harde by, that it wyll come.

Beholde, I come vnto you, and unto you wyl I turne me, that ye may be tylled, and sowen. I wyl sende vnto you much people, whych shalbe all of the house of Israel: the cytyes shalbe in habyted, and the decayed places shal be repayzed agayne. I wyl prouyde you with much people & cattel, which shal increase & bring frute. I wyl resto re you also to your olde estate, & shewe you mor kidnesse then euer ye had befor: wherby ye shal know, that I am the Lorde. Yee people wil I sende vnto you (o my folke of Israel) whych shal haue the in possessyon, and thou shalt be theyr in herytaunce, so that thou shalt nomore be wythout them.

Eze.25.a and.26.a

Ezech.6.a

C Agayne, thus sayeth the LORDE God: For so much as they say vn to you thou art an eater vp of men, and a wayster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, nother destroye thy people ony more, sayeth the LORDE God. And I wyll not suffre the for to heare thyne owne cōfusion amō ge the Gentiles, from hence forth. Thou shalt not beare the reprose of the nacyons, nor cast out thyne owne people onymore, sayeth the LORDE God.

Morouer, the worde of the LORD come vnto me, sayenge: O thou sonne of mā, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon theyr owne groūde, they defyled them selues with theyr owne wayes & ymagynacions, so that in my syghte theyr waye was lyke the vnclennes of a menstruous womā. Wherfore I pou red my wrothful dipleasure vpon thē, because of the bloude that they had shed in the londe, & because of their Idols, wherwith they had defyled them sel ues. I scattred them also amonge the Heythen, so that they were strowed a bout in the londes. Accordinge to their wayes & after their owne inuencions, so dyd I punysh them.

D *Now when they were gone vn to the Heythen, and came in amonge thē, they dishonoured my holy name, so that it was sayde of thē: Are these the peo ple of God, and must go out of their owne londe? Then spared I my holy name, which the house of Israel had dys honoured amonge the Gētyles, to whō they came. Therfore tel the house of Is raell, Thus sayeth the LORD God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonoured amonge the Hey then, when ye came to thē. Therfore

Esa.52.b. Roma.2.c

I wyl halowe my great name agayne, which amonge the Gētiles is euel spo ken of: for ye youre selues haue disho noured it amonge them. And the Gen tiles shal knowe, that I am the LORD, when I am honoured in you before theyr eyes, sayeth the LORD God. As for you, I wyl take you from amō ge the Heythen, and gather you toge ther out of all cōtryes, and bringe you agayne in to youre owne londe.* Thē wyl I poure cleare water vpon you, & ye shalbe clene: Yee from all youre vn clenesse & from all your Idols shall I clēse you. * A new harte also wyl I ge ue you, and a new sprete wyl I put in to you. As for that stony hart, I wyll take it out of your body, and geue you a fleshy harte I wyl geue you my spre te amōge you, * & cause you to walke in my commaundemētes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyl them. And so ye shall dwell in the londe, that I gaue to your forefathers, & ye shalbe my peo ple, & I wil be your God, * I wyl hel pe you out of al youre vnclennesse. I wyl call for the corne, and wyll increa se it, & wyll let you haue no honger. I wyl multiplie the frutes of the trees & the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall beare nomore reprose of hōger amonge the heythē. Then shall ye remē bre your owne wicked wayes, & youre ymagynacions, which were not good: so that ye shal take displeasure at your owne selues, by reasō of youre synnes and abhominacions. But I wyll not do this for youre sakes (sayeth the LORDE God) be ye sure of it. Ther fore (o ye house of Israel) be ashamed of youre synnes.

Morouer, thus sayeth the LORD God: what tyme as I shal clēse you from all your offences, then wyl I ma ke the cities to be occupied agayne, and wil repayre the places that be decayed The desolate lōd shal be buylded agay ne, which afore tyme laye wayst, in the syght of all them, that were by. Then shal it be sayde: This wayst lōde is be come like a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate, & brokē downe cities, are now stronge, & fensed agayne The the residue of the Heythen that lye ro unde aboute you, shal knowe, that I am the LORD, which repayre that was broken downe, and plāte agayne, that was made wayst. Euen I the LOR DE haue spoken it & wil do it in dede.

¶ A consolacion for the Israelites, & a figure of the generall resurrectiō, signified by the drye bones.

A The honde of the LORDE came vpon me, & caried me out in the sprete of the LORDE, & let me downe in a playne felde, ÿ laye full of bones, & he led me rounde aboute by them: & beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, & maruaylous drye also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered: O LORDE God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: Prophecy thou vpō these bones & speake vnto them: Ye drye bones, heare ÿ worde of ÿ LORDE. Thus sayeth ÿ LORD God vnto these bones: Beholde, I wyl put breth into you, ÿ ye maye lyue: I wyl geue, you synowes, & make flesh grow vpō you, & couer you ouer wt skynne: & so geue as I was prophecienge, ther came a noyse & a great mocion, so that the bones rāne euery one to another. Now whē I had loked, beholde, they had synowes, and flesh grewe vpon them: & aboue they were couered with skynne, but ther was no breth in them.

B Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophecie thou towarde ÿ wynde: prophecy, & speake to the wynde: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Come (o thou ayre) from the foure wyndes, & blowe vpon these slayne, ÿ they maye be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had commaunded me: Then came the breth vnto them, and they receaued lyfe, and stode vp vpon theyr fete, a maruaylous greate sorte.

Moreouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: oure bones are dryed vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therfore prophecie thou, & speake vnto thē. Thus sayeth ÿ LORDE God: Beholde, I wyll open youre graues (o my people) & take you out of youre sepulcres, & bringe you in to the londe of Israel agayne. So shal ye knowe ÿ I am the LORDE, when I opē youre graues, & bringe you out of thē, My sprete also wil I put in you, & ye shal lyue, I wyll set you agayne in youre owne londe, and ye shal knowe, that I am ÿ LORD, which haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the LORD came C

Thē take another sticke, and wryte vpon it: Unto Joseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all ÿ housholde of Israel hys companyons. And than take both these together in thine honde, so shall ther be one stycke therof. Now yf the chyldren of thy people saye vnto the: wilt thou not shewe vs, what thou meanest by these? And ÿ two stickes where vpō thou wrytest, shalt thou haue in thine hōde that they maye se, and thou shalt saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: beholde I wyl take awaye the childrē of Israel from amonge the Heythen, vnto whom they be gone, & wyll gather them together on euery syde, and bringe them agayne in to theyr owne londe: yee I wyll make one people of thē in ÿ londe, vpon the moūtaynes of Israel, & shall all haue but one

They shall dwell in the londe, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunt, where as youre fathers also haue dwelte: Yee euen in the same lāde shal they, theyr chyldren, and theyr chyldres chyldren dwell for euermore, and my seruaunt Dauid shalbe theyr euerlastyng prynce. Moreouer I wyl make a bonde of peace with thē, which shall be vnto them an euerlastynge conuenaunt. I wyl satle them also, and multiplye them, my Sanctuary wyll I set

C Thus the Heythen also shall knowe, that I the LORDE am the holy maker of Israel, when my Sāctuary shal be amonge them for euermore.

A And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde Gog in ȳ lande of Magog, which is

Then shall Saba and Dedan and the marchauntes of Tharsis with all theyr worthyes, saye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wylt spoyle? to take syluer and golde? to cary awaye cattell and good, and to haue a great praye?

Therfore o thou sōne of man, thou shalt prophecye, and saye vnto Gog: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: In that daye thou shalt knowe, ȳ my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt come from thy place, out of the north partes: thou & much people wyth the which ryde vpō horses, wherof ther is a great multitude & innumerable sorte Yee thou shalt come vpō my people of Israell, as a cloude to couer the londe. Thus sayeth the LORDE God: C

The .xxxix. Chapter.

¶ The dredefull punyshment of the

A Therfore o thou cōne of mā wyll smyte it out of thy lefthonde, and cast thyne arowes oute of thy ryghthō-

B the LORDE God.
In to Magog, among those that syt so carlesse in the Iles wyll I sende a fyre, and they shall knowe, yt I am ye LORDE. I wyll make also the name of my holynesse to be knowe amōge my people of Israel: and I wyll not let my holy name be euell spoken of ony-more: but the very Heythen also shall knowe, that I am the LORDE, the holy one of Israel. Beholde, it cōmeth and shalbe fulfylled in dede, sayeth the LORDE God. Thys is the daye, wherof I haue spoken: They yt dwell in the cytyes of Israell, shall go forth and set fyre vpon ye weapens, and burne them, shyldes, and speares, bowes, & arowes, bylles and cloubbes: seuen yeares shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall els brynge no stykkes shall haue weapens ynough to burne.

They shal robbe those that robbed thē and spoyle those that spoyled them, sayeth the LORDE God.

At the same tyme wyll I geue vn- C to Gog, a place to be buryed in, in Israell: euen the valleye, where thorowe men go from the east to the seewarde.
Those that trauayl thereby, shall abhorre it. There shall Gog and all hys people be buryed: and it shall be called the valleye of the people of Gog. Seuē monethes longe shall the house of Israell be buryenge of thē, that they may clense the londe: Yee all the people of ye londe shall burye them. O it shall be a gloryous daye, whan I get me that ho-noure, sayeth the LORDE God.
They shall ordene men also to be dead buriers, euer goinge thorowe the lond and appoynte them certayne places to bury those in, which remayn vpon the felde, that the londe maye be clensed.
From ende to ende shall they seke, and go thorowe the londe, where they se a it, tyll the deadburyers haue buried it also, in ye valley of the people of Gog And ye name of ye citie shal be called Ha-

And thou sonne of man: thus say- D eth the LORDE God: Speake vnto Basan. Eate the fat youre bely full, & drynke bloude, tyll ye be droncken of the slaughter, which I haue slayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table with horses and stronge horsmen: wyth captaynes and all men of warre, sayeth the LORDE God. I wyll brynge my glory also amonge the Gentyles, that all the Heythen maye se my iudgemēte that I haue kepte, and my hand which I haue layed vpō them: that the house of Israell maye knowe, howe that I am the LORDE theyr God, from that daye forth. And the Heythen shall E knowe, that where as the house of Israell were ledde in to captyuite: it was for theyr wyckednesses sake, because they offended me. For the which cause I hydde my face from them, and degyueth them in to the handes of theyr enemyes, that they myght all be slayne with the swearde accordynge to theyr vnclennesse and vnfaithful dealynges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them.

Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE God: Now wyl I brynge agayne the captiues of Iacob, and haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israell, and be gelous for my holy names sake. All theyr confusion and offence that they haue done agaynst me, shalbe taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in theyr lande, that no man shal make the afrayed. And whan I haue broughte them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them together out of theyr enemyes landes, & am praised in them before many Heythen: then shall they knowe, that I am the LORDE theyr God, which suffred them to be led into captiuite amonge the Heythen, but nowe haue broughte them agayne in to theyr owne lande, & not left one of them yonder. After that wyll I Ezec.36.d. hyde my face nomore from them, * but wyll poure out my sprete vpon ye house of Israell, sayeth the LORDE God.

Apoc.19.1 ¶ From this chapter vnto the ende, ye prophete seyth in a vision the buylding agayne of Ierusalem, and the temple: Wherby is descrybed the mystery of ye church of Christ, and saluacyon of the faythfull in hym.

A IN the.xxv. year of our captiuite, in the begynnyng of the yeare, the.x. daye of the moneth, yt is the.xiiii. yeare after that ye cytie was smytten downe: the same daye came ye hāde of the LORDE vpon me, and caryed me forth: euen in to the lande of Israel brought he me, in the visions of God: and set me downe vpon a maruaylous hye mountayne, wher vpon ther was a buyldynge (as it had ben of a cytie) towarde the South. Thyther he caryed me, and behold, there was a mā, whose similitude was lyke brasse, which had a threde of flaxe in his hande, & a meterodde also. He stode in the dore & sayde vnto me: marcke well with thyne eyes, herken to with thyne eares, and fasten it in thyne harte, what so euer I shall shewe the, for to the intēt yt they myght be shewed ye, therfore art thou brought hyther: And what so euer thou seyst, thou shalte certifye the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, ther was a wal on ye outesyde rounde about the house: the meterodde that he hadde in his honde, was sixe cubites longe and a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldynge, which was a meterodde, and ye heyght also a meterodde. Then came he vnto B the east dore, and wente vp the stayers, and measured the postes of the dore: wherof euery one was a meterod thick Euery chamber was a meterod longe and brode: betwene the chambers were fyue cubites. The post of the dore within the porche, was one meterodde. He measured also the porche of the ynnermer dore, which cōteyned a meterodde. Then measured he the entrye of ye dore that conteyned eyght cubytes, and his pylers two cubytes: & this entrye stode inwarde. The chambers of the dore eastwarde, were thre on euery syde, alyke brode and longe. The pylers also that stode of both ye sydes, were of one measure. After this he measured the wydenesse of the dore: which was.x. cubytes, and the hyght of the dore.xiii. cubytes. The edge before the chambres was one cubyte brode vpon both the sydes, & the chambers sixe cubites wyd of eyther syde. He measured ye dore frō the rygge of one chamber to another, whose wydnesse was.xxv. cubytes, and one dore stode agaynst another. He made pylers also,lx. cubites hye, roūde aboute the courte dore. Before the inwarde porte vnto the forentrye of the ynnermer dore, were fyftye cubites. The chambers and theyr pylers within, rounde aboute vnto the dore hadde syde wyndowes: So had the forentryes also, whose wyndowes wente rounde aboute within. And vpon the pylers ther stode datetrees.

C Then brought he me in to the fore courte, where as were chambres & paued workes, made in ye forecourt rounde aboute,xxx. chambres vpon one paued worke. Now the paued worke was alonge besyde the dores, and that was ye lower paued worke. After this he measured the breth from lower dore, vnto the ynnermer court of ye outside, which had an hundreth cubites vpon the east and the north parte. And the dore in the vttemoost court toward the north measured he after the lengthe and bredthe:

his thre chambres also on eyther syde, & his pylers & forentryes: which had euen the measure of the fyrst dore. His heyghte was fyfty cubites, the bredth xxv.cubites: his wyndowes & porches with his date trees, had euen lyke measure as the dore towarde the east: ther were, vii steppes to go vp vpon & their porch before them. Now the dore of the ynnermercourte stode straight ouer agaynst the dore, that was towarde the northeast. From one dore to another, he measured an.C.cubites. After that, he brought me to the southsyde, where ther stode a dore towarde the South, whose pilers and porches he measured, these had ẏ fyrst measure, and ẇ theyr porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the fyrst wyndowes. The heyght was fyftye cubites, the bredth xxv. with steppes to go vp vpõ: his porche stode before hym, with his pylers & datetrees on ether syde. And the dore of the ynnermer court stode towarde the south, and he measured from one dore to another an.C.cubites.

D So he brought me in to the ynnermer courte, thorow the dore of ẏ south syde: whiche he measured, and it had ẏ measure aforesayd. In lyke maner his chambres, pylers, and forentryes had euen the foresayd measure also. And it had with his porches rounde aboute wyndowes of fyftye cubites hye, and xxv.cubites brode. The porches rõude aboute were.xxv cubites longe, and v. cubites brode: & his porch reached vnto the vttemost courte: vpon his pilers ther were date trees, and.viii.steppes to go vp vpon. He brought me also in to the ynmost court vpon the eastsyde, & measured the dore accordynge to the measure aforesayd. His chambers, pylers, and porches had eue͂ the same measure, as the fyrst had, and with his porches he had wyndowes rounde about. The heyght was.l. cubites, the bredth xxv.cubites. His porches reached to ẏ vttemost courte: his pylers also hadde date trees on ether syde, and.viii. steppes to go vp vpon.

E And he brought me to the North dore, and measured it, whiche also had the foresayd measure. His chambres, pylers, and porches, hadde wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heyght was fyftye cubites, and the bredth.xxv. His pylers stode towarde the vttemost court, and vpon them both were date trees, & viii.steppes to go vp vpõ. There stode a chambre also, whose intraunce was at the dore pylers, and there the burnt offerynges were wasshed. In the dore porche, ther stode on ether syde two tables for the slaughtyng, to slay ẏ burnt offerynges, synneofferynges, and tresspasseofferynges therevpon. And on the outsyde as men go forth to the North dore, ther stode two tables. Foure tables stode on ether side of the dore, that is.viii.tables, wher vpon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burntofferynges, of a cubite & a halfe longe and brode, and one cubite hye: wher vpon were layed the vessels and ornamentes, whiche were vsed to the burnt and slayne offerynges, when they were slaughted. And within ther were hokes foure fyngers brode, fastened rounde aboute, to hange flesh vpõ, and vpon the tables was layed the offryngeflesh. On the outsyde of the ynnermer dore were the syngers chãbers, in the inwarde courte besyde ẏ North dore, ouer agaynst ẏ South. Ther stode one also, besyde ẏ east dore northwarde. F

And he sayd vnto me: This chãbre on the southsyde belongeth to the prestes, that kepe the habitacyon, and this towarde the north, is * the prestes that 1.Par. wayte vpon the aulter. which be ẏ sonnes of * Sadoch, that do seruice before 3.Reg. the LORDE, in steade of the chyldre͂ of Leui. So he measured the forecourt which had in length an.C.cubites, and as much in bredth by the foure corners. Now the aulter stode before the house. And he brought me to the forentry of the house, and measured the walles by the entrye dore, which were fyue cubites longe on ether syde. The thycknesse also of the dore on the other syde, was thre cubites. The length of the porche was xx.cubites, the bredth, xi.cubites, and vpon steppes wente men vp to it: by the walles also were pylers, on ether syde one.

The xli. Chapter.

After this he brought me to the temple, and measured ẏ postes, which were of both the sydes. vi.cubites thyck, accordyng to the wydenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the dore was x.cubites, and the walles of the dore on ether syde, fyue cubites. He measured the length therof which con-teyned .xl. cubytes, and the bredth .xx.

Then went he in, & measured the dore postes, which were two cubites thicke but the dore itself was sixe cubytes, & the bredth of the dore was .vii. cubites He measured ÿ length and bredth ther of, whych were everyone .xx. cubytes, before the temple.

And he sayde unto me: thys is the holyest of all. He measured also ÿ wall of the house, which was sixe cubytes.
The chambres that stode rounde about the house, were everyone foure cubites wyde, and one stode harde upon another, wherof ther were .xxxiii. And ther stode postes beneth by the walles rounde about the house, to beare them up, but in the wal of ÿ house they were not fastened. The syde chambres were the hyer, the wyder, and had steppes thorowe them rounde aboute ÿ house.
B Thus was it wyder above, that from the lowest, men might go to the hyest & mydde chambres. I sawe also that the house was very hye rounde aboute.
The fundacion of the syde chambres was a meterodde (that is sixe cubytes) brode. The thycknesse of the syde wall wythout conteyned fyve cubytes, and so dyd the outwall of the chābers in the house. Betwene the chambers, was the wydenes .xx. cubytes rounde aboute ÿ house. The chābre dore stode over agaynst the outwall, the one dore was toward ÿ north, the other toward the south: and the thicknesse of the out wall was .v. cubytes rounde aboute.
Now the buyldynge that was separated towarde the west, was .lxx. cubites wyde: the wall of the buyldynge was .v. cubites thycke rounde aboute, and the length foure score cubytes and ten.
C So he measured the house which was an .C. cubytes lōge, and the separated buyldinge with the wall were an .C. cubytes longe also. The wydenesse before the house & of it that was separated toward the east, was an .C. cubites And he measured the length of ÿ buyldinge before and behynde with the chā bers upon both the sydes, and it con-teyned an .C. cubytes. The ynnermer temple, the porch of the fore courte, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndo wes, and pylers rounde aboute over a gaynst the postes, from the grounde up to the wyndowes: The wyndowes them selves were syled over wyth bor-des: and thus was it above the dore, unto the ynmost house, and wythout also: Yee: the whole wal on everysyde, both wythin and wythout was syled over wyth greate bordes. Ther were Cherubins and datetrees made also, so that one datetre stode ever betwyxte two Cherubins: One Cherub had two faces, the face of a man lokynge asyde towarde the date tre, and a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it ma- D de rounde aboute in all the house: Yee ÿ Cherubins and datetres were made from the grounde up above the dore, & so stode they also upon the wall of the temple.

The bypostes of the temple were foure squared, & the fashion of the Sā- Ezech.?.? ctuary was, *even as it appeared un Iere.25.? to me afore in the vision. ‡The table was of wood, thre cubytes hye, and two cubytes longe: hys corners, the leng, and the walles were of woode.
And he sayde unto me: Thys is the table, that shall stonde before the LOR-DE. The temple and the holyest of all had ether of them two dores, and every dore had two lytle wyckettes which were folden in, one upon another, on every syde two. And upon the dores of the temple ther were made Cherubins and datetrees, lyke as upon the walles & a greate thycke balke of woode was before on the out syde of the porche.
Upon both the sydes of the walles, of the porch ther were made depe wyndowes and date trees, havynge beames & balkes, lyke as the house had.

The .xlii. Chapter.

Then caried he me out in to A the forecourte towarde ÿ north, and brought me in to the chambre that stode over agaynst ÿ backebuyl dinge northwarde, which had ÿ length of an hundreth cubytes, whose dore turned towarde the north. The wy-denesse conteyned fyftye cubytes, over agaynst the .xx. cubytes of ÿ ynnermer courte, and agaynst ÿ paved worke ÿ was in ÿ fore courte. Besyde all these thre ther stode pylers one over agaynst another: And before thys chābre ther was a galery of .x. cubytes wyde, and wythin was a waye of one cubyte wyde, & theyr dores toward the north.
Thus ÿ hyest chambres were alwaye narower then the lowest and myddel-moost of the buyldynge: for they bare chambre upon chambre, and stode thre together one upon an another, not hauynge pylers lyke the fore court: therfore were they smaler thē those beneth and in the myddest, to reken from the grounde upwarde.

B The wall without that stode by ẏ chambres towarde the uttemost court upō the foresyde of the chambres, was fyftye cubites longe: for the length of ẏ uttemoost chambers in the forecourte was fyftye cubites also, but the length therof before the temple was an. C. cu-bites. These chambres had under them an entraunce of the east syde, wherby a man myght go in to them out of the forecourte, thorowe the thycke wall of the forecourte towarde the east, ryghte ouer agaynst the separated buyldynge.
Before the same buyldynge upon this syde ther were chambers also whiche had a waye unto them, lyke as the chā-bers on the north side of the same lēgth and wydenesse. Theyr entraunce, fashion, and dores were all of the same maner. Yee euen lyke as other chābers dores were, so were those also of the southsyde.
C And before the waye towarde the syngers steppes, on the east syde ther stode a dore to go in at. Then sayde he unto me: The chambers towarde the north and the south, which stande before the backbuyldynge, those be holy habitacyōs, wherin the prestes that do seruyce before the LORDE, must eat ẏ most holy offrynges: and there must they lay ẏ most holy offerynges, meat-offerynges, synneofferynges, and trespasseofferynges: for it is an holy place.
Whē the prestes come therin, they shal not go out in to the forecourte: but (seynge they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of theyr ministracyō, & put on other garmentes, when they haue ony thynge to do with the people.
D Now when he had measured al the ynnermer house, he broughte me forth thorowe the easte porte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the eastsyde with the meterodde, which rounde about conteyned. v. C. meterod des. And the north syde measured he, which conteyned rounde aboute euen so much. The other two sydes also to-warde the south and the west (whiche he measured) conteyned ether of them fyue hundreth meterroddes. So he mea sured al ẏ foure sydes where ther went a wall rounde about. v. C. meterroddes longe, and as brode also, which separa ted the holy from the unholy.

The.xliii. Chapter.

So he brought me to ẏ dore A that turneth towarde the east. Beholde, then came ẏ glorye of the God of Israel frō out of the east, whose voyce was lyke a greate noyse of waters, and the earth was lyghtened with his glory. His syght to loke upon was
* lyke the fyrste, that I sawe, when I Eze.10.15 wente in, what tyme as the cytie shuld haue ben destroyed: * and lyke the visi Ezech.1.a on that I sawe by the water of Cobar Eze.3.c Then fell I upon my face, but ẏ glory and.11.d of the LORDE came in to the house thorowe the east dore. So a wynde toke me up, and brought me in to ẏ ynnermercourte: and beholde, the house was full of the glorye of the LORD.
I herde one speakynge unto me out of ẏ house, and ther stode one by me, that sayd unto me: O thou sonne of man, * this rowme is my seate, & the place Esay.6.a of my footsteppes, where as I wyll and.66.a shewe thou the housholde of Israell a theyr wyckednesse, and measure them they be ashamed of al theyr workes, thē

The nexte daye, take a goatbucke without blemyshe for a synofferynge, to reconcyle the aulter withall, lyke as it was reconcyled with the bullocke. Now when thou haste made it clene, then offre a yonge bullocke * without blemysh, & a ramme out of the flocke without blemysh also: Offre them be fore the LORD, and let the prest cast * salt ther vpon, and geue thē so vnto the LORDE for a burntofferynge. Seuen dayes shalt thou bringe, every daye a goatbucke. A yonge bullocke & a ramme of the flocke (both without blemish) shal they offre. Seuen dayes shall they reconcile and clense ỹ aulter and offre vpon it. When these dayes are expired, then vpon the .viii. daye & so forth the prestes shall offre theyr burntoffringes, and healthoffringes vpon the aulter: so wyl I be mercifull vnto you, sayeth the LORDE God.

The.xliiii. Chapter.

After this, he brought me a gayne to ỹ outwarde dore of the Sanctuary on ỹ east syde, and that was shut. Then sayd the LORD vnto me. This dore shalbe styll shut, and not opened for ony man to go tho row it, but only for the LORDE God of Israel: yee he shall go thorow it, els shal it be shut still. The prince himself shal come thorow it ỹ he maye eate bread before the LORDE. At the proche shal he come in, & there shall he go out agayne. Then brought he me thorow ỹ dore, vpō the north syde, of the house. And as I loked about me Exo.24.d

DE fylled the house: and I fell dow Nu.9.c. ne vpon my face. So the LORDE 3.Re.8.b. spake vnto me. O thou sonne of mā, 2.Pa.7.a. fasten this to thine harte, beholde, and take diligent hede to all the ordinaun ces of the LORDE, and all his la wes, pondre well with thine harte the commynge in of the house and the go ynge forth of the Sanctuary, and tell that obstinate housholde of Israel. B Thus sayeth the LORDE God, O house of Israel, ye haue now done ynough w al youre abhominacions, seynge that ye haue brought into my Sanctuary straūgers, hauynge vncir cumcised hartes and flesh, where tho row my Sanctuary is defiled, when ye offre my bread, fatte and bloude. Thus with all youre abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sā ctuary: but set kepers of my Sāctuary, euen after youre owne mynde. Therfor thus saieth the LORDE God: Of all the straungers that dwell amonge the children of Israel, no straunger (whose harte and flesh is not circumcy sed) shall come within my Sanctuary:

No nor the Leuites that be gone back fro me, and haue deceaued the people of Israel with errours, goynge after theyr Idols: therfore shall they beare theyr owne wyckednesse. Shulde they be set and ordened to mynister vnder ye dores of the house of my Sanctuary & and to do seruice in the house, to slaye burntofferynges and sacrifices for the people, to stande before thē, & to serue them, seynge the seruyce that they do them, is before theyr Idols, and cause the house of Israel to stomble thorow

3.Reg.2.f. *For the which cause I haue pluckt LORDE) so that nowe they muste beare theyr owne iniquite, and not to come nye me, to serue me & theyr prestlyest of all, that they maye beare theyr owne shame & abhominacyons, which they haue done. Shulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to all the

of my Sanctuary, when the chyldrē of Israel were gone fro me, shall come to sayeth the LORDE God. They shall go in to my Sanctuary, and treade before my table, to do me seruyce and to wayte vpon myne ordynaunces.

Now whē they go in at the dores of the ynnermer court, they shal put on lynnen clothes, so that no wollen come der the dores of the ynnermer courte, in theyr labour they shal not put about them. And when they go forth to ye peo

Yf ony discorde aryse, they shall discer thou shalt measure, wherin the Sanc-

The resydue of that holy grounde shal be the prestes, whiche do seruyce in the Sanctuary of the LORDE, and go in before the LORDE to serue hym, that they may haue rowme to dwel in.
As for the Sāctuary it shall stande for it selfe, and to the Leuites that serue in the house, ther shalbe geuen. xx. habita-

And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shal offre euery daye a bullocke and a ram, that are without blemysh, for a burntoffringe unto the LORDE: & an hegoate dayly for a synoffrynge.
For the meatofferynges he shall geue a ram, and an Hin of oyle to an Epha.

Upon the.xv. daye of the seuenth mo-ly one after another, euen as the other seuen dayes: with the synoffringe, burntoffrynge, meatoffrynge, & with the oyle.

The.xlvi. Chapter.

A Thus sayeth the LORDE God: the dore of the ynnermer courte toward the easte, shall be shutte the syxe worke dayes: but in the Sabbath and in the daye of the newe Moone, it shall be opened. Then shall the prynce come under the dore porche, and stonde styll wythoute by the dore poste. So the prestes shall offre uppe hys burnte and healtheofferynges. And he shall worshyppe at the dore poste, and go hys waye forthe agayne: but the dore shall nomore be shutte tyll the euenynge. On the same maner shall the people of the londe also do theyr worshippe befor yͤ LORDE, wythoute thys dore uppon the Sabbathes and newe Moones.

Thys is nowe the burntofferynge that the prynce shall brynge unto the LORDE uppon the Sabbath: syxe lambes wythoute blemyshe, and a ramme wythoute blemyshe, and an Epha for a meatofferynge, wyth the ramme. As for the lambes, he maye geue as manye meatofferynges to thẽ, as he wyll, and an Hin of oyle to an Epha. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shal be a yonge bullocke wythout blemysh, sixe lambes & a ram also without blemysh. With the bullocke he shall geue an Epha, and with the rā an Epha also for a meatoffringe: but to the lambes, what he maye come by:

And euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha.
B When the prynce cōmeth, he shall go vnder the dore porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But whan the people of the londe come before the LORDE in the hye solēpne feast, as many as come in by ẏ north dore to do worshippe, shall go out agayn at the south dore. And they that come in at ẏ south dore, shall go forth agayne at the north dore. Ther shall none go out at the dore where he came in, but shall go forth ryghte ouer on the other syde, & the prynce shall go in and out amonge them.

Upon the solempne and hye feast dayes, this shalbe ẏ meatofferinge: An Epha to a bullock, and an Epha to a ramme: & to the lambes, as many as he wyll, but euer an Hin of oyle to an E-pha. Nowe whā the prince bryngeth a burntoffering or an healthoffering of a fre will vnto ẏ LORDE, the east dore shalbe opened vnto hym, that he maye do wyth hys burnte and healtheoffe-rynges, as he doth vpon the Sabbath C and whan he goeth forth, the dore shal be shutte after hym agayne. He shall daylye brynge vnto the LORDE a lambe of a year olde wythout blemysh for a burnteofferynge: thys shall he do euery mornynge. And for a meatofferynge he shall geue the syxte part of an Epha, and the thyrde parte of an Hin of oyle (to myngle wyth the cakes) eue-ry mornynge. Yee thys shall be a day-ly meatofferinge vnto the LORDE, for an euerlastynge ordinaunce. And thus shall the lambe, the meatofferyng and oyle be geuen euery mornynge, for a daylye burntofferynge.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the LOR-DE God: Yf the prynce geue a gyfte vnto onye of hys sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes heretage perpetual, that he maye possesse it. But yf he wyl geue one of hys seruauntes some of hys he-3.Re.21.a none of the peoples enherytaunce, nor put them from theyr possessiō, that my people be not scattered abrode, but that euery man maye haue hys own.

And he brought me thorow the in- A traunce at the syde of the dore to the habytacyon of the Sanctuarye, that belongeth to the prestes, and stode to-warde the northe, & beholde, ther was a place vpon the westesyde, then sayde he vnto me: Thys is the place, where the prestes shall dyghte the trespasse & synofferynges, and bake the meatoffe-rynges: that they nede not beare them in to the outewarde courte, and so to vnhalowe the people. So he broughte me in to the vttemost courte, rounde aboute all the foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the forecourte, ther was yet a litle courte. Yee in al the fou-re corners of the courte was made a litle courte of .xl. cubites longe. & .xxx. cubites brode: these foure litle courtes were of one like measure, & ther wente a ryggewal rounde aboute thē all fou-re, vnder the which ther were herthes made rounde aboute. Thē sayde he vnto me: This is the ketchin, where ẏ mi-nistres of the house shal dight ẏ slayne offerynges of the people.

The.xlvii. Chapter.

After this he brought me a- A gayn before the dore of the house: & beholde, ther gus-shed out waters from vnder the postes of the house eastwarde (for the house stode toward the easte) that ranne downe vppon the rightsyde of the house, whiche lyeth to the aulter south warde. Thē caried he me out to the north dore, and brought me forth there rounde aboute by the vttemoste dore, that turneth eastward, * Beholde, there came forth the water zach.14.a vpon the rightsyde. Now whan ẏ mā and 14. that had the meterodde in hys honde me thorowe the water, euē to ẏ ancles: so he measured yet a thousande, and brought me thorow the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thorow the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousandē agayne, then was it suche a ryuer, that I myghte not wade thorowe it: The water was so depe, that it was nedeful to haue swymmed for it myghte not be waded ouer. And B he sayde vnto me: haste thou sene this, o thou sonne of man? and wyth that he broughte me to the ryuer bancke a-

Nowe whan I came there, ther stode manye trees vpon ether syde of ȳ ryuer bancke. Then sayde he vnto me: Thys water that floweth out toward the easte, and runneth downe in to the plaine felde, commeth in to the see: and from the see it runneth oute, and ma-keth the waters whole. Yee all that

By thys ryuer shall the fyshers stonde from Engaddi vnto En Eglaim, and there sprede oute theyr nettes: for ther shall be greate heapes of fyshe, lyke as in the mayne see. As for hys claye and pyttes, they shal not be whole, for why C it shall be occupied for salte. By thys ryuer vpō both the sydes of the shore, ther shall growe all maner of fruteful Psal.1.a trees, * whose leaues shall not fall of, nother shall theyre frute perysshe, but euer be rype at theyre monethes: for theyr water runneth oute of the Sanhys leafe profytable for medcyne.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: Let thys be the border, wherein ye shal diuide the londe vnto the.xii.trybes of Israell, wyth the lyne. Parte it indifferentlye vnto one as vnto another: Gen.12.c * of the whiche londe I sware vnto

The easte syde shall ye measure

* Thys londe shall ye parte a- Num.33.k

C The ende of the prophet Ezechiell.

The ꝓphete Daniel.

The.first.Chapter.

¶ Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Asarias are chosen to learne Caldeish, and to stonde before the kynge.

A In the thirde yeare of ẏ raygne of Joachim kynge of Juda, came Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon vnto Jerusalem, and beseged it: * and ẏ LORDE delyuered Joachim the kyng of Juda in to his honde, (4.Re.24.a 2.Pa.36.a) with certayne ornamentes of the house of God, which he caried awaye vnto the londe of Senar, to the house of his god, and there brought them in to his gods treasury. And the kynge spake vnto Asphenes the chefe chamberlayne, ẏ he shulde brynge hym certayne of the chyldren of Israell, that were come of the kynges sede and of prynces, yonge spryngaldes without ony blemish but fayre & welfauoured, instruct in all wisdome, connynge, and vnderstondinge: whiche were able to stonde in the kynges palace, to rede, and to learne for to speake Caldeish. Unto these the kyng appoynted a certayne porcion of his owne meate and of the wyne, which he dranke him self, so to norysh them thre yeare: that after warde they might stonde before the kynge.

B Amonge these now were certayne of the chyldren of Juda, namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Unto these the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, & called Daniel, Balthasar: Ananias, Sidrac: Misael, Misach & Azarias, Abdenago. But Daniel was at a poynt wt him self, * ẏ he wold not (Gen.43.h Tob.1.b Judi.12.a) be defyled thorow the kynges meate, nor ẏ wyne which he dranke. And this he desyred of the chefe chãberlayne, lest he shulde defyle him self. So God gaue Daniel fauoure & grace before the chefe chamberlayne, that he sayde vnto him: I am afrayed of my lorde the kynge, whiche hath appoynted you youre meate and dryncke: leste he spye youre faces to be worse lykynge then the other spryngaldes of youre age, & so ye shall make me lose my heade vnto the kynge.

C Then Daniell answered Melassar, whome the chefe chamberlayne hadde sette ouer Daniell, Ananias Misaell and Asarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes wyth thy seruauntes, & let vs haue potage to eate, and water to drynke: then loke vpon oure faces, and theyrs ẏ eate of the kinges meate. And as thou seyste, so deale wyth thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in thys matter, and proued them .x. dayes. And after the ten dayes, theyrs faces were better lykynge and fatter, then all the yonge spryngaldes, which dydde eate of the kynges meate.

Thus Melassar toke away theyr meate and wyne, and gaue them potage therfor. God gaue now these foure spryngaldes connynge and learnynge in all scrypture and wysedome: but vnto Daniell specyally, he gaue vnderstondynge of all vysyons and dreames.

D Nowe whan the tyme was expyred, ẏ the kynge hadde appoynted to brynge in these yonge spryngaldes vnto hym: the chefe chamberlayne broughte them before Nabuchodonosor, and the king communed wyth them. But amonge them all were found none suche as Daniell, Ananias, Misaell, and Asarias. Therfore stode they before the kynge, which in all wysdome and matters of vnderstondynge, that he enquered of them, founde them ten tymes better, then all the soythsayers and charmers that were in all hys realme. And Daniell abode styll vnto the fyrste year of kynge Cyrus.

The.ii.Chapter.

¶ Daniell expoundeth the kynges dreame.

A In the seconde yeare of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, hadde Nabuchodonosor a dreame, * where thorowe his spirete was vexed (Job.7.b Dan.4.b and.5.a) and hys slepe brake from hym. Then the kynge commaunded to call together all the soythsayers, charmers, wiches, and Caldees, for to shewe the kynge hys dreame. So they came, and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayd vnto them: I haue drea med a dreame, and my sprete was so troubled therewyth, that I haue clene forgotten, what I haue dreamed. Vppon thys, the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syryans speche: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer.

Shewe thy seruauntes the dreame, & we shall shewe the what it meaneth.
The kynge gaue the Caldees theyr an swere, and sayde: It is gone fro me: Yf ye wyll not make me vnderstonde the dreame wyth the interpretacyon ther-of, ye shall dye, and youre houses shall be prysed. But yf ye tell me the dreame and the meanynge therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and greate ho noure: onely, shewe me the dreame and the sygnyfycacyon of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: The kynge muste shew his seruauntes the dreame and so shall we declare, what it mea-neth.

B Then the kynge answerde, say-enge: I perceaue of a treuth, that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so muche as ye se, that the thynge is gone fro me.
Therfore, yf ye wyll not tell me the dreame, ye shall al haue one iudgemēt.
But ye fayne and dyssemble & vayne wordes, which ye speake before me, to putte of the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame, and so shal I knowe, yf ye can shew me, what it meaneth. Upon this the Caldees gaue answere before the kynge, and sayde: ther is no man vpon earth, that can tell the thynge, whiche the kynge speaketh of: Yee ther is nother kynge prynce nor Lorde, that euer ared suche thynges at a sothsayer, charmer or Caldeer: for it is a verye harde matter, that the kyng requyreth.
Nother is ther ony, that can certifye the kynge therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwellynge is not amonge the creatures. For the which cause ỹ kyng was wroth wyth greate indignacyon and commaunded to destroye al ỹ wise men at Babylon: and the proclamacyon wente forthe, that the wyse men shulde be slayne. They soughte also to slaye Daniell wyth hys com-panyons.

C Then Daniell enquered Arioch the kynges stewarde, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forthe al-readye to kyll suche as were wyse at Babylon. He answered, and sayde vn to Arioch beynge then the kynges depyte: Why hath the kynge proclamed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniell the matter. Upon thys wente Daniell vppe, and desyred the kynge that he myghte haue leysoure, to shew the kynge the interpretacyon: and then came he home agayne and shewed the thynge vnto Ananias, Misaell and A zarias hys companyons: ỹ they shulde beseke the God of heauen for grace in thys secrete, that Daniell and hys felowes, wyth other suche as were wyse in Babylon, peryshed not. Then was the mysterye shewed vnto Daniel in a vison by nyghte. And Daniell praysed the God of heauen. Daniell also cryed loude, and sayd, O that the name of God myght be praysed for euer and euer, for wysedome and strengthe are hys owne: * he chaungeth the tymes Dan. 7.b and ages: ‡ he putteth downe kynges, ‡ Luce. 1.e he setteth vppe kynges: * he geueth Job. 34.d wysedome vnto the wyse, and vnder- Iere. 27.a stondynge to those that vnderstonde: Dan. 4.d he openeth the depe secretes: he know- * Iob. 12.b eth the thynge that lyeth in darknesse: i. Tim. 6.c ‡ for the lyghte dwelleth wyth hym. I ‡ i. Jo. 1.b thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou haste lente me wysedome and strengthe, and haste shewed me the thinge, that we de syred of the, for thou haste opened the kynges matter vnto me.

D Upon thys wente Daniell in vnto Arioch, whome the kynge hadde ordened to destroye the wyse of Babylon, he wente vnto hym, and sayde: De stroye not suche as are wyse in Babylon, but brynge me in vnto the kynge, and I shall shewe the kynge the in terpretacyon. The Arioch broughte Daniell in to the kinge in all the hayst and sayde vnto hym: I haue founde a man amonge the presoners of Juda, that shall shewe the kynge, the interpretacyon. Then answered the kynge, and sayde vnto Daniell, whose name was Balthasar: Arte thou he, that canste shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, and the interpretacyon ther of? Daniell answered the kyng to hys face, and sayde: As for thys secrete, for the which the kynge maketh inquisycyon, it is nother the wise, the sorcerer, the charmer, nor the deuell coniurer, ỹ can certyfye the kynge of it: * Onelye Ge. 41.
God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is, that sheweth the kynge Nabu chodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Thy dreame, and that which thou haste sene in thyne heade vpō thy bed, is this: O kynge, thou diddest cast in thy mynde, what shulde come herafter: So he that is the opener of mysteries, telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, this secrete is not shewed me, for eny wisdome that I haue, more then eny other lyuynge: but only y I might shewe the kynge the interpretaciō, and that he might knowe the thoughtes of his owne harte. Thou kynge sawest, & beholde: there stode before the a greate ymage, whose fygure was marueilous great, & his vysage grymme. The ymages heade was of fyne golde, hys brest and armes of syluer, hys body and loynes were of copper, hys legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth. This thou sawest, tyll the tyme that (without eny hondes) ther was hewen of a * stone whiche smote the ymage vpon the fete, y were both of yron and earth, and brake thē to poulder: then was the yron, y earth, the copper, the syluer and golde brokē altogether in peces, and became like y chaffe of corne, that y wynde bloweth awaye from the sommer floores, that they can nomore be foūde. But the stone that smote y ymage, became a great mountayne, whiche fulfylleth y whole earth. This is the dreame. And now wyll we shewe before the kynge what it meaneth.

* O kynge, thou art a kynge of kynges: For the God of heauen hath geuen the a kyngdome, riches, strēgth and maiestye: & hath delyuered the all thinges, that are amonge the children of men: the beastes of the felde, and the foules vnder the heauen, and geuē the dominion ouer them all. Thou art y golden heade. After the ther shall aryse another kyngdome, which shall be lesse then thine. The thyrde kyngdome shall be lyke copper, and haue dominacion in al londes. The fourth kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron bruseth & breaketh all thinges: Yee euen as yron beateth euery thinge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye.

Where as thou sawest the fete & toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, which neuertheles shal haue some of y yrō groūde mixte with it, for so much as thou hast sene the yron mixte with y claye. The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, signifieth, that it shalbe a kyngdome partely stronge and partely weake. And where as thou sawest yron myxte with claye: they shal myngle them selues with the sede of symple people, and yet not contynue one with another, lyke as yron wyll not be souldered with a pot sherde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shal the God of heauē set vp an * euerlastinge kingdome which shal not perish, and his kyngdome shall not be geuen ouer to another people: Yee the same shall breake & destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest, that without eny hondes ther was cut out of the * mount a ‡ stone, which brake the yron, the copper, the earth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath y greate God shewed the kynge what wyll come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacion of it is sure.

Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor * fell downe vpon his face, and bowed him self vnto Daniel, & commaūded that they shulde offre meatoffringes and swete odoures vnto him. The kynge answered Daniel, and sayde: Yee of a treuth, youre God is a God aboue all goddes, a LORDE aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes: seynge thou canst discouer this mystery. So the kynge made Daniel a greate man, and gaue him many and greate giftes. * He made him ruler of all the contreyes of Babilon, and lorde of all the nobles, y were at Babylon. Now Daniel intreated the kynge for Sydrac, Misac, and Abdenago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the offyces in the londe of Babilon: but Daniel himself remayned still in the courte by the kynge.

The.iii.Chapter.

¶ The thre chyldren wyl not worshyp the ymage, they be caste in the fyre, but God delyuereth them.

Nabuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden ymage to be made, which was .lx. cubytes hye, and sixe cubites thicke. This he made in

be set vp in the valley of Duran in the londe of Babylon and sente oute to gather together ÿ dukes, lordes, & nobles, the iudges, and officers, the debites and shreues, with all the rulers of the londe: that they might come to the dedicacion of the ymage, which Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, debytes and shreues with all the rulers of the londe gathered them together, and came vnto the dedicatynge of the ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Now when they stode before the ymage, which Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedel cried out with all his might: O ye people, kynreddes and tūges, to you be it sayde: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, which shalbe blowne, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all maner of musick: ye fall downe and worshippe the golden ymage, that Nabucho-

B donosor ÿ kynge hath set vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth himself, shal euen ÿ same houre be cast in to an hote burninge ouē. Therfore, when all the folke herde the noyse of ÿ trompettes that were blowne, with ÿ harpes, shawmes, psalteries symphonies and all kynde of melody, then all the people, kynreddes and nacions fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp. Now were ther certayne men of the Caldees, that went euen thē and accused the Jewes, and sayde vnto kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer Thou beynge kynge hast geuē a commaundement, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompettes harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies, and all the other melodies, shall fall downe and bowe them selues towarde the golden ymage: whoso then fell not downe and worshipped not, ÿ he shulde be cast in to an hote burnyng ouen. Nowe are ther certayne Jewes, * whom thou hast set ouer the Daui. 2. g. offices of the londe of Babilon: namely, Sydrac, Misac, and Abdenago. These men (o kynge) regarde not thy commaundement, yee they will not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden ymage, that thou hast set vp.

C Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruel wrath and displeasure, commaunded, that Sidrac Misac, & Abdenago shulde be brought vnto him. So these mē were brought before thē kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what? o Sidrac, Mysac & Abdenago, wyll not ye serue my goddes? nor bowe youre selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? wel, be redy herafter, when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowne with ÿ harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonyes and all the other melodies, that ye fall downe, and worshippe ÿ ymage which I haue made. But yf ye worshippe it not, ye shal be cast immediatly in to an hote burnynge ouen. Let se, what god is ther, that maye delyuer you out of my hondes. Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago answered the kynge, and sayde. O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consente vnto the in this matter, for why? oure God whom we serue * is Nu. 16. a able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) and can right well delyuer vs out of thy hondes. And though he wyll not, yet shalt thou knowe (o kynge) that we wyll not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to the ymage, which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor ful of indignacion, so that the countenaunce of D his face chaunged vpon Sidrac, Misac, and Abdenago. Therfore he charged and commaunded, that the ouen shulde be made seuen tymes hoter then it was wonte to be: and spake vnto ÿ strongest worthies that were in hys hoost, for to bynde Sidrac, Misac and Abdenago, and to cast them in to the hote burnynge ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cotes, hosen, shues, with their other garmentes, and cast in to the hote burnynge ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so strayte, and the ouen was exceadynge hote. As for the men that put in Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beynge fast bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge maruayled, and stode vp in al ÿ hast: he spake vnto his coūcel and sayde: Dyd not ye cast these thre men bounde in to the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kynge: Yee o kinge. He answered and sayde: Lo for al that E sayde: O Sydrac, Mysac, and Abde-nago, ye seruaũtes of the hye God: go forth, & come hyther. And so Sydrac, Mysac and Abdenago wēre out of the sayde, Blessed be the God of Sydrac,

The.iiii. Chapter.

¶ Another dreame expounded.

A I Nabuchodonosor beynge at rest in myne house, and florysshinge in my palace, sa we a dreame, which made me afrayed, & the thoughtes ẏ I had vpon my bed, & the visi-Dan.2.a ons of my heade, troubled me. * Thē sent I out a cõmission ẏ all they which wēre of wysdome at Babylon shulde be brought before me to tell me ẏ inter pretacion of the dreame. So ther came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees & coniurers of dyuels: to whom I tolde ẏ dreame, but what it betokened, they coulde not shewe me: tyll at ẏ last, ther came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar, accordynge to the name of my God) which hath ẏ sprete of ẏ holy goddes in him: to whom I tolde ẏ dreame, sayenge: O Balthasar, thou prynce of sothsayers: For so much as I knowe, that thou hast the sprete of ẏ holy goddes, & no secrete is hyd frõ the: tell me therfore, what the vision of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye sygnifie.

I sawe a vision in my heade vpon my bed, and beholde, ther stode a tre vpon the groũde, which was very hye, greate, and myghtie: the heyght reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extēded to al the endes of the earth, hys leaues were fayre, he had very muche frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therin. The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof.
Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vision vpon my bed, and beholde, a watcher (euen an holy ãgell) came downe from heauen, and cryed myghtely, sayenge: Hew downe ẏ tre, B breake of hys braunches, shake of his leaues and scattre hys frute abrode: ẏ all the beastes maye get thē awaye frõ vnder hym and ẏ foules from hys braunches. Neuertheles leaue the groũde of hys roote styl in the earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne felde, with cheyn-nes of yron and stele. With the dew of heauen shall he be wet, and he shall haue hys parte in the herbes of the groũde with other wild beastes. That mans harte of hys shall be taken from hym, and a beastes harte shal be geuen hym, till seuen yeares be come and gone vpon him. Thys sarande of the watcher, is a commaundement grounded and sought out in the counsell of hym, that is moost holy: to learne men for to vnderstõde, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of mē, and geueth thē, to whom it lyketh hym, and bringeth the very outcastes of mē ouer thē This is the dreame, that I kynge Na buchodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthasar, tel ẏ me what it signifieth for so much as all the wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the sprete of ẏ holy Goddes is in ẏ.

C Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) helde his peace by the space of an houre, and his thoughtes troubled hym. So the kynge spake, & sayd: O Balthasar, let nother ẏ dreame nor the interpretacyon therof feare the.
Balthasar answered, sayenge: O my Lorde, this dreame happen to thyne enemyes, & the interpretacyon to thyne aduersaries. As for the tre that thou sa west which was so great and myghty, whose heyght reached vnto the heauen & his bredth in to al the worlde, whose Nabuchodonosor.

So after.xii. monethes, the kynge walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babilon, and sayde: This is the greate cytie of Babilon, which I my selfe (with my power and strength) haue made a kynges courte, for the honoure of my maiesty. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, ther fell a voyce frō heauen, say enge: O kynge Nabuchodonosor, to ẏ parte from the, thou shalte be caste out thou shalte eate grasse lyke as an oxe, hyest hath power vpō the kyngdomes of men, and that he may geue them, vn to whom it pleaseth hym. The very same houre was this matter fulfylled vpō Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out of mens company, and dyd eat grasse lyke an oxe. His body was wet with the dew of heauen: tyll his heeres were as great as Aegles fethers, & his nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

When this tyme was past, I Na- E restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I and praysed hym that lyueth for euerdoest thou? * At the same tyme was Job.4[illegible] myne vnderstandyng geuen me agayn, and I was restored to the honoure of my kyngdome, to my dignite, & to myn prices sought vnto me, & I was set in greater worshippe. Thē dyd I Nabuthe kynge of heauen: for al his workes are true, and his wayes right. As for those that go on proudly, he is able to bringe them downe.

The.v.Chapter.

¶ Daniel readeth the wrytinge on the wall, and declareth it.

Balthasar the kynge made a greate banchet to his thou sande lordes: with all these thousande he made greate cheare, & when he was drō ken with wyne, he cōmaunded to brin ge him the golden and syluer vessel, Ba.16. which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kynge and his lordes (& his quene and cōcubynes) myght dryn ke therout. So they brought the goldē vessel, that was taken out of the temple of the LORDES house at Jerusalem. Then the kynge and his lordes with his quene and concubines dron-ke out of them. They dronke wyne & praysed theyr Idols of golde, syluer, copper, yron, woode, and stone.

In the very same houre ther appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans honde wrytynge, right ouer a-gaynst the candelsticke vpon the play-ne wall in the kinges palace and ÿ kyn ge sawe the palme of the honde ÿ wro te. Then chaunged ÿ kynge his coū tenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled him: so that the loyntes of his body shoke, and his knees smote one a gaynst the other. Wherfore the kynge cried mightely, that they shulde bryn ge him the charmers, Caldees and con-B iurers of deuels. The kynge spake also to the wyse mē of Babilon, & sayde: Dan.2.f Who so can rede this wrytinge, and shewe me the playne meanynge therof: shal be clothed with purple, haue a chey Psal.134. ne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kyngdome,

Upon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coulde nother reade the wrytinge, nor shewe ÿ kynge what Job.41. it signified. Then was the kynge sore afrayed, in so much, that his coloure chaunged, & his lordes were sore vexed.
So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kynge and his lordes, the quene went vp herself in to the bā ket house, and spake vnto the kynge, sayenge: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer: Let not thy thoughtes trouble ÿ, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged For why? ther is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the sprete of Dan.2.a ÿ holy goddes within him, as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vn-derstondinge and wysdome: lyke ÿ god des. Yee the kynge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of the soythsayers, charmers, Caldees and C deuelconiurers: because that such an a bundaunt sprete, knowlege, & wysdome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde dowtes) was founde in him: yee euen in Daniel, whom the kynge named Balthasar.
Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kynge. So ÿ kynge spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Art thou that Daniel, one of ÿ presoners of Juda, whō my father the kynge brought out of Jewry? I haue herde speake of the, ÿ thou hast the sprete of ÿ holy goddes, experience and vnderstondinge, and ÿ ther hath bene greate wisdome founde in the. Now haue ther bene brought me wyse & connynge charmers, to reade this wrytinge, and to shewe me the meanynge therof, But they coulde not tell me, what this matter signifyed.
Then herde I saye, that thou canst expounde darcke thinges, & declare har-de doutes. Well than, yf thou canst reade this wrytynge, and shewe me ÿ meanynge therof, thou shalt be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered, and sayde befo D re the kynge: As for thy rewardes, 4.Re.5.d. kepe them to thy self, or geue thy rych Mat.10.a giftes to another, yet not the lesse, I wyll reade the wrytinge vnto the kynge, and shewe him the interpretacion therof. O kynge, God the hyest gaue Dan.2.f. vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignite of a kynge, with worshippe & honour, so that all people, kynreddes & tunges stode in awe and feare of him, by reason of the hye estate, that he had lent him. For why? he slewe whom he wolde, he smote whom it pleased him.
Agayne whom he wolde he set vp, and whom he lyst, he put down. But be- Dan.4.d cause his harte was so proude, and his stomacke set fast vnto wylfulnesse, he was deposed from his kyngly trone, & his maiesty was taken from hym. He was shote out from amonge men, his harte was lyke a beastes hart, and his dwellynge was with the wylde asses: he was fayne to eat grasse lyke an oxe, and his body was wet with the dew of the heauen, tyll he knewe that the hyest had power vpon the kingdomes of mē and setteth ouer them, whom he lyst.

C And thou his sonne (O Balthasar) for all this, hast not submitted thyne hart, though thou knowest al these thinges: but hast magnifyed thy selfe aboue the LORDE of heauen, so that the vessels of his house were broughte before the, that thou, and thy lordes, with thy quene and concubynes, myght drynke wyne therout: And hast praysed the Idols of syluer and golde, copper & yrõ, of wood and stone, whiche can nother se, nor heare, nor vnderstande. As for the God * in whose honde consysteth thy breth and all thy wayes, thou haste not praysed hym. Therfore is ẏ palme of this hande sent hyther from hym, to token vp this wrytynge. And this is ẏ scripture, that is wrytten vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacyon of the thynge is this: Mane, God hath nõbred thy kyngdome, & brought it to an ende: Thetel, Thou art weyed in the balaũce, and art foũde to lyght: Phares, Thy kyngdom is dealt in partes, & geuen to the Medes & Perses.

Actu.17.d

Then commaunded Balthasar, to cloth Daniel with purple, to hange a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and to make a proclamacyon concernynge hym, that he shulde be the ruler of the thyrde parte of his kyngdome. * The very same nyghte was Balthasar the kynge of the Caldees slayne, and ‡ Darius out of Media toke in the kyngdome beynge .lxii. yeare of age.

The .vi. Chapter.

C Daniel is cast in the Lyons denne.

A IT pleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdome an .C. and .xx. lordes, which shuld be in all his kyngdome aboute. Aboue these he set thre prynces (of whõ Daniel was one) that the lordes myght geue accomptes vnto them, and the kinge to be vndisceased. But Daniel exceaded all these princes and lordes, for the sprete of God was plenteous in hym: so ẏ the kynge was mynded to set him ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the prynces and lordes sought, to pike out in Daniel some quarel agaynst ẏ kyngdome, yet coulde they fynde none occasyon nor faute vpon him. For why? he was so faythful that ther was no blame nor dishonesty founde in hym.

Then sayde these men, we shall get no quarel agaynst this Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of his God. Vpõ this wente the prynces and lordes together vnto the kynge, and sayde thus vnto hym:

Kynge Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. B Al ẏ great estates of ẏ realme, as the prynces, dukes, senatours & iudges, are determined to put out a commaundement of the kynge, and to make a sure statute, namely, that who so desyreth ony peticyon, other of ony God or mã (within this thyrty dayes) excepte it be onely of the, O kynge, the same person maye be cast in to the Lyons denne. Wherfore, o kinge, cõfirme thou this statute, and make a wrytinge: that the thynge which the Medes and Perses haue ordened, be not altered nor broken. So Darius made the wrytynge, and confirmed it. Now whan Daniel vnderstode that the wrytynge was made, he wente in to his house: & the wyndowes of his hall towarde Ierusalem stode open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a daye: there made he his peticyon, and praysed his God, lyke as his maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these men made search, and founde Daniel makynge his peticyon, C and prayenge vnto his God. So they came to the kynge, & spake before hym concernynge his commaundement, sayenge: O kyng, hast thou not subscribed the statute, that within .xxx. dayes who so requyreth his peticyon of ony God or man but onely of thy selfe, o kynge: he shalbe cast in to the denne of the Lyons? The kynge answered & sayd, yee, it is true. It muste be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken. Then answered they, and sayd vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the presoners of Iuda (o kynge) regardeth nother the, nor thy statute, that thou hast made, but maketh his peticyon thre tymes a daye. When the kynge herde these wordes, he was sore greued, and wolde haue excused Daniel, to delyuer hym, and put of the matter, vnto the Sonne went downe, to the intent that he myght saue hym. These men perceyuynge the kynges mynde, sayde vnto hym: knowe this (o kynge) that ẏ lawe of the Medes and Perses is, that the commaundement and statute which ẏ kynge maketh, maye not be altered.

* Then the kynge bad them brynge D Daniel, and they cast hym in to the Ly vns denne. The kynge also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Thy God, whome thou alwaye seruest, euen he shall defende the. And ther was brought a stone, and layed vpon the hole of the denne: this ye kynge sealed with his owne rynge, and with the signet of his pryn ces, that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel, shulde not be bro ken. So the kynge wente in to his palace, and kepte him sober all night, so ye ther was no table spred before him, nother could he take eny slepe. But bytymes in mornyng at ye breake of ye day, ye kynge arose, and wente in all hayst vn to the denne of the Lyons. Now as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a petious voyce vnto Daniel: Yee the kynge spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel thou seruaũt of the lyuyng God, Is not thy God (whome thou alwaye seruest) able to delyuer ye from the lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: O king, God saue thy lyfe foreuer.

C Then was the kynge excedinge glad, and commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, and no maner of hurte was founde vpō him. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, the kynge commaunded to bringe thẽ,

C The vision of the foure beastes.

IN the first yeare of Baltha A sar kinge of Babilon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a vision was in his heade vpõ his bedde. Which dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake, and sayde: I sawe in my vision by night, and beholde, the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and foure greate beastes came vp from the see, one vnlyke another.
The first was as a * lyon, and yet Jer.4.a.b had he ‡ aegles wynges. I sawe, that Ezech.1.b.

Beholde, the seconde beast was he had .iii. greate longe teth, and it was sayde vnto him: Arise eate vp

Then I loked, and beholde, ther was another like vnto a Leoparde: this had wynges as a foule, * euẽ fou Dan.8.b. heades, and ther was power geuen 1.Ma.1.a night, and beholde, ye fourth beast was grimme and horrible, and maruaylous stronge. It had greate yron teth, it de-uoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder fete. It was farre vnlyke ye other beastes that were before it: for it had * ten hornes, wherof I toke Apoc.13.a good hede. and.17.c.

And beholde, ther came vp among them another lyke horne, before whõ ther were thre of ye fyrst hornes pluckt awaye. Beholde, this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakinge pre sumptuous thinges.
* I loked till the seates were pre Apo.1.c. pared, & till ye olde aged sat him down. 4.a.20.b.
His clothig was as white as snowe, & Dan.10.a and his wheles as the burnynge fyre.

wente out from him * A thousand ty- Apo.5.b.

Then toke I hede there vnto, because I sawe in a vision by nyghte, and be-that stode by, to knowe the treuth, cõme, and made me vnderstõde the interpretation of these thynges.

These foure greate beastes, are foure kynges which shall aryse out of the earth. These shall take in the kyng dome of the sayntes of the moost hyest, and possesse it still more, and more for a longe season. After thys I required dilygently to knowe the treuth, concernynge the fourth beast, which was so farre vnlyke the other beastes, and so horryble: whose teth were of yron, and hys nayles of brasse: whych deuoured and destroyed, & stãped the resydue vn der hys fete. I desyred also to knowe Apoc.13.a the treuth, as touchynge the, * ten hor thys other which came vp afterwarde, before whose face ther fell downe thre: which horne had eyes and a mouth ẏ whith a grymmer vysage then hys fe-made battayl agaynst the sayntes, yee and gat the victory of them: vntill the tyme, that the olde aged came, that the iudgment was geuen to ẏ chefest sayn-tes, and till the tyme, that the sayntes had the kyngdome in possession.

D He gaue me thys answere: That fourth beast shalbe ẏ fourth kyngdom kyngdomes, it shall deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other londes.

that shall aryse out of that kyngdome, ment shalbe kepte, so that hys power shalbe taken from hym: for he shalbe destroyed, and perysh at the last. As for the kyngdome, power and all might ẏ

¶ Of the ramme and the goate.

IN the thyrde yeare of the A raygne of kynge Balthasar, ther appeared a vision vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the * fyrst. I Dani.7.a sawe in a vision, (and when I sawe it I was at Susis in ẏ chefe cytie, which lyeth in the londe of * Elam) and in ẏ Jere.49.f vision, me thought I was by the ry- Eze.32.d uer of Vlay. Then I loked vp, and sawe, and beholde ther stode before the ryuer a ramme, which had hornes, and these hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, and the hyest came vp laste. I sawe that thys ramme pusshed wich hys hornes agaynst ẏ south agaynst the north, & agaynste the west, so that no beastes might stonde before hym, nor defende them frõ his power: but he dyd as hym lysted, and waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto thys, and thẽ came ther an hegoate frõ ẏ west, ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde. Thys goate had a maruay-lous goodly horne betwixte hys eyes, and came vnto the ramme, that hadde the two hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpon hym with hys myght. I saw hym drawe nye vnto the rãme, beynge very fearce vpõ hym yee he gaue hym such a stroke, ẏ he brake his.ii.hornes, Nother had the rãme so much strẽgth as to stãde before hym:but he cast hym downe,trode hym vnder his fete, and no man was able to delyuer the rãme out of his power. The goate waxed ex B ceadynge great,and when he was at ÿ strongest,his great horne was broken also. Then grewe ther * other foure Dani.7.d such lyke in the steade, toward ÿ foure Dani.11.d wyndes of the heauen. Yee out of the 1.Mac.1.a least of these hornes, ther came vp yet another horne, which waxed maruay-lous great:towarde the south,toward the east,and toward the fayre pleasaũt lande.It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, & trode them vnder fete.Yee it grewe vp vnto the prynce of the hoost, frõ whõ the dayly offerynge was taken,and the place of his Sanctuarye casten downe And a certayne season was geuen vnto it,agaynste the daylye offerynge(because of wyckednes)that it myght cast downe the verite to the grounde, and so to prospere in all thynges, ÿ it went aboute. Upon this I herde one of the sayntes speakynge, which saynt sayde vnto one that axed this question:How longe shall this vision of the dayly sacrifice and of the waystynge abhomy-nacyon endure, that the sanctuary and the power shal so be trodẽ vnder fote?

And he answered hym: Unto the euenynge,& the mornynge,euen two thou sande and thre hũdreth dayes:thẽ shall the Sanctuary be clensed agayne.
C Now when I Daniel had sene this vision, and sought for the vnderstan-dynge of it: beholde, ther stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the ryuer of U-lay,which cryed,and sayd:O Gabriel, make this man vnderstande the visiõ.
So he came,and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his commynge,and fel downe vpon my face. Then sayd he vn to me: O thou sonne of man,marcke well,for in the last tyme shall this vision be fulfylled. Now as he was speakynge vnto me, I waxed faynte, so ÿ I sancke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me,and set me vp a gayne,sayenge:Beholde, I wyll shewe the what shall happẽ in the last wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe ful fylled. The ramme which thou sawest with ÿ ii.hornes,is the kinge of ÿ Me des and Perses: but the goate is the kynge of Grekelande:the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes,that is the pryncypall kynge, But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the steade:it signifieth,that out of this peo ple shall stande vp * foure kyngdomes but not so myghtye as it. 1.Mac.1.a After these kyngdomes(whyle vngodlynesse is agrowynge)ther shall a- D ryse a kynge of an vnshamefaste face, which shalbe wyse in darcke speakynges. He shalbe myghty and stronge,but not in his owne strength. He shall destroy aboue measure,and all that he go eth aboute,shall prospere: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And tho-row his craftynesse,falshede shall prospere in his hãde,his hart shalbe proud and many one shall he put to death in his welthynesse. He shall stande vp a-gaynst the prynce of prynces, * but he 2.Mac.9.a shalbe destroyed without hande. And 2.Tess.2.b this vision that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenynge and the mor-nynge. * Therfore wryte thou vp this syght; for it wylbe longe or it come to Esay.8.b passe. Upon this was I Daniel verye faynte,so ÿ I laye syck certayn dayes, but whan I rose vp, I wente aboute the kynges busynesse, and maruayled at the vysyon, neuerthelesse no man knewe of it.

The.ix.Chapter.

The prophecye of the seuentye we-kes and of Christ.

IN the fyrst yeare of Dari- A us the sonne of Ahasuerus * which was of the sede of Dani.5.e the Medes,and was made kynge ouer the realme of ÿ Caldees: Yee euen in the fyrst yeare of his reygne, I Daniel desyred to knowe the yearly nombre oute of the bokes, wherof the LORDE spake vnto * Je Jere.25.b remy the prophete:that Jerusalẽ shuld and,29.b lye waiste.lxx.yeares: and I turned me vnto God the LORDE,for to praye, and make myn intercession,& fastyng, sackcloth,and ashes. I prayed before the LORDE my God, and know-leged,sayenge:
* O LORDE, thou greate,and 2.Esd.1.a fearfull God, thou that kepest coue- and,9.e. naũt and mercy with them which loue the,and do thy commaundementes:
* We haue synned, we haue offended: Baru.1.d. we haue ben disobediẽt & gone backe, yee we haue departed from all thy pre-ceptes and iudgementes. We wolde ne uer folowe thy seruauntes the prophetes, that spake in thy name to our kynges and prynces, to our forefathers, & Tren.1.d to al y people of the lande. *O LOR-DE, righteousnesse belongeth vnto y, vnto vs pertayneth nothynge but opē shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Ierusalem. Yee vnto all Israell, whether they be farre or nye: thorowe out all landes, wherin y haste strowed them, because of the offences that they had done agaynst the. Yee O B LORDE, vnto vs, to our kynges, & prynces, to our forefathers, euen to vs Psa.105.a all, *that haue offended the, belongeth open shame: But vnto the LORDE our God, pertayneth mercy and forge-uenesse. As for vs, we are gone backe frō hym, and haue not obeyed y voyce of the LORDE oure God, to walke 2.Pet.1.d in his lawes, * whiche he layed before Zacha.7.b vs by his seruauntes the prophetes: yee all Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not herkened vnto thy voyce.

Deu.27.28 Wherfore the curse & oth, * that Leui.26. is wrytten in the lawe of Moses y ser uaunt of God (against whom we haue Baruc.2.a offended) is poured vpon vs. *And he hath perfourmed his wordes, which he spake agaynst vs and agaynst our iud ges that iudged vs, to brynge vpon vs such a great plage, as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as it is now come to passe in Ierusalem. Yee all this plage, as it is wrytten in y law of Moses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not our prayer before the LORD oure God, that we myght turne agayne from our wicked nesse, and to be learned in thy verite.
Therfore hath the LORDE made haist, to brynge this plage vpon vs: for the LORD our God is ryghteous, in al his workes which he doth: for why?
C we wolde not herken vnto his voyce.
Baru.2.b. *And now, o LORDE our god, Iero.12.13 ‡thou that with a myghty hande hast and.14. brought thy people out of Egipte, to get thyselfe a name, which remayneth this daye: we haue synned (o LORD) and done wyckedly against al thy righ teousnesse: yet let thy wrothfull displea sure be turned away (I beseke the) frō thy cytie Ierusalem thy holy hyll. And why? for oure synnes sake, and for the wyckednesse of oure forefathers, is Ie rusalem and thy people abhorred, of al them that are aboute vs. Now therfore (O oure God) heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and his intercession: O let thy face shyne ouer thy sanctuary, y lyeth wayst. O my God, enclyne thyne eare, and herken (at the least for thyne owne sake) opē thyne eyes, beholde how we be desolate, yee and the cytie also, which is called after thy name. For we do not cast oure prayers before the in our owne ryghteousnesse, no, but on ly in the great mercyes: O LORDE, heare: O forgeue LORDE: O LOR DE consydre, tary not ouerlonge: but for thyne owne sake do it, O my God, for thy cytie and thy people, that is cal led after thy name.
As I was yet speakynge & prayed, D knowlegynge myne owne synnes and the synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercession before the LORD my God, for the holy hyls sake of my God: whyle I was yet speaking in my prayer, beholde, y man Gabriel (*who I had sene afore in the vision) came fly enge to me, and touched me aboute the offerynge tyme in the euenynge. He infourmed me, & spake vnto me: O Daniel (sayd he) I am now come, to make the vnderstande it: For as soone as y beganest to make thy prayer, it was so deuysed & therfore am I come to shew the. And why? *for thou art a man greatly beloued.
Wherfore, pondre the matter wel that thou mayest learne, to vnderstāde the vision. lxx. wekes are determined ouer thy people, and ouer thy holy cytie that the wyckednes may be consumed, that the synne may haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconcyled, and to brynge in euerlastynge righteousnesse, to fulfyll the visions and y prophetes, and to anoynte the moost holyone. E Vnderstande this then, and marke it well: that from the tyme it shalbe cō-cluded, *to go and repayre Ierusalē a gayne, vnto Christe (or the anoynted) prynce, ther shalbe seuen wekes. Then shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne. lxii. wekes, but with hard trou blous tyme. After these. lxii. wekes shal Christ be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in hym. Then shall ther come a people with the prynce, and destroye the cytie and the sanctuarye, and hys ende shall come as the water floude.
But the desolacyon shall contynue tyll the ende of the battayll. He shall make a stronge bonde with many, for ÿ space of a weke: and when the weke is half gone, the shal put downe the slayn and Mat.24.b meatofferinge. * And in the temple Mar.13.b ther shalbe an abhominable desolatiõ, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this waystinge shall continue vnto the ende.

The.x. Chapter.

¶ Another vysion shewed to Daniel.

B IN ÿ thyrde yeare of kynge Cirus of Persia, ther was shewed vnto Daniel (other wyse called Balthasar) a matter, yet a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He D vnderstode the matter wel, and percea ued what the vysion was. At the same tyme, I Daniell mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I hadde no luste to eate breade: as for fleshe Dani.9 and wyne, ther came none within my and 12 mouthe. No I dyd not once anoynte my selfe, tyll the whole thre wekes were oute.

Upon the .xxiiii. daye of the first moneth I was by the greate floude, cal Dani.7.b led Tigris. * I lift vp myne eyes, and Apo.1.c loked, and beholde a man clothed in lynnyn, whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Arabia: hys body Dan. was lyke the Chrysolyte stone, his face (to loke vpõ) was lyke lightenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre, hys armes and fete were lyke fayre glysterynge B metall, but the voyce of his wordes Dani.12.a was lyke the voyce of a multitude. * I Ap.9.a Daniel alone sawe this vysion, & the men that were with me, sawe it not:
but a greate fearfulnesse fell vpon thẽ, C so that they fled awaye, and hyd them selues. I was left there my self alone, and sawe this greate vysion, so longe tyll ther remayned nomore strength within me: Yee I lost my colour clene, 1.Pa. I waysted awaye, and my strength 1.Esd. was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of his wordes: and as soone as I herde it, fayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my fa ce. And beholde, an hande touched me, which set me vp vpon my knees and vpon the palmes of my hondes, say-Dan.9.b. enge vnto me: * O Daniel, thou wel-beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stonde right vp, for vnto ÿ am I now sente. And when he hadde sayde these wordes, I stode vp tremblinge. Then sayde he vnto me: Feare not Daniel, for why? sence the first daye that thou set thyne harte to vnderstonde, and dyddeste chasten thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde.
And I hadde come vnto the, whan thou begannest to speake, hadde not the prynce ouer the kyngdome of the Perses withstonde me .xxi. dayes.
But lo, * Michaell one of the chefe Josue.5.B prynces, came to helpe me, hym haue I Dan.12.a lefte by the kynge of Persia, and am come to shewe the, what shall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes: for it wyll be longe yet or the vysyon be fulfyll.
Now when he had spoken these C wordes vnto me, I cast downe my heade to the grounde & helde my tung.
Beholde, ther touched my lippes one, very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto him, that stode before me: O my lorde my loyn-tes are lowsed in the vysion, and ther is nomore strength within me, How maye my lordes seruaunt then talke with my lorde seynge ther is no strẽgth in me, so that I can not take my brethe?
Upon this ther touched me agayne, one much lyke a man, * and conforted Dani.9.B me, sayenge: O thou man so wel beloued, feare not, be content, take a good harte vnto the, and stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recouered, and sayde: Speake on my lorde, for thou haste refreshed me. Then sayd he, knowest thou wherfor I am com vnto the? now wyll I go agayne to fight with the prynce of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the prynce of Grekelonde shall come. Neuertheles I wyll shewe the ÿ thinge, that is fast noted in the scripture of treuth. And as for al yonder matters, ther is none that helpeth me in them, but Michael youre prynce.

The.xi. Chapter.

¶ Certayne reuelacions of thynges for to come.

AND in ÿ first yeare of Da- A rius of Media, I stode by him, to conforte him, and to strength him, and now, wyll I shewe the ÿ treuth.
Beholde, ther shall stond vp yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourth shall be farre rycher then they al. And whan he is in the chefeste power of hys ryches, he shal prouoke euery mã against Dan.7.a. and.8.b the realme of Grekelonde. * Thẽ shal ther aryse yet a myghtye kynge, that shall rule wyth greate dominyon, and 1 Mac.1.a do what hym lysteth. * And as soone as hys kyngdome commeth vp, it shal be destroyed, and deuyded toward the foure wyndes of the heauẽ. They that come after hym, shall not haue suche power and dominyon as he, but hys kyngdome shall be scattred: yee euen amonge other then those. And ŷ kynge of the south shal be myghtyer, then his other prynces. Agaynste hym ther shal one make hymselfe stronge, and he shal rule his domynion wyth great power.

But after certayne yeares they shall be ioyned together, and the kynges doughter of the southe shall come to the kynge of the northe, for to make frendeshyppe: but she shall no optayne the power of that arme, nother shall she be able to endure thorowe hys myghte, but she, and suche as brought her (yee and he that begat her, and comforted her for hys tyme) shall be delyue B red vp. Oute of the braunches of hyr roote, ther shall one stonde vppe in his steade, whiche wyth power of armes shall go thorowe the kynges londe of the north, and handle hym accordynge to hys strengthe. As for theyre Idols and prynces, wyth theyre costly iewels of golde and syluer, he shal carye them awaye captyues in to Egypte, and he shall preuayle agaynste the kyng of the north certayne yeares. And whan he is come in to the kynges realme of the south, he shall be fayne to turne agayn in to hys owne londe. Wherfore hys sonnes shall be dyspleased, and shal ga ther together a myghtye greate hooste of people, and one of them shall come, and go thorowe lyke a water floude: then shal he returne, and go forth with defyenge, and boastynge vnto his own londe.

Then the kynge of the south shal be angrye, and shal come forth to fight agaynste the kyng of the north: Yee he shall brynge a greate multytude of peo ple together, and a greate heape shalbe geuen in to hys hande: these shall he ca rye awaye wyth greate pryde: for so muche as he hathe caste downe so many thousandes, neuertheles he shal not preuayle. For the kynge of the northe shall gather (of ŷ new) a greater heape of people then afore, and come forthe (after a certayne tym & yeares) with a myghty hoost & exceading great good.

At the same tyme ther shall many C stonde vp agaynste the king of ŷ south so that the wycked chyldren of thy peo ple also shall exalte themselues (to ful-fyll the vysyon) and then fall. So the kynge of the northe shall come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fensed cy-ties. And the power of them of ŷ south shall not be able to abyde hym, and the beste men of the people shall not be so stronge as to resyste hym. Shortlye, whan he commeth, he shall handle hym as he lyst and no man shall be so hardy as to stand agaynst him. He shal stand in the pleasaunte contrye, whiche tho-rowe hym shall be destroyed. He shall set hys face wyth all hys power to op-tayne hys kyngdome, and to be like it.
Yee that shall he do, and geue hym vnto the doughters amonge women, to destroye him. But he shal fayle, nother shal he optayn hys purpose. After thys shall he set hys face vnto the Iles, and take many of them. A prynce shall stop hym, to do hym a shame, besyde the con fusyon that els shall come vnto hym.
Thus shal he turne agayn to his own londe, stomble, and fall, and be nemore founde: so he that came vpon him, and dydde hym violence, shall stonde in his place, and haue a pleasaunte kingdom and after fewe dayes he shall be destroyed, and that nother in wrathe nor in battayll. In hys steade ther shall a- D ryse a vyle personne not holden worthy of a kynges dignyte, this shal com in craftelye, and optayne the kyngdom wyth fayre wordes, he shall fyghte a-gaynste the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yee and agaynste the prynce of the conuenaunte.

So after that he hath taken truce wyth hym, he shall handle deceatfully, that he maye get vppe, and ouercome hym wyth a small flocke: and so wyth craftynesse to gette hym to the fatteste place of the londe, and to deale otherwyse, then ether hys fathers or grãd fathers dydde. For he shal destroye the thynge, that they hadde robbed and spoyled, yee and all theyr substaunce, ymagenynge thoughtes agaynste the stronge holdes, & that for a tyme. Hys power and harte shall be steared vppe wyth a greate armye agaynste ẏ kyng of the southe, wherethorowe ẏ kynge of the southe shall then be moued vnto battayll, wyth a greate and myghtye hooste also. Neuerthelesse, he shall not be able to stond, for they shall conspyre agaynste hym: Yee they that eate of hys meate, shall hurte hym, so that hys hooste shall fall and manye be slayne downe.

These two kynges shall be mynded to do myschefe, & talke of deceate at one table: but they shal not prospere for why? the ende shall not come yet, 1.Mac.5.a vnto the tyme appoynted. * Then shall he go home agayne in to his own londe wyth greate good, & set his hart agaynste the holye conuenaunte, he shall be busye agaynste it, and then returne home. At the tyme appoynted he shal come agayne, and go towarde the south: So shall it happen otherwyse then at the fyrste, or the seconde tyme.
Nu.24.d And why? * The shyppes of Cythim shall come vpon hym, that he maye be smytten and turne agayn, that he may take indygnacyon agaynste the conue-naunte of holynesse, to medle agaynste it. Yee he shall turne hym, and drawe suche vnto hym, as leaue the holy con-E uenaunte.

He shall sette myghtye men to vn-halowe the sanctuarye of strengthe, to putte downe the daylye offerynge, and to sette vppe the abhominable desolacyon. And suche as breake the conue-naunte, shal he flattre wyth fayre wor-des. But the people that wyll knowe theyr God, shall haue the ouerhande and prospere. Those all that haue vnderstandynge amonge the people, shall enfourme the multytude: & for a longe season, they shall be persecuted wyth swearde, wyth fyre, wyth captyuyte, and wyth the takynge awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe whan they fall, they shall be sette vppe wyth a lytle helpe, but many shall cleue vnto them fayned lye. Yee some of those which haue vnderstondynge, shall be persecuted also that they maye be tryed, puryfyed, and clensed, tyll the tyme be oute: for ther is yet another tyme appoynted. The 2.Tes.2.a kynge shall do what hym lyste, * he shall exalte and magnifye hymselfe a-gaynste all, that is God. Yee he shall speake marueylous thynges agaynste Apo.13.a the God of all Goddes, wherin he shal prospere, so longe tyll the * wrath be fulfylled, for the conclusyon is deuised alreadye. He shall not regarde the God of hys fathers, but hys luste shal be vpon women: Yee he shall not care for ony God, for he shall magnifye hymselfe aboue all. In hys place shall he worshyppe the myghty Idols, and the God whome hys fathers knewe not, shall he honoure wyth golde and syluer, wyth precyous stones and pleasaunte Jewels.

Thys shall he do, sekynge helpe F and succour at the myghtye Idols and straung goddes. Such as wyl receaue hym, and take hym for God, he shall geue them greate worshyppe and power: yee and make them Lordes of ẏ mul-tytude, and geue them the londe wyth rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kynge of the southe stryue wyth hym and the kynge of the north in lyke maner shall come agaynst hym with cha-rettes, horsmen and wyth a greate na-uy of shyppes. He shall come in to the londes, destroy and go thorow: he shal entre also in to ẏ fayre pleasaunt lond.
Manye cytyes, and contryes shall decaye * excepte Edom, Moab and the Apo.13.b beste of the chylderen of Ammō, which shall escape from hys hande. He shall stretche forth hys handes vpon the cōtryes, and the londe of Egypte shall not escape hym. For thorow his going in, he shall haue dominiō ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer all the precyous Jewels of Egypte, Ly-bia, and Ethiopia. * Neuerthelesse Apoc.11.b the tydynges oute of the easte and the north shall trouble hym, for the which cause he shall go forth to destroye and curse a greate multytude. The tentes of hys place shall he pytche betwyxte the two sees, vppon the hyll of the noble Sanctuarye, for he shall come to Apoc.19.b the ende of it, * and then shall no man and.20.a helpe hym.

The.xii.Chapter.

¶ Visyons shewed to Daniell agayn, whereof some be of the delyueraunce oute of the captyuyte of Babylō, some of the destruccyon of Jerusalem, some concernynge the latter dayes.

The tym wyl come also, that A the greate prynce Michael, Apoc.19.a which stondeth on thy peoples syde shall aryse vppe, for * ther shal come a tyme Mat.24.b of trouble, such as neuer was sene ther beganne to be onye people, vnto that same tyme. Then shall thy people be de lyuered : yee all those that be founde Joh.5.c wrytten in the boke. * Manye of them 1.Cor.15.c that slepe in the duste of the earth shall awake: some to euerlastynge lyfe, some Sapi.13.b to perpetual shame, and reprofe. * The Mat.13.e. wyse (suche as haue taught other) shal glyster, as the shynynge of heauen: and those that haue instruct the multytude vnto godlynesse, shall be as the starres worlde wythoute ende.

B And thou o Daniell, shutte vppe these wordes and seale the boke, tyll ẏ laste tyme. Manye shall go aboute here and there, and then shall knowlege in crease. So I Daniell loked, & beholde, ther stode other two, one vppon thys shore of the water, the other vpon yon der syde. And one of them sayde vnto hym, which was clothed in lynnyne, & stode aboue vppon the waters of the floude: How longe shall it be to ẏ ende Apoc.10.a of these wonderous workes? * Then herde I the man wyth the lynnyne clothes, which stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude, whan he helde vppe hys ryghte and lefte hande vnto heauen, and sware by hym which lyueth 11.c for euer, * that it shall tarye for a tyme d two tymes, and halfe a tyme: and whã the power of the holye people is clene scattered abrode, then shall al these thin ges be fulfylled.

I herde it well, but I vnderstode C it not. Then sayd I: O my Lorde what, shall happen after that? He answered: Go thy waye Daniell, for these wor-des shall be closed vppe and sealed, tyll the laste tyme: and manye shall be pu-ryfyed, clensed, and tryed. But the vn-Mat.13.b godlye shall lyue wyckedlye, * & those wycked (as manye of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstondynge: as for suche as haue vnderstondynge, they shall regarde it. And from that tyme forth the daylye offerynge shall be put downe and the abhominable desolacy-on sette vppe, ther shal be a thousand, Mat.10.c two hundreth and .xc. dayes. * O well and.24.a is hym, that wayteth, and commeth to the thousande thre hundreth and fyue and thyrtye dayes. Go than thy waye nowe, tyll it be ended take thy reste, and byde in thy lot, tyl ẏ dayes haue an ende.

¶ The ende of the prophet Daniell.

The prophete Oseas.

The fyrst Chapter.

¶ God refuseth the Jewes, and ma-rieth hymselfe to the Gentyles.

¶ Thys is the worde of the LOR-DE, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beeri, * in the dayes of Osias, Jo- 4.Re.15 tham, Achas, and Ezechias kynges of 15.16.17 Juda, and in the tyme of Jeroboam ẏ sonne of Joas kynge of Israell.

Fyrst, whan ẏ LOR A DE spake vnto O-seas, he sayde vnto hym * Go thy waye Leui.21.b take an harlotte to Ezec.44.d thy wyfe, & get chyldren by her: for ẏ lond hath cõmitted greate whoredõ agaynst the LORDE. So he wente, and toke Gomer the dough-ter of Deblaim: which conceaued, and broughte forth a sonne. And the LOR DE sayde vnto hym: Call hys name Jesraell, for I wyll shortlye * auenge 4.Re.10 the bloude of Jesrael vpon the house 17.18.a of Jehu, and wyl brynge the kyngdom 23.re.a of the house of Israell to an ende. Then wyll I breake the bowe of Israell, in the valleye of Jesraell.

She conceaued yet agayne, and B

A When Israel was yonge, I Exod.3.b and.6.b. loued hym: * and called my Mat.2.c. son out of ÿ lāde of Egipt.
But ÿ more they were cal= led, ÿ more they wēt back: Exo.32.b. * offeryng vnto Idols, & cēsynge yma 3.Re.12.c. ges. I learned Ephraim to go, & bare 4.Re.16.c them in myn armes, but they regarded not me, that wolde haue helped them.
I led them with coardes of frendship, and with bondes of loue. I was euen he, that layed the yocke vpon theyr nec kes. * I gaue thē theyr foode my selfe, Exod,16.c that they shulde not go agayne in to E gipte: And now is Assur theyr kynge: For they wold not turn vnto me. Ther fore shall the sweard begyn in theyr cy= ties, the stoare that they haue trusted vnto, shalbe destroyed and eaten vp: & ÿ because of theyr owne ymaginaciōs.
B My people hath no luste to turne Esa.10.a vnto me, * theyr prophetes laye ÿ yock and.28.b. vppon them but they ease them not of Mat.23.b theyr burthen. What great thynges Luke.11.d. haue I geuē the Ephraim? how fayth fully haue I defended the, O Israel?
Gene.19.e haue I dealt with the as with * Ada= Deu,29.d. ma? or haue I intreated the lyke Sebo im? No, my hart is otherwise minded, Yee my mercye is to feruent: therfore haue I not turned me to destroye E= phraim in my wrothfull displeasure.
For I am God and no man, I am euē ÿ holy one in the myddest of ÿ, though I cam not within the cytie. The LOR DE roareth lyke a Lyō that they may Apoc.5.a folowe hym: Yee as a * Lyon roareth he, that they maye be afrayed, lyke the chyldrē of the see: that they may be scat tred away from Egipte, as men scarre byrdes: and frayed away (as doues vse to be) from the Assirians lande: & that because I wolde haue thē tary at home sayeth the LORDE. But Ephraim goeth about me with lyes, and ÿ house of Israel dissembleth. Onely Juda hol deth hym with God, and with the true holy thynges.

The.xii.Chapter.

¶ God sheweth thē theyr vnfayhful= nesse, to se yf he can so turne them, EPhraim kepeth the ayre, & A foloweth after ÿ eastwind: he is euer increasynge lyes and destruccyon. They be confederate with the Assy= riās, * theyr oyle is caried in to Egipt. 4.Re.16 The LORDE hath a court to holde Esa.57. with Juda, and wyll punysh Jacob.

After theyr owne wayes & accordynge to theyr owne inuencyons, shall he re= compence them. * He toke his brother Gen.25 by the hele, when he was yet in his mo thers wōbe: & in his strength he wrest= led with God. * He stroue with ÿ an= Gene.32 gel, and gat the victory: so that he pray ed and desyred hym. He fande hym * at Gen.35 Bethel, and there he talked with vs.
Yee the LORDE God of hoostes, e= uen the LORDE hymselfe remēbred him: Then turne to thy God, kepe mer cy and equyte, and hope styll in ÿ God.
But the marchaunt hath a false weyght in his hande, he hath a pleasur B to occuppe extorcyon, Ephraim thyn= keth thus: * Tush, I am ryche, I haue Apoc.3 good ynough: In all my workes shall not one faute be foūde, that I haue of fended. Yet am I the LORDE thy God, euen as when I brought the out of the lande of Egipte, and set ÿ in thy tentes, and as in the hye feast dayes.
I haue spoken thorow the prophetes, and shewed dyuerse vysions, and decla red my selfe by the mynistracyon of the prophetes. But at Galaad is the abho minacyon, they are fallen to vanite.
At Galgall they haue slayne oxen: * & Deu.12 as many heapes of stones as they had. and.14 in theyr lāde forowes, so many aulters haue they made. Jacob fled in to ÿ lāde of * Siria, & Israel serued for a wyfe: Gene.28 and for a wyfe he kepte shepe. By a pro phete the LORDE brought thē oute of Egipte, and by a prophete he preser= ued thē. But Ephraim hath prouoked hym to displeasure thorowe his abho= minacyons: therfore shal his bloude be poured vpon hymselfe, and the LOR= DE his God shall rewarde hym hys blasphemyes.

The.xiii.Chapter.

¶ He sheweth thē their wyckednesse, and punyshment for the same.

A The abhominatiō of Ephra is gone backe to Baal, ther they synne more and more:

dinge they preache of the same: who so wyll kysse the calues, offreth to men.
Therfore they shalbe as the mornynge cloude, and as ye dew that early passeth awaye: and lyke as dust that the wyn= de taketh awaye from the floore, and Exo.20.a as smoke that goeth out of ye chymney * I am ye LORDE thy God, which brought the out of the londe of Egipte that thou shuldest know no God but Esa.43.b me onely, and that thou shuldest haue

I be vnto them as a lyon, and as a leo= parde in the waye to the Assirians. I will come vpon them as a shebeer, that is robbed of hir whelpes, and I will breake that stubburne harte of theyrs.
There will I deuoure them as a lyon: yee the wylde beastes shall teare them. b.12.a * O Israell, thou doeste but de= stroye thy self. In me only is thy helpe.
Where are thy kynges now, ye shulde me a kyng and prynces? well, I gaue the a kynge in my wrath; and in my dis pleasure wyl I take hym frō ye agyne.

C The wyckednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and his synne lyeth hyd. Therfore shall sorowes come vpō hym, as vpō a woman that trauayleth An vndiscrete sonne is he: for he consy able to haue endured in the tyme of his byrth, had not I defended him from ye graue, and delyuered him from death.

1.Co.15.f * O death, I will be thy death: o hel, ch.2.b. I wyll by thy stynge. Yet can I se no comforte, for when he is now the good lyest amonge ye brethren, the east wynd (euē the wynde of the LORDE) shall come downe from the wyldernesse and drye vp hys condytes, and drynke vp hys welles: he shall spoyle the treasure of all pleasaunt vessels. * As for Sa= 4.re.17.a maria, she shalbe made waist, & why? they are disobedient vnto theyr God.
They shall perysh with the swearde, theyr chyldren shalbe slayne, and theyr womē bygge wt chylde shalbe ryppe vp.

¶ He cryeth and exorteth the people to conuerte, promysynge swetely and louyngly to receaue them.

Turne the now (O Israell) A vnto the LORDE thy Jere.18.a God ‡ for thou hast taken Ezec.18.e a greate fall thorowe thy and .33.e wyckednesse. Take these ‡3.Re.12.a wordes with you, when ye turne to ye LORDE, and saye vnto hym: O for bullockes of our lippes vnto the. Assur Heb.13.c the workes of our hondes, we will no= vnto the fatherlesse.

O (yf they wolde do thys) I shuld heale their sores: yee wyth all my harte wolde I loue them: so that my wrath shulde clene be turned awaye from thē.
Yee I wolde be vnto Israel as ye dew, and he shulde growe as the lylie, and hys roote shulde breake out as Lyba= vnder hys shadow, shulde come agayn and growe vp as the corne, and florish as the vyne: he shulde haue as good a name, as the wyne of Lybanus. O E= phraim, what haue I to do wt Idols o ny more: I wyll graciously heare him, and lede hym forth. I wyll be vnto the as a grene fyrretre, vpon me shalt thou fynde thy frute. * Who so is wyse, Jere.9.b shall vnderstande this: and he that is ryght instructe, wyll regarde it. * For Psa.17.c the wayes of the LORDE are ryght=
